Chamberlain Hopes Horror Of War Will Compel Peace

Blames 'Poisonous Propaganda' for Keeping Alive Flames of Hatred

Chamberlain Speaks

By the Associated Press

London, July 31.—Prime Minister Chamberlain today painted a gloomy picture of the world situation but said he believed the vision of war horrors was sinking into the minds of rulers and people alike, and for this reason he hoped "we may yet find a way to escape from this nightmare."

Presenting the most comprehensive statement he had made on international questions in two months, the Prime Minister asserted:

"One must admit that the situation in which the accumulation of weapons of war is going on on so many sides and at such a pace is one which can not but be regarded with anxiety.

"It is difficult to see what the solution of this problem can be unless it is to be resolved by war itself."

'Poisonous Propaganda' Regretted

He expressed the belief, however, that if the campaign of "poisonous propaganda" could be halted and the confidence of the people restored "in the peaceful intentions of all statesmen in Europe," the world's problems might then be ironed out by peaceful discussion.

Speaking during foreign affairs debate in the House of Commons, he expressed concern over anti-British agitation in North China and said that if this continued it would be difficult to bring British-Japanese negotiations in Tokyo to a successful conclusion.

Chamberlain said his government felt "no undue concern" over the Danzig situation but that it would require careful watching.

He announced that Britain and France would send a joint military mission — probably this week — to Moscow to start staff talks with Soviet Russia in the hope that such a move would help remove difficulties holding up the proposed British-French-Soviet Russian mutual assistance pact.

"Indirect Aggression" Blocks

The chief obstacle in the way of an agreement, he explained, was inability of the three powers to agree on the definition of "indirect aggression." He added however that Soviet Premier-Foreign Commissar Molotoff had expressed the belief their difficulties were not "insuperable."

"Although the three governments realize that indirect aggression may be just as dangerous as direct aggression," he said, "all desire to find a satisfactory method to provide against aggression and at the same are extremely anxious to have it not appear that they are desirous of en-

D. C. Girl Flown, Maine to Boston, For Appendectomy

Bangor, Me., July 31 (AP).—Stricken with appendicitis, Miss Emily French-Myers, of Washington, Bar Harbor summer visitor, was rushed to Boston tonight in a chartered transport plane, but only after several hours of delay caused by fog.

Mrs. Marion French-Myers, in Boston herself for medical treatment, chartered the plane for the hop to Bangor.

The daughter arrived at the Bangor airport by automobile almost as the plane droned overhead, trying to find a hole in fog that shrouded the airport.

Unable to do so, the plane landed at Waterville, where Miss French-Myers was taken by automobile. There she was transferred to the plane, which immediately took off for Boston.

Waterville is 40 miles from Bangor and almost 75 miles from Bar Harbor, summer resort where Miss French-Myers had been at a hotel since early July. Her mother had been there part of that time.

Train Bandits Routed in Gun Battle; $56,000 Pay Roll Saved

Mail Crew Shoots and Captures One Desperado; Second Leaps From Speeding Rail Car, Flees With Confederate in Auto

By the Associated Press

Champaign, Ill., July 31.—A pair of bandits, operating in the swashbuckling style of Jesse James, attempted to seize a $56,000 Army pay roll on a speeding train today but were routed in a gun battle with the mail car crew.

A shot broke one robber's leg and he was captured.

His companion, believed wounded, escaped in an automobile driven by a confederate.

State highway police immediately formed a road blockade in east central Illinois in an effort to intercept the fugitive and his chauffeur.

Earl Boothman, railroad mail clerk, gave this account of the foray:

The bandits, both clad in overalls, boarded the "blinds" of local 31, a four-car passenger train of the Illinois Central Railroad bound from Chicago to Champaign, at Onarga, Ill., 83 miles south of Chicago.

As the train pulled out, they entered the combination mail-baggage

Judges Cayton, Ellen Raedy Reappointed

Aukam Also Likely to Be Named Again Unless Retirement Bill Passes

President Roosevelt yesterday sent to the Senate for confirmation the names of Judges Nathan Cayton and Ellen K. Raedy, of Municipal Court, for reappointment.

At the same time it was learned that the Municipal Court presiding judge, George C. Aukam, will be reappointed unless legislation extending retirement benefits to Municipal Court judges is passed by the present session of Congress. The House Judiciary Committee held its last meeting yesterday without taking up the bill.

Judge Aukam, who has been largely responsible for building up the Municipal Court in his 32 years' service, is 67 years old. Despite the steady growth of the court, Judge Aukam has prided himself on keeping the docket current.

Judge Cayton, who has been on the bench since 1928, was chiefly responsible for establishment of the small claims court that now handles informally small litigation.

Judge Cayton was a judge at 28. Born and reared in Washington, he received his degree from National University in 1918 when barely 20 and entered practice in 1921. He was appointed to the Municipal bench by President Coolidge in 1927 and reappointed by Presidents Hoover and Roosevelt.

Judge Raedy is a native Washingtonian and a graduate of the District public schools. She received her legal training at National University Law School. Graduated in 1928, she was admitted to the bar in the same year and entered practice with her brother, Michael L. Raedy. She was appointed July 9, 1935.

Confirmation of both reappointments is expected this week.

Soviet Rooster Really Had Right To Crow—Loud

Moscow, July 31 (AP).—The heroic statue of a Soviet rooster whose female descendants are laying more than 300,000 eggs annually will be one of the sights at the all-union agricultural exhibition opening tomorrow in Moscow.

Since this is something any rooster should crow about, the 6-foot statue has been equipped with a voice faithfully reproducing the original's own cock-a-doodle-doo.

Resettlement Urged in Great Lakes Region

President Offers Broad Program to Conserve Resources

Relocation of part of the population of the cut-over timber region of northern Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota was recommended by the National Resources Committee in a report submitted to Congress yesterday by President Roosevelt.

The report outlined a comprehensive program for rehabilitation of the region, which embraces an area about 1½ times the size of the New England States and contains a population of approximately 1,500,000.

Loans Suggested

"Settlers on lands unsuited to agriculture or otherwise so located as to involve high public-service costs," the committee said, "should be assisted in relocating on lands better adapted to agriculture or more advantageously situated with respect to possible employment, schools, roads and other public services."

Other recommendations included capital loans to farmers on good land for development purposes, conditioned on each borrower agreeing to carry out an approved farming plan, large-scale reforestation programs; improvement of the country's lakes, streams and recreational facilities; "rational development" of the mining industry; development of co-operative marketing, and elimination of uneconomic" units in local government.

Mr. Roosevelt, in submitting the report, said "exploitation of our resources has created many problems, but none more pressing than in those areas . . . where a basic resource has been mismanaged and the principal industry has moved or waned, leaving the working population stranded."

Bombay Takes a Last Fling As Dry Law Closes 8,500 Bars

By the Associated Press.

Bombay (Tuesday), Aug. 1.—An expanded police force cleared Bombay's 8,500 bars and liquor shops early today to inaugurate the first new prohibition law since repeal in the United States.

As midnight struck the date of enforcement, agents with report books immediately took inventories of the stocks of all liquor establishments and sealed them for excise officers who will cart them to government warehouses.

Widespread drunkenness, especially in the mill areas, greeted prohibition, but there were almost no disturbances since police quietly whisked away those who got too enthusiastic.

For the natives of Bombay and suburbs it was prohibition; for Americans, Englishmen and other Europeans it was rationing.

These latter celebrated by crowding clubs and a big dance at the exclusive Yacht Club, where champagne was served at midnight. They sang "Auld Lang Syne."

Rationing for non-Indians means seven bottles of whisky a month. Each adult is allowed seven units, a unit being one bottle of whisky, three bottles of wine or nine of beer.

The police commissioner said no trouble was expected until later today "when it will suddenly dawn on the Indians that there is no more liquor." He said the government was mistaken in ordering a general holiday for today.

The government decree was issued last February 14, as a step in Mohandas K. Gandhi's campaign for national prohibition.

10 Additional Playspots Open This Week

Will Function Under Reorganized District Recreation Setup

Ten additional playgrounds will be opened to the city's children tomorrow or Thursday, the District Recreation Board announced yesterday following a meeting approving a reorganized District recreation set-up.

Four or five more play areas will soon be put into operation under the direction of supervisors supplied by the WPA, it was indicated.

The new recreation organization will be headed by four assistant directors and one director of community center activities, all reporting to District Recreation Director Lewis R. Barrett, it was announced. Present personnel below the assistant directors, it was stated, will continue to staff the projects until September 15, with no changes in salary.

Not counting those playgrounds to be opened with the assistance of personnel from the WPA rolls, a

Two Marines Held in Norfolk Hotel Slaying

Norfolk, Va., July 31 (AP).—Two young enlisted men attached to the Marine Corps unit aboard the Aircraft Carrier Ranger were charged tonight with the week-old hotel-room slaying of F. T. Jennings, 49-year-old Augusta, Ga., salesman.

Warrants named William E. Miller and Lawrence M. King as the two wanted. The Marines were being detained aboard ship tonight.

Murder charges were filed after J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, reported latent fingerprints found in the room where Jennings was bludgeoned with beer bottles and a pitcher were identified from Marine Corps records as those of King and Miller.

Hit by 2 Trains, Walker on Bridge Escapes With Life

Paul Braxton, 34, colored, of Lawrenceville, Va., escaped serious injury yesterday when he was caught between two passenger trains as he walked across the railroad bridge.

Braxton was found lying between the tracks near the middle of the bridge after he is believed to have been struck by both a Southern Railway and Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac passenger trains that crossed the span simultaneously from opposite directions.

CIO Rioters Besiege 230 In Auto Plant

46 Hurt in Day's Clashes at Cleveland; Workers Held for Night in Factory

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, July 31.—Thousands of strikers, sympathizers and spectators milled about General Motors' huge Fisher Body plant here tonight where more than 200 workers were besieged following rioting which sent 46 persons to hospitals.

Anthony Peterson, chief of company police, said that over 200 non-strikers trickled out of the plant, one by one, during the night and that about 230 remained inside.

The situation was tense following Safety Director Eliot Ness' order to clear the area within 500 yards surrounding the plant by 3 a. m.

Ness issued a proclamation prohibiting "riotous assembly or mass formation" and ordered pickets limited to five at each gate.

At midnight the crowd dwindled to less than 1,000 and unionists said there would be no serious physical resistance to police orders.

Officials of the C. I. O. United Automobile Workers who called the strike, protested bitterly against Ness' orders and prepared to contest them in court tomorrow.

150 Police on Constant Guard

Ness ordered 150 police on constant guard about the huge seven-story modern brick plant which covers a 40-acre area equal to several city blocks in Cleveland's East Side industrial district.

Food supplies were taken into the factory tonight in a mail truck.

Pickets said those who come out of the plant were "mostly office and maintenance workers and we don't care much about them." They expressed determination to "keep this plant closed. Strikes have been under way in ten other General Motors plants.

Brig. Gen. Ludwig S. Conelly of the Ohio National Guard appeared as an observer, but Mayor Harold H. Burton emphasized that no request for State troops was contemplated.

Auto Windows Smashed

The company filed in common pleas court a suit asking limitation of picketing, and a ban on violence. Hearing was set for tomorrow.

A police-estimated 5,000 to 6,000 unionists and sympathizers, wearing papier-mache helmets, overturned non-strikers' automobiles and fought with about 100 policemen as the factory reopened this morning after a week-end shutdown.

A new clash occurred late today in full view of Ness and Mayor Burton, inspecting the turbulent strike scene. Mounted police charged the picket line to clear the way for a company car. A brief melee followed, the crowd smashing windows of the automobile with a shower of rocks. Three men were arrested amid boos and catcalls directed at Burton and Ness.

Tear gas clung thickly over the strike area this morning and fire hoses were turned on the crowd before the fighting ended.

Police Capt. Michael J. Blackwell estimated about 300 tear gas shells and grenades were discharged.

Hatch Bill Kept President Too Busy To Hook a Marlin

President Roosevelt did not catch a marlin during his week-end cruise in the Atlantic off Ocean City, Md., Stephen T. Early, White House secretary, made clear yesterday.

First reports, which came from Capt. Crawford Savage, who helped set tackle on the Presidential yacht, were that the President had caught a 70-pound marlin. But these reports apparently confused the President with the entire party.

Early awarded to Secretary of Commerce Hopkins the honor of snagging the biggest marlin—a 65-pounder. Rear Admiral Ross T. McIntyre, the President's physician, hooked one weighing 52 pounds, and Brig. Gen. Edwin M. Watson, one of the President's secretaries, a 45-pounder.

The President might have caught a marlin, Early explained, but he held a line less than an hour, putting in a large part of the time studying the Hatch bill prohibiting "pernicious political activities."

Gable Overpowers Housebreaker, 18

Van Nuys, Calif., July 31 (AP).—Clark Gable, he-man of the screen, overpowered and disarmed an 18-year-old youth who entered his home today.

The youth was William J. Broski, a Polish transient. Police reported only that Gable "overpowered the suspect and held him until we arrived."

Modified Retirement Bill Enacted

Plan for Enlarged Voluntary Payments, Pensions for Heirs Sent to President

The Senate yesterday adopted the conference report on civil service retirement act amendments and sent the legislation to the White House for the President's signatures.

While stripped of its major liberalization provisions, the Neely-Ramspeck bill permits Government employes to invest up to 10 per cent of their salaries voluntarily in additional annuities.

It also allows civil service workers to withhold part of their pensions for payment to heirs upon death and extends from 90 days to one year the period which a disabled employe may remain on the retirement list after recovery while waiting for restoration to active rolls.

A. F. L. Unions Blamed

Luther C. Steward, president of the National Federation of Federal Employes and legislative chairman of the Council on Federal Employe Organizations, laid the blame yesterday for loss of the more important amendments to employe organizations affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

"In view of the very natural disappointment because of the destruction of their hopes for the enactment of a satisfactory retirement bill at this session of Congress," he said, "there is considerable curiosity as to just what influences were responsible for emasculation of the bill."

The National Federation of Federal Employes and the National Legislative Council, he continued, supported the principles of the House bill "from start to finish" and are on record indorsing the 5 per cent contribution for lower, optional retirement benefits."

William Green, president of the A. F. of L., wrote Chairman Ramspeck, of the House Civil Service Committee, Steward added, that the employe organizations affiliated with the A. F. of L. stood for a 4 per cent employe contribution.

"The record is clear that throughout the long history of retirement legislation some organizations have reneged," he said. "It has been done every time retirement legislation has been before Congress."

The House, while still holding up the Ramspeck civil service extension bill, yesterday turned its attention briefly to Government employe legislation, but long enough to cut the auto mileage allowance for Federal workers from 5 to 4 cents a mile.

Rees, McCormack Debate

Representative Taber (Republican), of New York, proposed the reduction unexpectedly while the House was considering a bill to alter the language of the travel allowance act so that it might apply to any "privately owned" auto used by the employe.

Taber, who prides himself on being "a watchdog of the Treasury," said that members of Congress are allowed 4 cents a mile for travel expenses.

Representative Rees (Republican), of Kansas, and Representative McCormack (Democrat), of Massachusetts, exchanged a few sharp words over the Ramspeck civil service bill.

Rees blasted away at the measure for not providing for open competitive examinations, while McCormack pointed out that the Republicans, when in power, also "blanketed" Government employes into the merit system.

Senate Passes Loan Bill, Cut In Half, 52 to 28

House Approves 244 Bills in Day

The House yesterday passed and sent to the Senate 244 bills out of nearly 400 it considered, which Speaker Bankhead announced was "an all-time record for a single day's session."

Representative Rich (Republican), of Pennsylvania, asked the Speaker if any member of the House knew "how much this record-breaking number of bills is going to cost the taxpayers."

House Majority Leader Rayburn answered:

"The bills were passed by unanimous consent, and the gentleman from Pennsylvania could have stopped them by uttering one word, 'Object!' "

Pennsylvanian House Leader Favors McNutt

Splits With Guffey on 3d Term; Jones About to Join Garner, Is Report

The chairman of the Democratic Pennsylvania delegation in the House yesterday issued an unqualified indorsement of Paul V. McNutt, Federal Security Administrator, for the party's 1940 presidential nomination, thereby taking issue with Senator Guffey, of the same State, who has insistently called for a third term for President Roosevelt.

Vice President Garner, himself energetically though quietly in the race for the nomination, helped to entertain McNutt at a Capitol Hill luncheon at which were present New Dealers, middle-of-the-roaders and anti-New Dealers.

Senator Minton Host

And in another apparent tangling of political lines, friends of Garner were reported counting confidently on support, both financial and moral, for the Vice President from Jesse Jones, close friend of the President, by whom he recently was appointed Federal Loan Administrator.

The luncheon was given by Senator Minton (Democrat), of Indiana, one of the chief sponsors of McNutt, who insists he is a candidate only on condition President Roosevelt doesn't run again. Garner presented the security administrator with a photostatic copy of President Roosevelt's nomination of McNutt to his present post.

At the luncheon, also, were Senators Guffey; Smathers, of New Jersey; Wheeler, Montana; Herring, Iowa; Hatch, New Mexico; Connally, Texas; Harrison, Mississippi; Bankhead, Alabama; Clark and Truman, Missouri; Van Nuys, Indiana; Neely, West Virginia; Schwellenbach, Washington; Byrnes, South Carolina, and Lucas, Illinois.

Jones Support Expected

Representative Walters, chairman of the Pennsylvania House delegation, called President Roosevelt the outstanding man of the hour but said, "I feel quite certain that President Roosevelt will not seek a third term."

McNutt, he contended, has the qualifications for a presidential nominee. He predicted McNutt

Police Offer Free Parking At Disputed Municipal Lot

District motorists who drive to work in the Municipal Center area today will see the contradictory spectacle of policemen urging them to park their cars free for as long as they choose, in a parking lot.

The happy situation from the drivers' viewpoint, however, is only the silver lining to a cloud of dispute involving the District Government and the former lessee of the parking lot bounded by Pennsylvania avenue, Indiana avenue and John Marshall place northwest.

The contract of the lessee, Sam Lovenbein, expired at midnight last night. The new proprietors, the Grand Plaza Parking Areas, Inc., which offered a higher rental for the coming 12 months than did Lovenbein, have not occupied the lot yet, since their contract will not be signed by District officials until the former operator has relinquished possession. This Lovenbein has indicated he will not do, pending disposition of a suit he filed recently in District Court enjoining the District from evicting him.

The Commissioners yesterday ordered Superintendent of Police Brown to have his men distribute mimeographed handbills to motorists driving onto the lot, advising them not to pay any parking fees.

According to Assistant Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West, Lovenbein's bid for the lot for the coming year was a payment of $1,400 monthly. The Grand Plaza concern's offer was $2,256. Lovenbein, however, West said, has not paid rent to the District's agent, the H. L. Rust Co., for the last two months.

According to West, Lovenbein has asserted that the law forbids the District to exact more than a fair rental for its property, and that his present contract represents more than a fair price.

House Right of Way Given Measure Now Little More Than a Farm Relief Plan

Housing and Security

HOUSE LEADERS were reported planning to attach the strongly opposed $800,000,000 Housing Authority bill to the lending measure when the latter reaches the floor today. Page 2.

SENATOR CONNALLY said there would be no social security amendments bill unless House conferees accepted his amendment for a two-thirds Federal contribution on old-age assistance payments. Page 2.

Lending Bill's Progress

By Robert C. Albright

The Senate late yesterday passed the President's emasculated lending bill after slashing loan authorizations in half, converting the bill essentially into a farm relief measure and binding it around with a maze of restrictions.

The final vote was 52 to 28. As sent to the House, the bill had been cut to $1,615,000,000 from an original $2,800,000,000, highway and railroad loans had been torn from the measure and export-import funds had been shorn $25,000,000 with rigid limitations on foreign loans.

Passage came as the House Rules Committee, by a 8 to 4 vote, approved right of way in the House today for a companion measure already trimmed by the House Banking Committee to a total of $1,950,000,000.

Opens Adjournment Door

Climaxing five days of day and night sessions and a series of Administration defeats, passage twisted the Senate's last key to adjournment and laid the controversial lend measure on the House doorstep for final disposal.

Another parting blow was dealt the program as it was sped on its way, when the Senate voted 44 to 37, to subject to State and Federal taxation bonds to be issued by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to finance the program.

Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, offered the amendment and quoted the President as favoring a tax on the issues. But it passed over the vigorous opposition of Majority Leader Barkley, who said the President had been misinterpreted, and declared taxes would place the new bonds in a disadvantageous position as against State and other Federal issues.

Barkley Forestalls Taft

Earlier, Senator Barkley himself moved to trim new Export-Import Bank funds from $100,000,000 to $75,000,000, successfully heading off a deeper cut proposed by Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio. Taft sought to slash the foreign loan fund to $25,000,000.

Barkley's less drastic substitute was approved by a 44 to 34 vote. As a further concession to the foreign loan opposition, it stipulated that loans would be made only to facilitate exports and required that all sums loaned in Latin America or elsewhere must be spent in this country.

No Senate effort was made to recommit the riddled measure. Only 11 Democrats joined with 17 Republicans against it on final passage, while 47 Democrats, 2 Republicans, 1 Independent, 1 Progressive and 1 Farmer-Laborite voted "aye."

$1,880,000,000 For Farmers

In its modified form, the bill makes $600,000,000 RFC borrowed funds available for loans to farm tenants and for farm rehabilitation $500,000,000 in loans for rural electrification, $90,000,000 for loans on reclamation projects, $350,000,000 for non-Federal public works and $75,000,000 for the Export-Import bank to finance foreign trade.

Actually, $612,000,000 in addition would be made available to farmers through the Wheeler-La Follette

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

TWO YEARS IN THE CAPITAL

This week ends my second year in the Capital. I have been here as long as a one-term Congressman. Seven Cabinet members have called me by my first name, and I can recognize 91 Senators from the rear. The other five have faces that men forget. I have chatted with all four of the G. O. P.'s 1940 hopefuls, and one of them looks wounded when he sees me.

Harlan Miller

None of the bigshots here are as bad as they're painted, when you get to know them; but they seldom get to know each other. Martin Dies and Tommy Corcoran would enjoy each other's conversation at lunch, but they never have.

I have lunched with both, and find them by no means wicked; both are intense patriots.

Behind the innocent phraseology of a resolution quietly dropped into the Senate hopper by Senator Gillette, of Iowa, yesterday, lurk possibly the greatest sensation and uproar of 1939.

The resolution merely calls for a $15,000 Senate inquiry by a special committee of five Senators into the United States Government's foreign loans.

However, charges have been laid before Senator Gillette, as well as before two of his colleagues on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, that two men very high in Government circles were approached by producers of war materials to use their influence in the placing of foreign orders to be paid for from these Government loans.

In spite of the seriousness of the information which led to Gillette's resolution, neither he nor his two colleagues expect action at this session, because of impending early adjournment. The special committee would be named by Vice President Garner.

Senator Taft (for example) has probably never met Benjamin Victor Cohen, and it is unlikely that Secretary Ickes has ever broken bread with Senator Bridges.

But there are startling points of resemblance between Senator Taft and Mr. Cohen, and Ickes and Bridges have so much in common that they could become bosom companions. They like to imagine each other as implacable enemies.

"—are Senators prima donnas?"

All the jokes about Congress, after two years of inquiry, have proved true, and also false.

If you filled the House of Representatives with 435 Bernard Shaws or George Santayanas the effect would still be comical, exactly as 435 Hollywood beauties in one room would be ludicrous rather than soul stirring, and precisely as 435 statues from the Hall of Fame massed together would resemble 435 tin soldiers.

• • • •

No Senator or Representative, viewed singly over a T-bone steak, is utterly negligible or stupid, as no Hollywood starlet is totally negligible over a dish of lobster newburg.

The members are, in fact, amazingly charming fellows.

I have often mused in the press galleries why certain gentlemen who resemble Hollywood characters or comic types were chosen by their constituents as the Inevitable One.

After two years, I am almost ready to thank God there are no supermen in Congress, and very few in Washington. The mentality of Congress is approximately the mentality of the membership of the leading golf club in a town of 100,000. Maybe that's good enough.

"—in bunches they're comical"

One of the Capital's popular myths is that the Senators are a bunch of prima donnas.

After two years of observation, I conclude that this is only partially true. They are prima donnas part of the time, especially when inflamed by thoughts of "the man in the White House," whose peer every Senator believes himself to be.

• • • •

The prima donna emotion is partly engendered by the envious suspicion that "the man in the White House" is a prima donna; it is a flareup of artistic temperament, fanned by partisan politics and personal ambition, and often forgetful of the fact that a President elected by 27,000,000 votes cannot (though perhaps he should) consult on every action with Senators elected by perhaps 100,000 votes.

• • • •

Of the scores of conclusions I have reached (and usually forgotten) in these two years, at this moment two come vividly to mind.

One is that Washington officials should spend less time with their own cronies and more time getting acquainted with opposition and factional leaders.

The other is that the imperishable thirst for re-election is the cankering sore in our representative government, and that we can't have better Government until re-election is made impossible for most officials—especially the ones who have the power of the purse.

Lending Bill Given House Right-of-Way

Bill to Double USHA Loan Capacity May Be Shelved in Rush

Badly and buffeted and slashed in the Banking and Currency Committee, the Administration's $1,950,000,000 lending bill yesterday received right of way to the floor of the House.

The measure, widely differing from the one passed late in the day by the Senate, will be taken up in the House today in place of another Administration bill doubling the loan capacity of the United State Housing Authority.

Shoved aside twice in four days, the housing bill appeared to be losing ground in chances for passage this session. Already approved by the Senate, the measure would add another $800,000,000 to the loan authorization of USHA, including $200,000,000 for rural housing, and provide total subsidies of $73,000,000.

Might Shelve Bill

Facing a harder fight than the general lending bill, the USHA bill is now scheduled to be called up in the House not before Thursday. Some observers felt that in the adjournment rush the leadership might prefer to shelve the bill rather than risk defeat or damaging amendments.

One influential Democrat observed yesterday that "no matter when the housing bill comes out, we'll lick the livin' daylights out of it."

International News Service last night reported a secret agreement by House leaders to have the housing bill attached to the lending measure as an amendment.

Otherwise, it was held likely that proposed changes in the wage-hour act might take precedence over the housing bill. A minor wage-hour defeat was suffered yesterday by the Administration when Chairman Norton refrained from asking for special privilege for a set of amendments to the wage-hour law approved by the Administration.

Six Hours of Debate

Contrary to her original plans Mrs. Norton failed to ask the House to take up the amendments, because she had been informed by Speaker Bankhead that it would be impossible to obtain the necessary two-thirds vote. Consequently, the House will now have the opportunity of debating much more extensive wage-hour amendments which are anthema to the Administration.

In permitting the huge "self-liquidating" loan bil lto be called up in the House, the Rules Committee yesterday allowed a total of six hours of debate, just half the amount asked by Representative Wolcott, of Michigan, ranking minority member of the Banking Committee and leading opponent of the bill.

Marked by frequent jests between members of the committee and witnesses, yesterday's two-hour hearing brought out accusations that the bill is "a chaet and a fraud," and "a subterfuge to raise money outside the debt limit."

On the other hand, Chairman Steagall, of hte Banking Committee, warmly defended the measure, and said that the Government stood an excellent chance of recovering its loans.

President Calls Schools' Congress To Aid Democracy

The President has expressed a hope that from the Congress on Education for Democracy, to be held at Teachers College, Columbia University, this month, will "grow more and more effective methods of bringing to pass our cherished ideals of democracy."

The sentiment was expressed in a letter to William F. Russell, chairman of the congress, which, during its sessions, August 15 to 17, will seek to fix education's responsibility for defense and advance of democracy.

"Education for democracy cannot merely be taken for granted. What goes on in the schools every hour of the day, on the playground and in the classroom, whether reflecting methods of control by the teacher, or opportunities for self-expression by the pupils, must be checked against the fact that the children are growing up to live in a democracy. That the schools make worthy citizens is the most important responsibility placed upon them," the President wrote.

Final Session Slated Today on Fair Trade Bill

The Senate District Comittee will hold its final session today to consider the Tydings fair trade practices bill although its sponsors do not plan to ask for Senate approval this session because of the threat of a Presidential veto.

Chairman King, who also plans to call up any other local legislation that may be passed by Congress before adjournment, will oppose the fair trades bill. Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, has indicated he has sufficient votes to have the measure reported favorably.

Thirteen District bills are due to be acted on today when the Senate takes up the unanimous consent calendar.

One Cent a Day Brings $100 a Month

Over One Million Six Hundred Thousand Dollars in cash benefits have already been paid to one-cent-a-day policyholders by National Protective Insurance Co., the oldest and largest company of its kind.

Their new policy pays maximum Principal Sum benefits of $4,000, increasing to $6,000. Maximum monthly benefits of $100 are payable up to 24 months. Connally Fears for Security Bill if Amendment Is Rejected

Conferees Must Accept Demand for Two-Thirds Federal Contribution to First $15 of Old Age Assistance Pay, He Says

Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, yesterday predicted "there will be no social security bill this session" unless House conferees accept his amendment providing a two-thirds Federal contribution toward the first $15 of State old-age assistance payments.

House and Senate conferees will make another effort to agree today after a 10-day deadlock on the Connally amendment opposed by Chairman Doughton, of the House conferees, with Administration backing.

Meanwhile, it was learned that Senate backers of the Connally plan will not accept an alternative proposal to speed through a separate resolution this session "freezing" social security taxes at 1½ per cent each on worker and employer for three years.

This is a highly important provision of the Administration bill, and a majority of the Senate conferees oppose its separate consideration. If independent action is attempted, a point of order is expected to be raised in the Senate. If that fails, the entire social security bill as passed by the Senate would be offered as a rider.

Bill Passed to Cushion Philippine Industries

Under rules suspension, the House yesterday passed an Administration measure to "cushion" Philippine industries against serious economic suffering as result of the forthcoming independence of the islands. The measure provides for gradual increase in duties on certain Philippine products exported to this country after independence becomes effective in 1946.

Deficiency Tax Assesments Rise To $197,798,731

The United States Treasury reported yesterday that deficiency tax assessments totaling $197,798,731 were levied in the fiscal year which ended June 30.

The deficiency assessments were made after investigation of the original income tax returns filed by taxpayers. The total was the highest since 1931.

Altogether the Treasury investigated 490,673 income tax returns in the year, or 10 per cent more than in the preceding year.

Settling up of old income tax cases was speeded up, however. The number of cases closed was 241,042, an increase of 13 per cent over the previous year.

The tax deficiencies assessed in the closed cases were 16 per cent larged than in those closed the previous year.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

TWO YEARS IN THE CAPITAL

This week ends my second year in the Capital. I have been here as long as a one-term Congressman. Seven Cabinet members have called me by my first name, and I can recognize 91 Senators from the rear. The other five have faces that men forget. I have chatted with all four of the G. O. P.'s 1940 hopefuls, and one of them looks wounded when he sees me.

* * * *

None of the bigshots here are as bad as they're painted, when you get to know them; but they seldom get to know each other. Martin Dies and Tommy Corcoran would enjoy each other's conversation at lunch, but they never have.

I have lunched with both, and find them by no means wicked; both are intense patriots.

Behind the innocent phraseology of a resolution quietly dropped into the Senate hopper by Senator Gillette, of Iowa, yesterday, lurk possibly the greatest sensation and uproar of 1939.

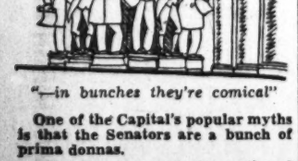
The resolution merely calls for a $15,000 Senate inquiry by a special committee of five Senators into the United States Government's foreign loans.

However, charges have been laid before Senator Gillette, as well as before two of his colleagues on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, that two men very high in Government circles were approached by producers of war materials to use their influence in the placing of foreign orders to be paid for from these Government loans.

In spite of the seriousness of the information which led to Gillette's resolution, neither he nor his two colleagues expect action at this session, because of impending early adjournment. The special committee would be named by Vice President Garner.

Senator Taft (for example) has probably never met Benjamin Victor Cohen, and it is unlikely that Secretary Ickes has ever broken bread with Senator Bridges.

But there are startling points of resemblance between Senator Taft and Mr. Cohen, and Ickes and Bridges have so much in common that they could become bosom companions. They like to imagine each other as implacable enemies.



"—are Senators prima donnas?"

All the jokes about Congress, after two years of inquiry, have proved true, and also false.

If you filled the House of Representatives with 435 Bernard Shaws or George Santayanas the effect would still be comical, exactly as 435 Hollywood beauties in one room would be ludicrous rather than soul stirring, and precisely as 435 statues from the Hall of Fame massed together would resemble 435 tin soldiers.

* * * *

No Senator or Representative, viewed singly over a T-bone steak, is utterly negligible or stupid, as no Hollywood starlet is totally negligible over a dish of lobster newburg.

The members are, in fact, amazingly charming fellows.

I have often mused in the press galleries why certain gentlemen who resemble Hollywood characters or comic types were chosen by their constituents as the Inevitable One.

After two years, I am almost ready to thank God there are no supermen in Congress, and very few in Washington. The mentality of Congress is approximately the mentality of the membership of the leading golf club in a town of 100,000. Maybe that's good enough.

One of the Capital's popular myths is that the Senators are a bunch of prima donnas.

After two years of observation, I conclude that this is only partially true. They are prima donnas part of the time, especially when inflamed by thoughts of "the man in the White House," whose peer every Senator believes himself to be.

* * * *

The prima donna emotion is partly engendered by the envious suspicion that "the man in the White House" is a prima donna; it is a flareup of artistic temperament, fanned by partisan politics and personal ambition, and often forgetful of the fact that a President elected by 27,000,000 votes cannot (though perhaps he should) consult on every action with Senators elected by perhaps 100,000 votes.

* * * *

Of the scores of conclusions I have reached (and usually forgotten) in these two years, at this moment two come vividly to mind.

One is that Washington officials should spend less time with their own cronies and more time getting acquainted with opposition and factional leaders.

The other is that the imperishable thirst for re-election is the cankering sore in our representative government, and that we can't have better Government until re-election is made impossible for most officials—especially the ones who have the power of the purse.

Lending Bill Given House Right-of-Way

Bill to Double USHA Loan Capacity May Be Shelved in Rush

Badly and buffeted and slashed in the Banking and Currency Committee, the Administration's $1,950,000,000 lending bill yesterday received right of way to the floor of the House.

The measure, widely differing from the one passed late in the day by the Senate, will be taken up in the House today in place of another Administration bill doubling the loan capacity of the United State Housing Authority.

Shoved aside twice in four days, the housing bill appeared to be losing ground in chances for passage this session. Already approved by the Senate, the measure would add another $800,000,000 to the loan authorization of USHA, including $200,000,000 for rural housing, and provide total subsidies of $73,000,000.

Might Shelve Bill

Facing a harder fight than the general lending bill, the USHA bill is now scheduled to be called up in the House not before Thursday. Some observers felt that in the adjournment rush the leadership might prefer to shelve the bill rather than risk defeat or damaging amendments.

One influential Democrat observed yesterday that "no matter when the housing bill comes out, we'll lick the livin' daylights out of it."

International News Service last night reported a secret agreement by House leaders to have the housing bill attached to the lending measure as an amendment.

Otherwise, it was held likely that proposed changes in the wage-hour act might take precedence over the housing bill. A minor wage-hour defeat was suffered yesterday by the Administration when Chairman Norton refrained from asking for special privilege for a set of amendments to the wage-hour law approved by the Administration.

Six Hours of Debate

Contrary to her original plans Mrs. Norton failed to ask the House to take up the amendments, because she had been informed by Speaker Bankhead that it would be impossible to obtain the necessary two-thirds vote. Consequently, the House will now have the opportunity of debating much more extensive wage-hour amendments which are anthema to the Administration.

In permitting the huge "self-liquidating" loan bil lto be called up in the House, the Rules Committee yesterday allowed a total of six hours of debate, just half the amount asked by Representative Wolcott, of Michigan, ranking minority member of the Banking Committee and leading opponent of the bill.

Marked by frequent jests between members of the committee and witnesses, yesterday's two-hour hearing brought out accusations that the bill is "a chaet and a fraud," and "a subterfuge to raise money outside the debt limit."

On the other hand, Chairman Steagall, of hte Banking Committee, warmly defended the measure, and said that the Government stood an excellent chance of recovering its loans.

President Calls Schools' Congress To Aid Democracy

The President has expressed a hope that from the Congress on Education for Democracy, to be held at Teachers College, Columbia University, this month, will "grow more and more effective methods of bringing to pass our cherished ideals of democracy."

The sentiment was expressed in a letter to William F. Russell, chairman of the congress, which, during its sessions, August 15 to 17, will seek to fix education's responsibility for defense and advance of democracy.

"Education for democracy cannot merely be taken for granted. What goes on in the schools every hour of the day, on the playground and in the classroom, whether reflecting methods of control by the teacher, or opportunities for self-expression by the pupils, must be checked against the fact that the children are growing up to live in a democracy. That the schools make worthy citizens is the most important responsibility placed upon them," the President wrote.

Rich Farmer Surrenders in Shooting of 9

Tells How He Slipped Posse; Claims He Fired Only 3 Shots

By the Associated Press

Lexington, Ky., July 31.—Tall, hollow-cheeked 70-year-old Charles Allen, wealthy retired farmer, surrendered today, ending a 30-hour manhunt by possemen following the shooting to death of Cynthiana Police Chief George Dickey and wounding of eight others Saturday night at Allen's barn.

Allen, placed in the Lexington City Jail, said he would have given up after the chief was killed, but he "was afraid." He was brought here by officers for safekeeping after he had telephoned Harrison County officials from the home of a brother at Jacksonville, 10 miles south of Cynthiana, that he would surrender if "given protection."

Deputies said the white-haired expert shot had on him only a pocket knife and $8.70 in cash. Yesterday he was reported armed with three guns and carrying $1,200 in currency.

In a mild voice Allen told of slipping away from the barn Saturday night. He said he left by the rear door, walked across a corn field and through Cynthiana and thence southward through fields until daybreak and then remained hiding in a barn until last night, when he made his way to the brother's home.

The shooting Saturday night followed an attempt by Chief Dickey to question Allen regarding reports he had enticed a young girl into a barn in the rear of the Allen home.

Today at Cynthiana, Assistant Chief of Police Ray Fightmaster made public an affidavit of a 15-year-old girl saying she was in the barn when officers sought to arrest Allen. The affidavit added that Allen had fired at her when she attempted to flee after Chief Dickey appeared. The girl also told of alleged instances of Allen's improper relationships with her over a period of several months.

Allen told Chief Austin B. Price of Lexington that "at least 1,000 shots were fired but I only shot three times." The retired farmer said "most of the shots were fired by drunken people in the mob."

House Passes Bill To Bar Uniforms Of Foreign Groups

A drastic bill aimed against "the strutting about in military uniform of men professing foreign ideologies" was unanimously passed by the House yesterday and sent to the Senate.

Directed primarily toward uniformed Nazi groups, the measure would impose a $1,000 fine or a year's imprisonment for anyone wearing the uniform of an organization that proposes to establish a system of government "not authorized by the Constitution." Bearing arms by such a group is likewise prohibited.

Representative Gavagan (Democrat), of New York, author of the bill, asserted it "will go far to remove from this country the strutting about in military uniform of men professing foreign ideologies and striving to spread here their hatreds and prejudices.

"The military uniform," he said, "is a danger when used improperly and illegally. We have seen in history that every despot and despoiler has raised armies and then bedecked them in varied types and colors of uniforms."

'Anti' Feeling Of Japanese Called Artificial

New York, July 31.—Sir Victor Sassoon, British capitalist and owner of extensive properties in Shanghai, said today a majority of Japanese are highly desirous of being "the best of friends with Great Britain and the United States" and that all anti-British and anti-American feeling now being whipped up is "artificial."

The contest for controlling Japanese policy going on between the army and the commercial groups "is stronger than ever, with army apparently holding the upper hand," he said.

"The commercial leaders and their followers regret exceedingly anything that will put the United States and Great Britain against Japan," said Sir Victor, "because they realize that those countries are the only ones who can help Japan develop in North China in the long run."

Annie Burroughs Urges United Feminist Drive

Special Dispatch to The Post

New York, July 31.—Miss Annie Burroughs, founder and president of the Burroughs School for Girls, in Washington, urged today in an address at the World's Fair that women throughout the world should unite in a drive to secure equal rights for all women which would open the way for "new frontiers" in the world of tomorrow.

Addressing nearly 1,000 persons at a meeting of the National Association of Colored Women, Miss Burroughs said that in the future there should be considerably less color and race discrimination among all people. She urged colored people to become more class conscious and to place less stress on racial differences.

Hips Win Way to Freedom In Paris Winter Style Showing

Flared Peplums, Evening Skirts Set New Trend; Dahlia Predominates in Flower Designs; Jewelry Strikes Barbaric Note

By the Associated Press

Paris, July 31.—Hips won their way to freedom in showings of new winter styles today.

Dresses and coats were hip-shirred and there were velvet day suits designed with flared peplums.

The much-heralded tight skirts so far have failed to materialize.

Widely-flared evening skirts appeared in stiff, outstanding satins, tulles and laces. Many were gold-embroidered or spangled in vine and leaf designs.

Dahlia Design Is Keynote

The dahlia was the keynote of Chanel's collection. Dahlia pinks, purples and reds predominated. This flower design was used to trim shoulders of evening dresses and jeweled clips were worn in dahlia form.

The most striking use of jewelry was in barbaric style necklaces used to make collars for crepe day dresses and evening velvets. Velvet frocks also were shown with cut-work edges in lace patterns.

Another outstanding trimming note was the use of white linen ruching and frilling for neck and wrists of day dresses and suits, also to finish evening decolletages.

A featured coat trimming was a fabric called "nasakart," closely imitating Astrakhan fur. This made collars, cuffs and handbags in gray or brown for tailleufs and ensembles. Many coats and jackets had side boleros only, with panels in front and back.

Day dresses had back-tied necks and long tight sleeves. Many three-quarter length sleeves and high front necks were featured for evening wear.

Skirts Slightly Longer

Afternoon skirts were slightly longer or about 12 inches from the ground. All day skirts were moderately flared.

Contrasted with the stiff satin day suits were evening suits of angora wool and jersey. Lame brocades were used for evening and striped lames for blouses. Many tiered skirts were shown for the evening. Head dress for the evening consisted of spangled ostrich or paillette ribbon bows.

Much black was shown for day and evening. Day colors included bright greens, often combined with dark brown. There also were scarlet, wine reds, bishop purple and navy.

Evening colors included shell, peach and peony pinks, wine reds, light parma violet and pale olive green.

Beating Victim Dies; Man Held for Assault to Kill

William L. Crane, 53, 1814 Kenyon street northwest, who was severely beaten at Cottage City, July 26 and later was involved in a traffic accident while in the Bladensburg rescue squad ambulance, died yesterday at Casualty Hospital.

Meanwhile, Harry B. Davis, 42, 419 G street northwest, was held in the Hyattsville lockup on a charge of assault with intent to kill in connection with the case.

T. Weston Scott, jr., of the Bladensburg rescue unit, who said he was holding Crane when the ambulance collided with another car at Fifteenth and H streets northeast, denied the patient was hurt in the crash.

Suspect Held As Aide to Gang 'Exterminator'

Dewey Striking at Racket Income of Fugitive Buchalter

By the Associated Press

New York, July 31.—The campaign to squeeze the notorious Louis (Lepke) Buchalter out of hiding took a new tack today when Louis Cohen, an accused associate of the fugitive garment industry racketeer, was held in $20,000 bail as a material witness.

Supreme Court Justice Pecora held Cohen after Assistant District Attorney Murray Gurfein said Cohen had attempted to bribe the detective who arrested him. An affidavit of suspicion of robbery was dismissed for lack of identification.

Lepke, who jumped bail two years ago on a Federal antitrus charge and is under State indictments charging strong-arm racketeering in the fur, garment and bakery industries, is the object of a continent-wide manhunt.

Seek Larger Reward

District Attorney Dewey has asked that the present reward of $5,000 for him be raised to $25,000, stating that Lepke is conducting an undercover war of annihilation against former associates that already has caused at least five shootings and two disappearances.

Dewey announced he intended to dry up Lepke's financial resources, which he said were large, and to break down his underworld contacts.

Dewey's office said Cohen had been Lepke's agent in Philadelphia and Reading, Pa., for three years; had been an "intimate associate" of the fugitive for many years, and possessed a great deal of information concerning him.

It said Cohen "aided and created fear in the garment industry" and was a "necessary part of the conspiracy to get money from the victims."

Fifty Subpenaed

Justice Pecora described the entire situation as "grave and appalling." He mentioned the slaying last Tuesday of Isadore Penn, a respectable citizen mistaken for another man who had been questioned in Dewey's inquiry.

To determine whether recent payments have been made to Lepke, the July grand jury subpenaed 50 businessmen in the garment and bakery industries to bring their books in for examination.

Airline Sought Linking U.S. With New Zealand

Permission to establish 49-hour service linking San Francisco and Auckland, New Zealand, was asked yesterday by Pan American Airways in an application filed with the Civil Aeronautics Authority.

On the new route 42-ton clippers similar to those already in transatlantic service would be flown on a fortnightly schedule.

The skyway, nearly 8,000 miles long, would extend from San Francisco, via Los Angeles to Honolulu and then south to Canton Island. From Canton the route would be via the Fiji Islands and Noumea, New Caledonia, to Auckland, Pan American explained in its application.

Man Found Electrocuted On Top of Train Here

An unidentified colored man was electrocuted yesterday when his body is believed to have been brushed by a high-voltage electric power wire as he rode on top an Atlantic Coast Line passenger train.

The man was found dead, his body and clothing badly burned, when the train entered Washington Terminal. He was taken to the District Morgue.

On Capitol Hill

A new sweeping investigation into the Federal revenue structure was launched yesterday by a special House Ways and Means sub-committee Representative Jere Cooper (Democrat), of Tennessee.

Rep. Cooper

Search for new sources to tax to help raise money to pay growing costs of government and for means to eliminate inequities that interfere with business will be conducted until the January session of Congress, Cooper indicated.

A special fund of $5,000 was given the group to make the study, which has the full approval of President Roosevelt and Secretary of Treasury Morgenthau.

The House passed and sent to the Senate a bill authorizing the President to appoint a five-member commission to establish a suitable memorial to Benjamin Harrison, twenty-fifth President of the United States. The measure would provide a $2,500 appropriation.

The House passed and sent to the White House a bill to remove all statutes of limitations on Federal offenses punishable by death.

The present statute of limitations for capital offenses, with the exception of willful murder, is three years.

These include principally, in addition to murder, the transportation of kidnaped persons in interstate or foreign commerce, any killing or kidnaping incident to bank robbery, killing a Federal officer, and rape.

Another bill approved by the House and sent to the Senate would establish a fishery educational service to educate the public about fish food values and stimulate the consumption of fish.

The service would also conduct research in improved fishing methods and encourage co-operative marketing associations.

Congress was told by Representative Hoffman, (Republican), of Michigan, that unless its members took action to "curb" John L. Lewis, the C. I. O. chieftain eventually might establish "the closed shop rule over Senators and Congressmen."

The local morning papers carry the information that the C. I. O. is trying to enforce a closed shop in the cafeterias maintained in Federal buildings," Hoffman said on the House floor.

"If Lewis can enforce his demands that to work in a Federal building one must join his union and pay his fee he is getting too close to Congressmen and Senators for comfort. If patriotism will not move us to curb his activities, perhaps self-preservation will stir us to action."

Andrews Hits Effort to Alter Labor Act

Newspaper Guild Hears Wage-Hour Chief and Bridges

By the Associated Press

San Francisco, July 31.—The sixth annual American Newspaper Guild convention, in its opening sessions today, became the sounding board for an attack by Elmer F. Andrews, national wage-hour administrator, against the Congressional bloc seeking to amend the fair labor standards act.

Andrews told the 250 guild delegates and observers the proposed amendments to exempt workers handling agricultural products, as well as others, were in reality an attempt to "wreck the act."

He termed supporters of the amendments the "dime-an-hour bloc," and cited recent Labor Department figures to show the act had not spread unemployment or hamstrung business.

The speaker declared the same forces which opposed enactment of the measure had organized "a powerful group to deprive some 2,000,000 of the most sweated workers in the country" of the benefits of the act through "amputating amendments."

Earlier, delegates heard Harry Bridges, West Coast C. I. O. director for whom a deportation hearing is now underway, welcome them and voice his belief his fight against deportation was "in the bag." He declared the deportation charges were inspired by employers as part of a drive to "undermine and destroy West Coast trade unions."

Heywood Broun, Guild president, declared:

"We all know the trial of Bridges has nothing to do with the issues being heard. We know he's in a spot because he is an honest, efficient and able labor leader."

Broun voiced hope the guild would strive for "a complete organization of newspaper workers, from city room, mechanical departments and business offices," who would deal with publishers through a joint committee for all employes.

"The vitality of the guild lies in the men who will be brought into it from the business and advertising offices," he said. "Our strength lies in forming a sound, solid, vertical union."

Andrews, after the microphone was shut off, addressed the newspaper men and women on their own status under the act, saying no test had arisen to settle whether newsmen were exempt as "professional" workers.

"But if there is any editorial or business-office employe who is not receiving the benefits to which he feels he is entitled," he added, in the form either of the minimum wage or time-and-a-half pay for overtime, "we will entertain the complaint."

Two Cameramen Catch Shark—And Vice Versa

Miami, Fla., July 31 (AP).—Yacht Capt. Fenimore Johnson told today how one shark caught two men—and vice versa—and offered to show doubters 29 tooth marks on the back of Cameraman-Diver E. F. Macewan.

A shark was caught and put into a submarine coral cavern, tied by a rope to its tail. It didn't object when Macewan and G. W. Barnes made pictures.

But while Macewan was dragging the undersea actor out of the cavern, the rope fouled on a coral pinnacle. Given slack, the shark rushed Macewan, snapped and sank its teeth in the back of the pictureman's stout denim jacket, barely scraping the flesh.

Barnes seized the rope. Macewan grabbed the yacht's anchor and there they were. The shark couldn't let go and the men didn't dare.

Johnson dived in and cut a hunk out of Macewan's jacket. Everybody—except the shark—quickly let go of things and climbed aboard the boat.

U. S. Investigates Report Nazis Hold American Woman

Berlin, July 31 (AP).—The United States consulate general waited tonight for an official check on a report that a young American woman was being held in the Dachau concentration camp near Munich on a charge of carrying on anti-Nazi propaganda.

Consular officials asked the German secret police to investigate after Franz Lem, a German, told the United States Embassy at Paris that his wife, the fromer Lili Harrison, of New Orleans, was a Nazi prisoner.

Lem, who asserted he escaped from Dachau and was wounded by frontier guards in crossing into France, said his wife travelled on a United States passport and was born April 10, 1914, in New Orleans.

(In Washington the State Department said it failed to find a record of the passport and no record of the woman's birth was found at New Orleans).

La Follette Committee Hits NLRA Foes

Charges Employer Group With Ruthless Industrial Warfare

By the Associated Press

The Associated Industries of Cleveland was accused by the Senate's Civil Liberties sub-committee yesterday of promoting "industrial warfare of the most ruthless and relentless sort" in an effort to check the growth of unionism and block collective bargaining in the Cleveland area.

The sub-committee, in a report to the Senate on one phase of its investigation of the labor policies of employers associations, said the Cleveland organization had "supplied labor spies to members desiring them."

William Few Long, general manager of Associated Industries, commented that the accusations were "old stuff."

Contending the sub-committee had shown a "dictator complex," Long said, "this association, individually and in co-operation with other organizations, has from the very beginning sought to point out the inequities of the National Labor Relations Act and the biased and prejudiced administration of the act by the National Labor Relations Board.

"We have sought and will continue to seek amendment of the act. We do not now, have not in the past, and do not intend in the future to do anything which will disturb the firmly established principles of collective bargaining."

The Senate subcommittee, headed by Senator La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, declared the organization "stimulated and kept alive among Cleveland employers a spirit of opposition to collective bargaining in defiance of Federal law."

Ever since the passage of section 7 (A) of the National Industrial Recovery Act," the report continued, "the Associated Industries of Cleveland has engaged in an uninterupted and vigorous campaign to defeat the purposes of the national labor policy. This it did in the first place by continuing unabated its traditional services of espionage and strikebreaking.

"In addition it urged upon its members the rejection of the policy of collective bargaining through the use of such devices as company unions and individual bargaining contracts. In these matters it gave its membership detailed advice and supervision, clearly pointing out how the law might be evaded and its purposes defeated."

Man Wrongly Jailed Must Wait Bandit Pair's Trial

New York, July 31 (AP).—Philip Caruso, who has served eight months of a 10-20 year sentence for a holdup he didn't commit, must stay in prison until the pair who have belatedly confessed the crime are convicted.

Caruso was sent up on the testimony of Eugene Scamiellino. Caruso, officers said, resembled closely one of the two who were taken into custody yesterday. But Caruso must stay behind bars until after the trial of Jack Jacobson, 22, and Morris Gottlieb, 35.

If they are convicted, Caruso's conviction will be set aside and he will be freed. He is entitled to no compensation for his erroneous incarceration.

Trial date of Jackson and Gottlieb has not been set but a hearing in Brooklyn Felony Court is set for Thursday.

Other programs are: a lecture on Yellowstone Park, with colored movies, by Henry E. Lorentz, traveler and lecturer, Thursday at 8 p. m. in Fort Bunker Hill Park; Friday at 8 p. m., a campfire program at the Sylvan Theater. Sunday, a nature walk along "Lover's lane" in Rock Creek Park, starting on the south side of Massachusetts avenue northwest at 2:30 p. m.

Poland Arrests Ukrainian Nazis

Warsaw, July 31 (AP).—An undetermined number of Ukrainians were reported tonight to have been arrested at such cities as Lwow and Przenys and charged with "activities harmful to the Polish state in co-operation with foreign factors."

Those arrested were described as members of the illegal O. U. N., an organization of Ukrainian nationalists. The Polish government was said to have evidence that some members "remain in contact with Berlin."

Danzig Workers ReportedKidnaped

London, July 31 (INS).—The airplane abduction of many arrested Danzig workers and their execution in Berlin was reported tonight in a Reuter's dispatch from the Free City.

The message said the workers, among the 600 recently jailed in an "anti-Communist" drive, were reported to have been flown in private planes to the German capital, where several of them were said to have been put to death under the guillotine for "high treason."

Jobless in Britain At 10-Year Low

London, July 31 (AP).—Official unemployment figures issued today gave Britain's workless on July 10 as 1,256,424—the lowest total for 10 years.

The ministry of labor said the improvement was most marked in the distributive trades, textile industries, engineering, shipbuilding, iron and steel industries.

10 Playgrounds To Open in D. C.

total of 116 of the District's approximately 200 play areas will be in operation when padlocks are taken from the ten announced yesterday.

Barrett declared that there might be a slight temporary curtailment in WPA-staffed playgrounds owing to the discharge of a number of workers who have fallen afoul the provision demanding dismissal of all those who have been on WPA rolls for 18 months.

At District WPA headquarters, however, it was indicated there is ample personnel available to make up the loss without waste of time. Approximately 146 WPA employes are working in the playgrounds. Of these, 28 who have been on the rolls for 18 months or more have or will be dismissed. There are more than enough qualified playground leaders to replace the 28, WPA officials said, and even to supply the Recreation Board's project quota of 150.

Cut to Be Met in September

Barrett indicated that a large part of the $30,000 cut by Congress from the recreation appropriation would be met by savings after September 15, although the savings campaign would be begun immediately by adjustments in upper-bracket salaries.

Under the reorganized set-up, the board said, the director of community centers would serve as if in the role of an assistant director, with general supervision over community center activities. The other four assistants would be given specialized direction of the activities of the city's white and colored recreation sections, personnel and program.

The names and salaries of the five assistants were to be announced following a poll of the Board of Education members, who were expected to approve the recreation board's recommendations.

More Spots May Open

Possibility that even more playgrounds might be opened with WPA assistance was implied later in the day by Barrett, who said he would requisition play leaders from the relief rolls as soon as playgrounds could be prepared for opening. He declared he would spread supervisory personnel "as thin as possible to open as many playgrounds as possible and at the same time do a safe and efficient job."

He said his task today wuold be to determine which ten of the idle playgrounds were best suited and most needed for opening.

Yesterday's meeting followed a series of conferences between Barrett and a two-man sub-committee on the reorganization consisting of Melvin C. Sharpe, member of the Board of Education, and Engineer-Commissioner David McCoach.

Five members of the recreation board were present yesterday, Commissioners Hazen and McCoach, Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Board of Education, Sharpe, and John H. Wilson, also a member of the Board of Education. Commissioner Allen was absent.

could carry Pennsylvania against any Republican candidate.

Meanwhile, the International News Service reported friends of Garner as saying they had assurances Jesse Jones soon will become an active supporter of the Vice President.

Reports that Jones, Houston financier and newspaper publisher, already had made a substantial contribution to Garner-for-President headquarters at Dallas were denied by a Garner lieutenant, who explained, the news service said:

"This doesn't mean that Jones is holding out. It's simply that Garner headquarters needs no financial help at this stage. Jones can be counted on to come through when his help is needed."

Garner, upon adjournment of Congress will go to his Uvalde, Tex., home, to begin a "front porch" campaign, berefit of public speeches or pronouncements.

Instead, they declared, he will rely on pamphlet summaries of his 30 years in the House and seven years as Vice President to tell his story, buttressed by statements of his supporters.

Senate Passes Loan Bill, 52-28

amendment authorizing the Secretary of Agriculture to refinance farm mortgages with Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation funds if the productive capacity of a farm is insufficient to pay off the debt.

Designed to stave off farm foreclosures by precipitatting a general scaling down in farms debts, and threatening to break the interest rate levels maintained by the Farm Credit Administration, the $612,000,000 for this purpose, added to the farm aid funds in the bill, actually would make $1,802,000,000 available for agricultural relief purposes.

Theater Revival Sidetracked

Sidetracked by the Senate in yesterday's parade to passage was an effort to revive abandoned Federal theater relief projects, an attempt to guarantee and insure long-term loans to small business through the RFC and the Federal Reserve Board, and a move to require specific appropriations by Congress before any of the loan money could be used.

It was Senator Pepper (Democrat), of Florida, who proposed the Federal theater project rider and later withdrew it. Pepper told the Senate he had conferred with Majority Leader Barkley and would reoffer his amendment on the third deficiency bill.

With the fight for restoration of WPA prevailing-wage scales already scheduled with consideration of the deficiency measure, Pepper's proposal to add Federal theater projects as a rider threatened to bring two of the session's most controversial relief fights to a climax in connection with the last appropriation bill.

Small Business Aid Dropped

Senator Mead (Democrat), of New York, offered his plan to insure loans to small business, reputed to have President Roosevelt's support. After a slashing attack by Senator Adams (Democrat), of Colorado, who said it would "confiscate" $139,000,000 in Federal Reserve funds, Barkley and Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, persuaded Mead to withdraw his bill to use Federal Reserve funds for the loans. But Mead pressed to a vote and was defeated on a second amendment to authorize the RFC to insure business loans.

Senator Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, led the coalition effort to require specific appropriations by Congress before any of the loan funds could be expended.

Senator Taft contended it is unconstitutional to spend public funds without prior appropriations, but Barkley replied it would be private, not public funds, that would be loaned. The Burke amendment lost 47 to 31. Later, on Barkley's own motion, the Senate specified that funds to make up any losses from the program by the Treasury must be specifically appropriated.

Railroad Aid Increased

Except for yesterday's $25,000,000 cut in Export-Import Bank funds, all major Senate reductions in the loan program were made last week when the Senate deleted the entire $500,000,000 toll-highway section and the $350,000,000 provision for financing construction of railway equipment.

Barkley yesterday obtained Senate consent to increase from $350,000,000 to $500,000,000 the amount the RFC may lend the roads under existing law. He said this did not increase the total of the ball and provided no new borrowing power for RFC.

Adopted by a voice vote was an amendment by Senator Brown (Democrat), of Michigan, to regulate retirement of obligations which may be issued by State and local governments to participate in the program. Brown's amendment would provide first for annual payments on principal and interest to amortize the bond issues, if amortization were unsuitable for "substantial" payments each year, and for suspension of principal payments during actual construction of projects on approval of the works commissioner.

Foreign Lending Attacked

As the "Works Financing" bill went to the House, it carried three important riders approved by the Senate last week. One virtually would repeal the relief act's 18-month turnover restriction on WPA rolls, another would ban political contributions by labor unions and other organizations without consent of dues-paying members, and a third would prevent works loans for public power plants in competition with existing private plants unless reasonable purchase offers have been refused by the latter.

The Taft proposal to curtail Export-Import bank funds $75,000,000 stirred a bi-partisan attack on foreign lending that ended only when Barkley himself proposed a $25,000,000 cut.

Charging the Administration is dumping, subsidizing and "bartering away a Nation," Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia, said "a day of reckoning will come when the American people will have to pay for every dollar we fritter away in this fashion." Senator Borah (Republican), of Idaho, said it is "dangerous policy" to make loans to foreign governments without specific authorization of Congress. Senator Johnson (Republican), of California, declared:

"We are saying to every broken-down dictator in South America to 'come and get it.' And every one of them is on his way here to come and get it and when they do they'll keep it."

How Senators Voted

The vote by which the Senate approved late yesterday a drastically curtailed version of the Administration's lending program:

Nurse in Court Tells of Tarring

Calgary, Alberta, July 31 (Canadian Press).—Alice Knowles, attractive 28-year-old nurse, told in police court today how she was tarred and feathered two weeks ago by the wife and daughter of Dr. J. L. Allen, physician, with whom she had been keeping company.

National Bank Examiners to Meet Here Tomorrow

Comptroller of the Currency Preston Delano has called chief national bank examiners to Washington for a thorough review of the Nation's banking problems, it was learned yesterday.

Conferences will be held, beginning tomorrow, under the direction of W. P. Folger, chief national bank examiner. Similar meetings will be held twice a year in the future.

The problems set for discussion involve lending policies of banks and the extent to which credit needs are being met.

Great Falls Toll Bridge Bill Revised

Span, When Paid for, To Be Operated by National Park Service

The Glass bill authorizing construction of a toll bridge at Great Falls has been revised to meet objections of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, it was learned yesterday, and may be reported by the Senate Commerce Committee this week.

The principal change is a provision that the bridge, when paid for, shall be turned over to the United States Government, instead of jointly to the States of Maryland and Virginia. It would be operated thereafter by the National Park Service in conjunction with the George Washington Memorial Parkway.

Private funds have been assured, it is understood, for construction of the bridge, once the project is authorized by Congress.

Frederic A. Delano, chairman of the Park and Planning Commission, in reporting on the bill stated that the commission would prefer to have the bridge built with funds appropriated by Congress and be open to free transportation from the beginning.

"If, however, Congress does not consider such an appropriation feasible at this time," he wrote, "the commission offers no objection to the proposed toll bridge, providing the bill is amended in the following essential particulars."

Another amendment requires that the site and design be approved by the Secretary of War and the Park and Planning Commission.

The Public Roads Administration of the Federal Works Agency reported adversely on the legislation, predicting that a toll bridge could not be self-liquidating because of the competition from four other free bridges across the Potomac River between the District and Virginia.

Grieving Dog Found Looking for Late Mr. Swanson

Duke, four-footed friend of the late Navy Secretary Claude A. Swanson, went looking for his old master Sunday.

Mourning the absence of his constant companion, he jumped the fence at the Upham kennels in Arlington County and headed for the Rapidan Camp where Swanson spent his last days. Friends of the Secretary say Duke doesn't know his master is dead, but has been unhappy from the long separation.

Naval officials, at the request of the family, instituted a search for their late chief's friend, a large Belgian police dog. Police and park officials were set to work, and last night Duke was found by a game warden in Arlington.

Douglas Hall, step son of the Secretary, and another friend of Duke's took him home with them. He hopes to be able to convey to him why his old master doesn't come to see him any more.

Mrs. Callie Perry Rites to Be Today; Rock Creek Burial

Funeral services for Mrs. Callie Thaw Perry, widow of R. Ross Perry, prominent Washington lawyer, will be held at 2 p. m. today at her home, 1635 Massachusetts avenue northwest, with burial in Rock Creek Cemetery. Mrs. Perry died at her home Sunday after a long illness.

A lifelong resident of the District, she was a descendant of one of Washington's first families. Her grandfather, Joseph Thaw, settled in the District when the Government was moved here in 1800.

Mrs. Perry was an active member of the Washington Club and the ladies' board of Children's Hospital. She was a member of St. John's Episcopal Church. A son, R. Ross Perry, jr., survives.

Frank Perna, 81, Contractor, Dies; Rites Tomorrow

Frank Perna, 81, Italian immigrant of 50 years ago who became a prominent Washington stonemason contractor, died in Garfield Hospital yesterday after a long illness. He was active in William R. Singleton Lodge, No. 30, of the Masons, and was a member of Almas Temple of the Shrine.

Surviving him are his wife, Mary a Perna; a daughter, Anna M., and a son, Frank, jr.; a sister, Mrs. Antonia Pellegrino, and a brother, Louis Perna. Services will be held in St. Columba's Episcopal Church at 2 p. m. tomorrow, followed by burial in Mount Zion Cemetery.

Miss Jennie Butler Succumbs at 69

Miss Jennie Butler, 69, for many years an employe of the Government Printing Office, died yesterday at her residence, 1514 Newton street northwest. The funeral will be at Lee's funeral home, Fourth street and Massachusetts avenue northeast, at 3 p. m. tomorrow.

Surviving Miss Butler are a sister, Mrs. A. M. Burch, and a brother, William H. Butler, both of the District.

Train Robbers Routed in Battle

car, intent upon taking a $56,000 bundle of currency consigned to the Army's Technical Air School at Rantoul.

One of them, wielding a pistol butt, knocked Mail Clerk Guy O'Hern, of Chicago, on the floor. He was stunned, but rose and crawled over the coal tender and advised Engineer J. J. Malloy to "give her the gun."

As the train gained speed, Boothman opened fire with a revolver. The robbers returned several wild shots. John Gearon, a baggage clerk, pistol in hand, joined in the combat.

Leap From Train

The bandits leaped from the train, as it entered Del Ray, 3 miles down the line. One of them—who, officials said, carried a driver's license issued to John F. Waldon, of Chicago—toppled over. His head had been grazed, his right leg pierced by a bullet and also fractured. He was taken aboard the train and brought to a hospital in Urbana.

His henchman ran to Highway 45, paralleling the tracks. He staggered twice, but regained his footing and climbed into a dark sedan driven by an accomplice. His uncertain gait led the train crew to believe he also had been wounded. The motor car sped south.

Mother Dies Never Knowing Of Two Slain Sons

Omaha, Nebr., July 31 (AP).—For seven years Mrs. Himon Goldberg lived in Omaha and Los Angeles without knowledge of the fatal shooting of two of her three sons.

In 1932 Harry and Sam Goldberg, the sons, were shot and killed by a cousin during a business dispute.

Mrs. Goldberg then was in ill health in California. Her condition was so serious that Ralph, a third son, felt news of the tragedy would result in her immediate death.

To maintain the deception he sent his mother letters signed "Harry" and "Sam" every week or two.

It was Ralph's plan to tell his mother of the tragedy when her condition improved. But there was never sufficient improvement and the deception was carried on until Mrs. Goldberg's death last week.

President, Murphy Discuss Hatch Bill More Than Hour

The Hatch bill, designed to restrict political activity by Government employes, was the subject of a conference lasting more than an hour yesterday between President Roosevelt and Attorney General Murphy.

Emerging from the President's office, Murphy refused to discuss the conference.

He said he had "just about" completed his study of the constitutionality of the Hatch measure but would not submit a formal report on it to the President. The implication was that there would be further informal discussions. The 10-day limit on the President's power to sign or veto the bill will be up Thursday.

CAA Asserts Air Mail Revenues Exceed Subsidies

Chairman Robert H. Hinckley, of the Civil Aeronautics Authority, discussing the first year of the agency, said last night that postal revenue from air mail in the fiscal year ended July 30 probably would exceed Government payments to domestic airlines for the first year.

He said that in the previous fiscal year the direct deficit was 411,000, as against eight times that amount for 1938.

Hinckley, speaking on the radio, described the rapid growth of airlines and paid tribute to aviation's safety record.

Murphy Promotes McGuire And Kemp as Justice Aides

Former Made Special Assistant Attorney General, Latter Becomes Assistant to the Attorney General

By the Associated Press.

Attorney General Murphy announced yesterday he had created the post of Special Assistant Attorney General and appointed Matthew F. McGuire, of Massachusetts, to the position.

McGuire has been serving as the assistant to the Attorney General.

President Roosevelt nominated Edward G. Kemp, of Michigan, to succeed McGuire. Kemp is special assistant to the Attorney General.

The Atorney General said creation of the new post was part of his program for reorganizing the Department of Justice.

McGuire will act as liaison officer between the Attorney General and Congress and other agencies and deparments of the Government. He also will handle confidential and special legal and administrative matters.

In a statement accompanying the announcement, Murphy characterized McGuire as a "very able lawyer," adding:

"He is very familiar with the workings of the Department of Justice. He has given unstintingly of his time and talent to that work. His devotion to duty has equipped him well for the important work he is undertaking. I regard him highly."

Kemp has been associated with the Attorney General for a number of years. He was graduated from the University of Michigan Law School and served overseas in the World War. He practiced law in Detroit and became legal adviser to Governor General Murphy in the Philippines in May, 1933. He was assistant attorney general of Michigan in 1937 and 1938 and became special assistant to the Attorney General in January of this year.

Hollywood Pair Sue Cantor for $751,000 Damages

Hollywood, July 31 (U.P.).—Comedian Eddie Cantor was named defendant today in a $751,000 personal injury suit filed by a couple who alleged they were called Nazis and beaten up after a radio broadcast.

Charles Gollob and his wife, Elsie, filed the action against Cantor, Bert Gordon, also known as the "Mad Russian," the Reynolds Tobacco Co. and the Columbia Broadcasting Co.

The Gollobs alleged that when they left the Hollywood broadcasting theater of the radio chain, March 27, they were called Nazis, that a man, alleged to be Gordon, struck Gollob with a blackjack, and that Mrs. Gollob was struck in the face and knocked down.

World's Fair to Cut Prices on Week-Ends

U. S. Moves to Appeal Decision Clearing Organized Medicine of Trust Act Charges

Notice of an appeal from Justice Proctor's ruling that Federal antitrust legislation does not apply to the medical profession was filed in District Court yesterday by Government counsel, who thus paved the way for submitting the issue to the Supreme Court.

Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold and District Attorney Pine presented seven grounds of appeal from Proctor's decision, by which he dismissed a criminal conspiracy indictment against the American Medical Association, the District Medical Society, two other physicians' organizations and 21 individual doctors.

The notice filed yesterday indicated that review of the case will be sought in the District Court of Appeals but Department of Justice spokesmen declared the question of a "concurrent" appeal to the Supreme Court, promised last week by Attorney General Murphy, still was being considered.

Whether the direct appeal to the highest court is filed, the case was considered sure to be heard there, even if taken first to the District Court of Appeals. The advantage of the direct appeal would be a saving of time.

The appeal will ask the higher courts to reinstate the prosecution, which was a result of opposition by "organized medicine" to Group Health Association, Inc. This opposition, the Government contended, was a combination in restraint of trade, in violation of the Sherman act. Justice Proctor, however, held that in the eyes of the law medicine was not a "trade," hence was not covered by the Sherman act. Moreover, the justice found, the indictment was badly drawn and could not be allowed to go on trial.

The grounds of appeal stated were:

The court erred in sustaining the demurrer of "organized medicine" to the indictment.

The court erred in entering judgement for the defendants.

The court erred in its interpretation of the anti-trust act.

The court erred in holding that the antitrust act did not apply to the campaign against Group Health Association, Inc.

The court erred in holding that the indictment did not charge an offense under the antitrust act.

The court erred in holding certain of the charges to be vague, indefinite and uncertain.

The court erred in other points, which the Government notice said would be shown by the record of the case.

The notice of appeal was expected to be followed swiftly by the filing of a formal appeal, based on the seven grounds. The Department of Justice last week said the appeal would be pushed as rapidly as possible.

Court of Appeals officials said the case could not be heard there until October, when the autumn term starts.

'Mr. Smith' Gives Mr. Capra Monumental Job of Work

Tackles Cutting and Pasting Film of Capital; Noted British Actor Here for 'Comedian;' News Notes and Gossip of the Theater

NEXT TO THE RUGGED gentleman who lays hot asphalt in weather like this, or that other brawny fellow who stokes a steamship, I would prefer, at the moment, not to be Frank Capra.

Mr. Capra, so it is reported, has just returned to Hollywood from a trout fishing jaunt to the High Sierras and is about to begin the cutting and assembling of "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," his latest production for Columbia Pictures, which, as you must know by now, will be in the nature of a successor to "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town." Mr. Capra is one of the few ace directors who personally cut and assemble their own films—or so I have been given to understand. That may account for the uniform superiority of the Capra screen product. He knows which shots he wants in his finished film and sees to it in person that they get in there. That, however, is not the reason I prefer not to be Mr. Capra, at the moment.

BELL

The reason is that this is the summertime, we are developing an Academy Award attack of laziness and Mr. Capra has cut himself out a formidable mess of work. He can have it.

Just how formidable a slice of labor it is Mr. Capra has cut for himself may be gathered from the fact that when Jimmy Stewart, costarred with Jean Arthur in the picture, was here not so long ago he confided to this desk that not counting the extra shots that were being taken of him and the Lincoln Memorial during his visit, Capra already had something like 600,000 feet of exposed negative on his hands. Six hundred thousand feet is quite a stretch of celluloid in any man's studio.

The reason there was so much footage on "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" was that Mr. Capra takes no chances when making a picture. He shoots everything that occurs to him from every possible angle and he doesn't go in much for retakes. Something in the neighborhood of a year was spent in preparation for the shooting of "Mr. Smith" and something like four months in its actual filming. You can expose a lot of film in four months and Mr. Capra did. Now all he has to do is winnow the thing down to conventional motion picture length—meaning 10 to 12 reels.

Chop, Chopper, Chop!

Since there are approximately 1,000 feet of film to a reel, you can figure out for yourself something of the magnitude of the task that lies ahead of Mr. Capra. If Jimmy Stewart had his figures on straight—and he was right in the thick of the shooting from start to finish—there will be, roughly, 588,000 feet of something and somebody left on the cutting-room floor.

This is touched upon here only because "Mr. Smith" is being reported by grapevine to be the greatest picture Capre ever has made—and his mantel is already thickly cluttered with Academy "Oscars" for the best pictures of their year. Much of the action is laid in this city. Many of the Washington background scenes were shot right here in town. Many also were not. In transferring the National Capital to Hollywood, Columbia found it necessary to erect 43 of the most impressive sets the West Coast ever had seen.

If Mr. Capra can just manage to get the whole thing pasted together to his own satisfaction, we ought to have something here. Personally, I'm betting on Mr. Capra.

The call is out for chorus girls to form the "line" of the seventh annual "Going Native" revue, soon to go into active production at Loew's Capitol Theater. While the first group was interviewed by Producer Gene Ford on Saturday afternoon, the demand has not as yet been completely met. Any young Washington dancer over the age of 18 is eligible. Previous stage experience is not necessary. Those interested are urged to get in touch with Mr. Ford, at the Capitol Theater, at the earliest possible date.

Yesterday's "Silver Plaque" luncheon, celebrated in the Crystal Room of the Willard Hotel by the Washington Variety Club, Tent No. 11 in the national chain of clubs, was one of the most notable in the history of the showmen's organization. Approximately 150 barkers and their guests and ladies were in attendance to witness the presentation of the silver plaque, unanimously voted the local club by the national organization in convention in Detroit a few months ago, for the "most valuable humanitarian work performed by any Variety Club in the United States in the year 1938." The presentation was made by National President John E. Harris of Pittsburg Tent No. 1, to Chief Barker A. E. Lichtman of the Washington club.

Following the ceremonies, of which newsreel clips were made by Tony Muto, of Fox Movietone News, a brief program of entertainment was offered by The Rolic-Aires and Borrah Minevitch's Harmonica Rascals from the Earle stage show. A. Julian Brylawski, of the Warner organization, and Eddie Fontaine, Washington manager for Paramount, were the "kings for the day." The silver plaque will be permanently installed in the Variety clubrooms in the Willard.

Robert Speaight, distinguished English actor, arrives in Washington today to appear as guest star in the Catholic University's Summer Institute of Drama's production of "The Comedian." The play will be acted tonight for his benefit and on August 7 he will enact the stellar role at the university. On the following night, "The Comedian" will be presented in the National Sylvan Theater, on the Monument Grounds, with Mr. Speaight starred. The principal feminine role will be played by Mimi Norton, one of the Capital's most popular resident actresses.

Jupiter Pluvius evidently has mistaken Signor Orangelo Ratto, manager of Loew's Palace Theater and unofficial "Mayor of F street," for Ol' Man Noah. Every time Angie tries a vacation it pours pitchforks and hammer handles. Says a card: "We are having rain, rain and some more rain—as of last year." That's what he gets for not sticking to Hains Point!

While you are coasting around the "summer theaters" this week, you might drop in at the Auditorium in Washington Grove, Md., on Friday night at 8, and see the Washington Grove Dramatic Club's performance of the three-act play, "The House of a Thousand Thrills." That's what the Auditorium might turn out to be.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, July 31.

THE LAST defendant recently convicted in the $30,000 Waldorf-Astoria jewel robbery case, who is awaiting a thirty-year sentence, has heeded Judge Wallace's warning and is spilling the entire story to Dewey's office. He's naming all the big-time receivers who disposed of the stolen wares . . . The New York Yankees are for sale . . . Barbara Dale, a member of the cast at the Surry Theater in Maine, really is Barbara Dole, daughter of J. D. Dole, the Hawaiian Pineapple King . . . William P. Buckner, jr., who is appealing his conviction, is linking one of the prosecution witnesses against him with the Manton case.

BARON WALTER MUMM, of the famous champagne family, will reopen his legal battle to be permitted to use his own name in a new champagne venture . . . His family sold their business in France, during the prohibition years here, and the courts have ruled that the sale included the transfer of the name rights . . . Mumm will start suit shortly.

PAUL STEWART, who was an accomplice in Orson Welles' now-famous Martian scare, will appear opposite Gypsy Rose Lee in "Burlesque" at Saratoga . . . Sam Goldwyn is the probable purchaser of the screen rights to Lillian Hellman's "The Little Foxes." Goldwyn went to see the play this week and expressed his admiration . . . George Abbott, who is preparing his twelfth production, "Three Steps Down," for the first time will permit another person to direct his show. The new director will be 21-year-old Ezra Stone, star of "What a Life."

THE ELLIS PARKERS, who will be returned to Brooklyn to stand trial for kidnaping in connection with the Lindbergh hoax confession case—are both broke now. Bernard Sandler will be their counsel here . . . Signor de Mardel, the Argentine Commissioner, was host at a party at the Argentine Pavilion. He invited the press to use his car—and a motorcycle escort—to get to the Fair grounds. De Mardel traveled by subway . . . Read Vincent Sheean's "Not Peace but a Sword" . . . George Raft did so much rhumba dancing in the night clubs last night that he sent an emissary to the hotel to bring him another shirt and underwear.

ANOTHER primary battle in King County will be directed against Mangano, who has been designated for the Sheriff's job. Senator Edward J. Coughlin will bolt the Democratic machine to oppose Mangano . . . Harper's and Vogue each has purchased a chapter from Oscar Levant's forthcoming book, for publication in those magazines.

PAUL DRAPER is dissatisfied with the screen story assigned him at United Artists and is seeking a settlement . . . Although the newspapers are announcing that the reward for Lepke' capture will be increased to $35,000, the Broadway sages insist that it won't help—that Lepke is not in N. Y., but in Honduras, where he can't be extradited . . . Lepke's former associate, Gurrah Shapiro, doesn't agree with Dewey's statement that he would have been killed, and is safer in jail. Gurrah's messages insist that he'll die in jail soon unless he's granted a respite from the rock-pile and is removed to a hospital.

FOR THE FIRST TIME since he settled in the West, Eugene O'Neill has permitted his home to be photographed and the pictures to be published. The photos, taken by Mrs. O'Neill, have just arrived at the Theater Guild office . . . Justice Ben Shalleck, estranged husband of Lillian Roth, will have some consolation—in the knowledge that he'll be designated for re-election . . . Mrs. Andres Gica, who arrived from Budapest in the spring, has visited the World's Fair twenty-two times . . . There will be no more publicity linking Goldwyn with the White House family. Sam feels that Jimmy Roosevelt has learned so much about the film business that the White House prestige no longer is necessary.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., July 31.—"Ladies and Gentlemen" of Hollywood gathered at the Biltmore Theater to give Helen Hayes a royal welcome. Stars have to underdress for these openings. Norma Shearer and Roz Russell did a neat bit of mountain climbing when they got in the wrong pew. They lesped over the seat in front of them, as the aisle was so crowded they couldn't make change usual way.

HOPPER

Franchot Tone came late with Loretta Young. Greer Garson's red hair and full length ermine coat caught and held the eye. Janey Gaynor's red and white coat, with Adrian on her arm, was quite a picture. Dottie Lamour swapped her sarong for Oriental splendor with 3 inches of Dottie showing around the middle.

Orsen Welles, properly bearded, wide eyes bulging, looked like a bird in its first peek at a big, juicy worm. Says he's scared of Hollywood—but likes the town. If he doesn't make a success of films, it will be fun anyway. Well, he's made a success of everything else. And I don't think pictures will down him.

Usually the play's the thing, but 'tain't so with Helen's new one. Sure, there are some fine moments in it. She could make you like "Uncle Tom's Cabin." But what a letdown after "Queen Victoria." Herbert Marshall gives it great distinction. Mind you, I think it will be a New York hit, but I fear many friends will grumble just as I do, because it's not up to the Hayes standard.

The Troe afterward looked like a gala night at a country club. Mention any star's name, except Garbo, and they were there. Wouldn't you know Mary Livingstone would win the Sweepstake's prize? It was a Belry! Incidentally, I hear Jack is shopping for another baby back East, with Rabbi Wise selecting this time.

George Burns missed out on a suit of clothes, 'cause he'd gone home. He could have used 'em, too. Heddy Lamarr there with a single diamond in her hair. Louis B. Mayer toasting his first star, Anita Stewart, on her wedding anniversary. Said he'd be back to dance at her twenty-fifth.

Louis Bromfield should have had a prize for his waltz with Patricia Morison. Andrea Leeds saying good-by to her friends. She's motoring north with Bob Howard. A wire addressed "Seabiscuit" will find her!

At the "On Your Toes" set at Warners I again met Zorina, who grows yearly more lovely. She was wearing a broth of a ballet skirt, silver turban with pale blue ostrich feathers. She wears same thing in private life, without the skirt. I asked why her nether ends weren't muscular. She said: "My mother wouldn't let me stand on my toes until I was nine."

She has a tattooing of six vaccination marks on her arm, which makeup won't cover. I asked why that number.

"My uncle, who's a surgeon, did it when I was three. He believed in thoroughness," she explained.

Her husband, Ballachine, whom she adores, is the softest-spoken director I've ever watched. But gets results that way.

Wait 'til you see Eddie Albert leaping through the air. Eddie's already talking about his return to the theater. He bought a play for himself. Says it's the excitement of putting it on and opening night which thrills him so. After a couple of weeks, he'd just as soon turn the part over to somebody else.

In pictures, you never reach that point of excitement. You rehearse, do it, and just as they say "it's in the can" you're ready for a good take. But it's too late then, everybody's exhausted but yourself.

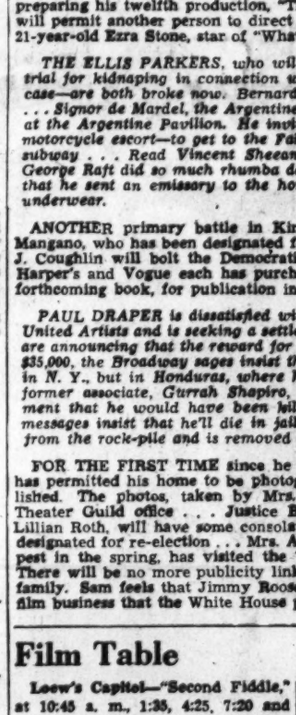
Stars on Stage



BETTY GRABLE,

popular young screen star and wife of Jackie Coogan, who will appear in person as a topline stage attraction at the Earle Theater next week

Glen Echo Park

Last night "Tiny" Hill and his famous dance orchestra made their "bow" in the Spanish Garden ballroom at Glen Echo, presenting "Music With a Mood" to the gay throngs of dancers and swingsters.

Featured with this brilliant orchestra are Allan DeWitt, handsome vocalist, with his "romantic song style," and "Ozzie" Osborne, with his vibraharp. This vibraharp is something very special in the way of tonal quality. It's something new. It's hard to describe, so you'd better see it for yourself. However, most impressive of all is "Tiny" Hill, himself. "Tiny" tips the scales past the 250-pound mark. He's 6 feet 2 inches tall. He is probably the largest orchestra leader in the world.

This fine dance unit did themselves "proud" last night. Featuring a type of music that makes your toes tap, "Tiny" and his lads proved equally proficient in their renditions of waltzes, fox-trots, rhumbas, tangoes and the more recent swing tunes.

This is something "extra special" for swing and dance fans.

His Salary Is Too High, Says Ace Director

John M. Stahl Lets His Hair Down and Discusses Movies

By Frederick C. Othman

United Press Hollywood Correspondent

Hollywood, July 31.—John M. Stahl, one of the best and hence one of the highest paid of movie directors—he earns in a week twice as much as most people do in a year—announced today that he wished he made only one-fourth as much money as he does.

He said he thought he'd be happier. If that sounds cockeyed in this capitalistic day, let the $4,000-a-week Stahl explain:

"Hollywood's large salaries are unnecessary, except for one thing. That is respect. If you don't earn a king's ransom in the movie business, nobody respects you. And if they don't respect you, you can't get work. So you've got to demand a tremendously stiff fee for your services, or you don't make movies.

"Then you give most of this money back to the Government and you worry about your financial affairs and you'd be a lot better off, if you earned only a fraction of your weekly check. So would the movie industry.

"Say you're paying your star $15,000 to act in a picture. And your leading man $10,000. And you find after the camera has ground a while that the picture would be a lot better if you had an extra week's shooting. Do you take that week? You do not. You stop those high salaries as soon as you can."

Tries to Dodge Interviews

At Universal Studios, where he is one of the head men, Stahl said he tried to shy away from interviews. He said he nearly always got himself into trouble when he spoke for publication.

"Last time was years ago," he said. "I was talking about what made an interesting movie and what kind of women make the best picture characters.

"I pointed out that the average woman loves her husband and has lived the clean and decent life for 20 years, with never a fight or squabble, and isn't very interesting. She isn't, either. So I said I tried to have the other kind of women in my pictures.

"When that was published I got more than 3,000 letters from good, but indignant, women, who said it was the likes of me that ruined motion pictures. I realize my attitude isn't very complimentary to the good women, but I still stand by my guns. I try to have interesting women in my pictures."

The women trouble of the white-haired Stahl led inevitably to his story troubles. Though he has made some of the biggest hits ever turned out by Hollywood, he thinks they all have been bad. He isn't even any too enthusiastic about his newest production, "When Tomorrow Comes," despite the fact the studio feels it is so good it is holding a $5-per-ticket premiere next month.

Stories and Actors Scarce

"The difficulty is stories," Stahl said. "There only are about 25 plots in the whole book. And some 500 pictures are turned out every year, so these plots have to be used over and over again, and they get pretty threadbare.

"Censorship of the industry makes them even duller. They say you can't do this and you can't do that and pretty soon you find you haven't been able to do anything much. It is very discouraging."

It's hard to get good actors, too, he said.

"Most of them seem to be in politics," he continued. "Look at Hitler and Mussolini and others I could name in that field. They're all superb actors. They ought to be in the movies."

Fact is, Stahl said, some of the best acting he ever has seen comes out of the ink bottle.

"I'm talking about cartoons, such as Disney makes," he explained. "He can take a little bug and put more expression in that insect's left eye than any real-life actor I know can do. It's a strange commentary on acting, but it's true and I only wish I knew how Disney does it."

Upon reading this dispatch we have a sneaking idea there'll be no more interviews with John M. Stahl published for another 10 years. Anyhow it was a pleasure for us to talk to a movie chieftain who believes in saying exactly what he thinks.

Roadside

In the vernacular of the early twenties, in which the play is laid, the Roadside's Theater's production of "Spooks," which last night began its second week, is "the berries."

This mystery-comedy of an eccentric old duffer's even more peculiar will employs some odd devices: the "fourth wall" becomes the utilitarian front of the mysterious old house in which the inheritors of the estate must pass three successive nights; the "smart" gowns of that so-recent period, which Costumer Dorothy Croissant has instilled with some life, look supremely ridiculous and the tricky ending guarantees surprise. Of the cast, Larry Lawrence rates a boost for playing down a role that might easily be "hammed." Lansing Hall contributes some chilly screams and Anne Ives is a superior West Indian. George Farrington, Catherine Knockey and Maccubbin Waters have other leading parts.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, July 31 (CNS).—Last week I wouldn't have advised the Warner clan to hold their breath until they were able to obtain permission from the Rev. Niemoller to film "The Bishop Who Walked With God." He is in a German concentration camp and there wouldn't have been a chance of getting to him for his okay on his life story. Since that time, Warners have been in communication with Niemoller's family and so the movie will be made without the minister's personal approval.

LOUELLA PARSONS

The script was sent to Fredric March who has been in New York for months with "The American Way." Freddie likes it so well, he is expected to sign a contract this week to play the bishop role. Warners will change the story enough so that it might be any minister who gets in trouble with the Hitler regime and is thrown into prison.

The two top English directors now belong to David Selznick. He's already brought Alfred Hitchcock to Hollywood for "Rebecca" and today a deal was closed with Robert Stevenson, who will come over to make a picture as soon as David can find a story. Stevenson was responsible for "Nine Days a Queen," with Nova Pilbeam. He also directed "To the Victor" and "King Solomon's Mines," all of which rated favorable notices from our critics. I shall be surprised, indeed, if Nova Pilbeam doesn't come here now, for she's eager to make a picture in Hollywood. A lot of water has passed under the bridge since she made "Nine Days a Queen," so that she's old enough to be a full-fledged star now. Maybe it will be for "Rebecca."

Just heard about David Niven's schoolmate, John Sutton, and his experiences in Hollywood. Sutton is a wealthy young Englishman, who would never have to do a day's work if he didn't feel so inclined. But Bette Davis met him and was so impressed with him, she persuaded Michael Curtiz to give him a small part in "The Private Lives of Elizabeth and Essex" (the new title). Sutton was surprisingly good and a few days ago he was tested by Universal for one of the leads in "The Tower of London." Believe it or not, young Sutton draws a seven-year contract and will be costarred with Basil Rathbone. I hope Universal won't continue to compare him with Errol Flynn, because comparisons are always unfortunate in this business.

Lillian Gish has stopped reading scripts, in answer to a telegram from Guthrie McClintic, which states he has a play for her and wants her in New York by the middle of August. She told me today the title is a secret, but that she's promised to leave in ten days. She said she liked the script of "Swiss Family Robinson" and she really wanted to make a picture, but she had given Guthrie her word if he found a play she'd do it. "But I'm coming back," she said, "and I'm going to really do a picture." Lillian had luncheon with me Sunday, went on to the Aldous Huxleys and later dined with Charlie Chaplin, Helen Hayes and Charlie MacArthur. They sat around the table until nearly 12, while Charlie related his story of "The Dictators."

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Jackie Coogan, who has been so disconsolate since Betty Grable left him, forgot his troubles long enough to step out with a pretty blonde; Natalie Draper Brown has gone to New York to try her luck on the stage; Rosemary Lane beaued to the Victor Hugo by John Hart, her most recent admirer; the Buster Colliers and the Phil Bergs left the Warner party at 4 a. m., going directly to San Pedro, where they sailed on a fishing expedition; William Gargan had Mayor Kelly in tow and both the Mayor and his wife went over big with the film crowd. I reminisced with Mayor Kelly about the days when I lived in Chicago and Maj. Funkhauser was the head movie censor there; Errol Flynn is on his way to Chicago for personal appearances. He hasn't made up his mind about the South American trip. He and Lili Damita, who looked particularly chic, were at the Warner party until the wee sma' hours.

George Brent is occupying Marlene Dietrich's former dressing room at Paramount; Robert Stack, Deanna Durbin's screen boy-friend, and Helen Parrish have been at the La Conga three nights in a row, which constitutes a romance in Hollywood; the Troc diners couldn't have been more surprised to see Bart Marshall and Lee Russell join Edna Best and her party; Ginger Rogers, who is on her way back from Honolulu, is in for plenty of ribbing because she fought against doing "Bachelor Mother" until the last minute; Wendy Barrie, who told me the pretty evening dress she wore the other night cost $39, at the Cafe Lamaze with Greg Bautzer, who was very attentive; Edwina Mandel is in the Good Samaritan Hospital, with acute poisoning.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

U. S. Criminal Law Procedure Called Archaic

Murphy Aide Praises New Deal Changes in Legal Machinery

New Deal interpretation and application of Federal law was extolled yesterday by Alexander Holtzoff, special assistant to Attorney General Murphy.

For many years before the Roosevelt Administration "there had been but few marked and important changes in Federal jurisprudence," he told the opening session of the three-day annual meeting of the National Commercial Law League at Wardman Park Hotel.

"The machinery gradually became inadequate," he continued. "It revolved too slowly and creaked for want of sufficient lubricating oil. It became impotent to respond to the many demands made upon it."

Holtoff emphasized that "one of the principal attributes of the law is that it must of necesity change, grow and adjust itself to the varying needs of passing generations."

Lauding recent changes in civil procedure, he characterized methods still used in conduct of criminal cases as "archaic," and remarked that "improvements in this field cannot be made without legislation" which is now before Congress.

After praising the national bankruptcy act, enacted last year, he denounced the fee system of paying administrator of estates.

"The fee system of compensating judicial officers is an anachronism and should be thrown into the discard in this field as it has been in many others," Holtzoff asserted.

Lawyers' responsibilities in preservation of democracy in the United States were stressed by Sefton Darr, president of the District Bar Association.

The duty of "making democracy safe for the American people rests largely with lawyers," he pointed out.

Darr also drew attention to the importance of enforcing Constitutional law if "isms" or dictatorship are to be avoided.

William P. McCracken, jr., local attorney, praised the work of the league in explaining provisions of the national bankruptcy act. Invocation was pronounced by the Rev. William M. Bradner, canon precentor of Washington Cathedral. President John M. Niehaus, jr., presided.

C.P.Dodge, Former Head of D.C. Chest, Buried at Denver

Officers ond staff of the Washington Community Chest joined yesterday in messages of condolence to Mrs. Clarence Phelps Dodge on the death of Mr. Dodge Saturday at his home in Denver.

Mr. Dodge, who had served the Community Chest here for eight years as a volunteer worker and was president from 1934 to 1938, was praised as "an outstanding example of unselfish devotion" by Herbert L. Willett, jr., Chest director.

"The lasting influence of Mr. Dodge on the Community Chest will be an enduring monument to him," the message from the Chest to Mrs. Dodge said. A cable message of sympathy from Coleman Jennings, Chest president, was received yesterday from England.

Mr. Dodge had been ill for several months, and had gone to Denver in June, following an attack of pneumonia. Funeral services and burial were held yesterday in Denver.

Mattingly Retires After 51 Years In U. S. Service

Philip H. Mattingly, principal personnel clerk, United States Public Health Service, retired yesterday after 51 years of continuous Government service, and looks to a future of enjoyment of his favorite pastimes—baseball and horse racing.

Two hundred of his fellow employes gave him a send-off in the P. H. S. auditorium. There Surgeon General Thomas Parran presented him a mahogany table and chairs, on behalf of the employes.

Mattingly is a native Washingtonian, attended private, public and business schools here and entered the service March 19, 1888, as a stenographer in the Patent Office. He was 19 years old. In 1891 he transferred to the office of the Chief of Engineers, War Department, where he served until July 1, 1903, when he came to the Health Service as clerical assistant to William P. Worcester, first chief clerk. For several years he has made his home at 1008 Spring road northwest.

Funeral Today For Widow of Alexander McNeil

Funeral services for Mrs. Mary A. E. A. McNeil, 73, resident of this city since 1907, will be held today in Nova Scotia, where she died Saturday at her home in Princes Lodge, near Halifax.

Mrs. McNeil was the widow of Alexander McNeil, real estate and insurance broker. She lived here at 1355 Monroe street northeast.

Active in social and church work, she was a member of St. Anthony's Parish, and at one time a member of the Ladies' Auxiliary board of Trinity College.

She leaves four daughters, Mary A., Winifred A., Philomena and Evangeline A. McNeil, and three sons, Benedict M., John C. and Paul A. McNeil, all of Washington.

Glenn Dale Patients Open Store Today

A general store "operated by patients and for patients" will be opened at 9 a. m. today at Glenn Dale Sanitorium under auspices of the District Tuberculosis Association.

Profits from the sale of soft drinks, candy, toilet articles, periodicals, etc., will be used to purchase equipment needed by the vocational training school.

As a sanitary measure all articles, including ice cream, will be sold only in packages, officials of the association explained.

To Check Constipation Get at Its Cause!

If constipation has you down so you feel heavy, tired and dopey, it's time you did something about it. And something more than just taking a physic! You should get at the cause of the trouble.

If you eat the super-refined food most people eat, the chances are the difficulty is simple—you don't get enough "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean heavy food. It's a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines.

If this common form of constipation is your trouble, eat Kellogg's All-Bran for breakfast every day and drink plenty of water. All-Bran isn't a medicine—it's a crunchy, toasted, nutritious cereal. And it will help you not only to get regular but to keep regular, day after day. Made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. Sold by every grocer.

A Good Start

Reorganization of the District's playground system appears to have been completed in less than three weeks after Recreation Director Barrett assumed his new position. Considering the muddled situation resulting from the operation of three different recreational units for many years, the announcement of the new setup yesterday suggests that the District Recreation Board is working with harmony and dispatch.

The public will find even more direct interest in the decision of the board to open 10 additional playgrounds between now and September 15. When this order becomes effective 14 play spaces will have been added to the total area wherein children can find safe refuge from death-dealing traffic. The board has quickly demonstrated its sensitivity to the public demand for more playgrounds.

There can be little doubt that still more organized play space is needed. Attractive recreational areas that will draw children off the streets ought to be provided within easy reach of every home. In congested areas such open spaces must be regarded as absolutely imperative. But the public realizes that neglect of the past cannot be fully corrected within a few weeks, not even by a new and consolidated recreational system.

The board has made a good start that augurs well for future improvements. If it continues this effective work until every neighborhood is adequately provided with playgrounds, the community will have good reason to be grateful.

Housing Progress

Only a few years ago students of housing were eagerly looking forward to the day when interest rates on well-secured mortgages could be reduced to 5 per cent or lower. Now that forward step in the development of a modern housing industry has been achieved. Partly through the consistent work of the FHA mortgage-insurance system, an abundance of capital has been made available at progressively lower rates.

Beginning today, the maximum interest that may be charged by banks, building and loan associations and other lending institutions participating in the FHA program is 4½ per cent. To this must be added, however, an insurance premium amounting to one-half of 1 per cent, making an effective rate of 5 per cent. As Administrator McDonald points out, this will enable a family to pay off a $4,000 mortgage with monthly payments averaging $23.24 over a period of 25 years. And a down payment of only 10 per cent is required.

Undoubtedly this year's pick-up in residential construction reflects, in considerable measure, the reduction of financing costs. Interest charges mounting to 8 and 10 per cent were not uncommon a few years ago. It is a real achievement to have brought about a flow of capital into home construction at very substantially reduced rates. Of course, the general lowering of interest charges has contributed to this result, but that does not mean an ample supply of capital would have been mobilized for small-home construction without the aid of the FHA.

It is especially significant that most of the aid thus given to home owners, and those wishing to acquire homes of their own, is redounding to the benefit of families of moderate income. The average appraised value of new homes mortgaged under the FHA plan is approximately $5,500. In some instances the appraised value—which is about equivalent to actual costs—runs as low as $2,500. Aid is being given where it is most needed.

The one discouraging aspect of the FHA program is the lag of large-scale projects. Building of this type may be stimulated by the cut in mortgage interest in that field to 4 per cent. But restrictive amendments to the last FHA act seem to have discouraged some of the few builders equipped to operate in this field. That is particularly unfortunate because of the promise undertakings of this sort hold out for renters of moderate income.

Nor has any real progress been made in the development of a building industry capable of operating on a mass-production basis. Some builders have enhanced their efficiency and some are trimming costs by buying materials in large quantities. But major building companies capable of employing men on an annual basis, and of applying the most modern industrial techniques to residential construction, are not yet in sight. Good housing cannot be brought within reach of the masses until construction as well as financing costs are substantially reduced.

Split Personality

In view of the gorgeous weather, and the good sport enjoyed by some members of his party, it was unfortunate that Mr. Roosevelt had so little time for fishing off the Presidential yacht last week-end. And the pity of it is not lessened by the fact that it was further study of the Hatch bill, barring political activities on the part of all but a handful of Federal employes, which intervened between the President and the lure of rod and reel.

While the President claims to be strongly in favor of the objectives of the Hatch bill it becomes increasingly clear that he does not yearn to have these objectives attained right now. Here is another illustration of that dichotomization of personality which has caused Mr. Roosevelt confusion in the past. As head of the executive branch of the Government he would naturally like to see the growing army of Federal employes concentrating on the jobs for which they are paid. But as head of the dominant political party he is fearful that this would painfully interfere with the effectiveness of those accustomed to spend their leisure hours laboring in the Democratic vineyard.

It is, however, exceedingly difficult for Mr. Roosevelt as President to become articulate on the objections to the bill which loom in the mind of Mr. Roosevelt as politician. This creates such a confusing situation that one is tempted to recall Stevenson's parable and refer to Jekyll Roosevelt in thinking of the President, who wants the Hatch bill, as distinct from Hyde Roosevelt who, as politician, profoundly does not want it. The terminology, of course, has no bearing except as a means of clarification.

Hyde Roosevelt, if we may so distinguish, has already made several rather fatuous attempts to discredit the Hatch bill. He has referred to it as extremely vague, has shown unusual anxiety about its constitutionality and has questioned whether it would even permit Federal employes to make wholly voluntary contributions to a political party.

Unfortunately, Jekyll Roosevelt, to pursue our fantastic parallel, knows that these criticisms are all so much flimflam. He fully realizes that the Hatch bill, far from being vague, is very precise in the way it would extend the civil service ban on political activities. Doubtless he also remembers his own advice to Congress to pass meritorious legislation which he favors and let the Supreme Court worry about the constitutionality. And, finally, the President knows perfectly well that he himself promulgated the admirable civil service regulations, governing the political activities of classified employes, which the Hatch bill merely makes applicable to employes still outside the service.

It is therefore a dismal task for Hyde Roosevelt, the political boss, to construct a veto-message—and it must be drafted before Thursday if at all — to which Jekyll Roosevelt, as forward-looking President of the United States, could conscientiously and honorably attach his signature. Considering the difficulty in all its magnitude it is small wonder that the fish enjoyed more of a vacation than did the premier fisherman, off Ocean City, Md., last week-end.

Panama And Hungary

With characteristic dilatoriness, the Senate ratified our treaty with Panama three years after its negotiation. In addition to important provisions relating to the defense of the Canal Zone, the treaty provides for a settlement of the dispute over the annual rental due Panama for the Canal Zone. Under the treaty of 1903 this compensation was fixed at $250,000 yearly, but after devaluation of the dollar payment was tendered in depreciated currency, which Panama properly refused to accept.

The justice of Panama's demand to be paid in currency equivalent to the amount fixed by the original agreement in terms of gold is obvious. Our moral obligation to make that payment is likewise plain. Even on purely selfish grounds, furthermore, the United States is well advised to avoid sharp dealings in financial transactions with the debtor nations of Latin America.

Our reward in this instance will be direct and immediate, as Panama is prepared to resume interest payments on outstanding dollar bonds and to make provision for unpaid interest in addition.

The satisfactory settlement of our financial differences with Panama is a reminder that Congress has refused to take cognizance of an offer by Hungary to effect a compromise settlement of her debt to this country. For a year and a half Hungary has been making partial payments on the relief debt owing to the United States. More than a year ago the Hungarian Government suggested the terms on which it would be prepared to settle, and President Roosevelt transmitted the plan to Congress for its consideration. But no reply to these overtures has been forthcoming, probably because Congress fears that the negotiation of a Hungarian debt settlement would reopen the whole debt issue.

Refusing to face that issue, however, merely postpones the day when something must be done about inter-governmental debts. Our relations with Panama will certainly be on a friendlier footing because of removal of financial friction. Similarly our relations with Hungary and other debtor States would be much more satisfactory if Congress would face realities and effect a composition of claims against them.

Attention has frequently been called to the irreconcilability of export subsidization with the efforts of the Department of State to lower trade barriers by means of reciprocal trade pacts. Now another conspicuous inter-departmental conflict is developing as a result of the application of export subsidies to cotton shipments to Japan. The Department of Agriculture, indeed, announced its intention to subsidize cotton exports only a few days prior to Secretary Hull's denunciation of our commercial treaty with Japan.

It is generally assumed that the latter action is at least in part designed to clear the way for imposition of an embargo upon shipments of war materials to Japan. Yet, during the six months that precede the lapse of the treaty, the Department of Agriculture will be offering Japan inducements to increase her purchases of raw cotton, a vital material for the conduct of modern warfare. There is, of course, no ground for discrimination against Japan, so far as the Department of Agriculture is concerned. On the contrary, that country has every right to expect to share in the benefits of this subsidized exporting at Government expense.

It is futile to try to estimate the amount of the largesse which our Government will bestow upon Japan during the next six months by means of these subsidies. For to a large extent they will merely offset abnormally high domestic prices resulting from our restrictionist policies. What the subsidy does is to give our cotton growers competitive equality with those of other countries in the Japanese market. For that they are grateful to the Department of Agriculture, as Japan is an excellent customer whose loss of patronage would be seriously felt. By the same token, American cotton interests are at the moment disposed to turn cold eyes upon the Department of State.

To the Japanese the whole procedure must be rather bewildering. They undoubtedly have a very clear understanding of what underlies denunciation of the commercial treaty, despite assertions to the contrary. But they have good cause to marvel at our lack of co-ordination in matters of external policy. How is it possible, they may politely wonder, for one executive department in this country to take steps looking toward severance of commercial relationships while another department bestows bounties for their purchase of a commodity very important for the prosecution of the aggression in China.

Smart Politics, Too

Because of the broad experience gained while High Commissioner to the Philippines, Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt speaks with a real measure of authority on the issues of American foreign policy.

At Manila, Mr. McNutt had an excellent opportunity, ably seized, to acquaint himself with the actual and potential ramifications of American power and influence, and to realize impossibility of insulating this Nation against the political and economic tempests that sweep the world. The more noteworthy, therefore, is his profound conviction that American self-interest demands the exertion of steady influence by the United States "in favor of non-warlike powers."

Nor is the statement made by Mr. McNutt in Cleveland Sunday, in support of the Administration's foreign policy, any the less significant because it comes from one whose political aspirations are not concealed from voters with average vision. The new Security Administrator evidently believes that a strong stand by the United States in behalf of peace is not only good sense but also good politics.

The point which an increasingly large number of Americans realize is that support rendered nations seeking to preserve peace, as against those which employ war as an instrument of policy, is no act of charity. Mr. McNutt is thus taking a popular line, isolationists in Congress to the contrary notwithstanding, when he says: that by so doing "we are not assisting any other country as much as we are assisting ourselves."

"A crocodile is harmless as long as he is occupied," says an explorer. Still, we shan't take any chances on becoming the occupant.

"A worm familiarly known as thyridopteryxphemeralformis is a deadly enemy of evergreens."—Science note. Familiarly known by whom?

"A storekeeper ran 35 cents up to $7,000 at a Rumanian casino and then dropped dead." You just can't win.

This country might not be in the mess it's in if the Indians had had stricter immigration laws.

Business is looking up for those who are looking it up.

Keep The Anthem

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I read with some amusement, not unmixed with concern, certain letters advocating the substitution of some other air for our national anthem.

The words of "The Star-Spangled Banner" were written in the heat of battle. They express with eloquent fervor an ardent love for the flag. The tune is inspiring, even though it may be an old English drinking song, as is claimed. To condemn it on that ground, and at the same time advocate instead the substitution of "America," appears absurd. The latter tune is identical with that of "God Save the King," the sentiments of which are obviously inimical to those of a free America.

Let's at least be consistent. I do not condemn "America" as a patriotic number, for it is one of my favorite songs, but I see no sense in substituting it as a national anthem. Who has not thrilled, even from infancy, to the inspiring strains of "The Star-Spangled Banner," as played by some local band in an Independence Day or other patriotic celebration? It has stood the test of years, and it was not until these ultra modern days that we heard complaints relative to its unsuitability as a national anthem.

Various reasons are advanced for the use of substitutes. "It is hard for the average person to sing the tune." Why try? The average person cannot sing anyway. He would do much better listening. It is claimed that the musical artists themselves have difficulty in attaining the entire range of notes in the air of the song. Who are these artists? The vocal contortionists to whose weird sounds we are treated nightly on our radios?

No doubt, a number of persons would prefer as a national anthem one which could be syncopated to swing time, or otherwise mutilated. This, too, is understandable, and for such vandals I feel only a deep pity; for from their perverted viewpoint melody is valueless.

Echoes Of Encomiums

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In spite of the pre-arranged "Garner-Hurrah" hooey emanating from Capitol Hill after the outspoken and truthful statements of Mr. John L. Lewis against the "Garner anti-labor" clique, I and many millions of wage-earners did not participate in the Congressional baloney. In fact we were reading the press accounts of the incident on the street, feeling nothing but proud that we have a man in these United States who has at last called the bluff of the worst reactionary bloc ever to grace or rather discredit the Congress of the United States.

All power to John L. Lewis; too bad the interests have got hold of his adversary, William Green. Let the labor-hating Congressional seat-warmers applaud Mr. Garner. The man and woman on the street know only too well that John L. Lewis spoke the truth.

JOHN H. DWYER.
Washington, July 28.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: When I noted the mud-slinging remark of John L. Lewis about our Vice President, John N. Garner, I recalled complaints that came to Abraham Lincoln about Gen. Grant being a "whisky-drinking" general. The retort of Lincoln was that he would like to know the brand of whisky used by his one uniformly successful general and recommend it to others who were consistent failures. We must judge statesmen as well as generals by value of service and importance of results for their country and not by their particular recreations and refreshments. And in distinguished service to his Nation and party, Mr. Garner is pre-eminent, and as sound and wholesome an asset to his country's well-being as John L. Lewis is a dangerous liability.

Mr. Garner seems a good example of simple, temperate living and of the old adage—"early to bed and early to rise, makes a man healthy, wealthy and wise." That is why even though elderly, he shows vigor, wisdom and efficiency in daytime hours, and in sleep soon after night comes, gets real substantial refreshment for an unusually sound mind in a sound body. Any "evil" that Mr. Lewis sees in him must be only such evil as he himself in his own rambunctious mind sees in a courageous, unbought patriotic statesman. HENRY D. BAKER.
Durham, N. C., July 29.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I wish to congratulate Mr. John L. Lewis for his sincere lashing of Garner. What Mr. Lewis told Garner is the truth and the latter had it coming to him for a long time. The Garner-crats "deeply resented" Lewis' speech. Why shouldn't they?

Lewis ripped the mask off their faces, so that the whole world can see just what they are and whom they represent. The Garner-crats also say that as the result of Lewis' speech, Garner will get at least 2,000,000 more votes. This may be so but as a result of Lewis' speech he will also lose about 30,000,000 votes. For it was not Mr. Lewis that was speaking. It was the exploited American masses that were expressing themselves indignantly against their enemies.

MRS. J. B. DAVIS.
Washington, July 28.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Perhaps John L. Lewis can explain that he was simply demonstrating to the world that the United States is the greatest remaining stronghold of free speech.

Perhaps he can justify his "personal attack" in a personal defense against a very nice case of slander. Or did the ". . . quivering, pulsating heart of labor" bring enough tears to his eyes to blind him to that possibility? If that laborious heart didn't do a couple of flip-flops the other day, I'm very much mistaken. One begins to wonder just exactly who does hold the knife which is seeking its destruction.

And poor Mr. Garner! John, m'boy, you would be amazed if you only knew how indifferent Mr. Garner can afford to be to limelight prophets, sarcastic charlatans and fire-eating fishmongers. But cheer up. You might have something on that ". . . debasing American stuff."

Let's see. Who are these 'debased people? Ah, yes—". . . debasing sheepmen and cattlemen in Texas . . ." Texans, huh? My, my! Aren't they the same fellows who have kept Mr. Garner in Congressional office for the past 30-odd years?

MISS ETTA STONE.
Washington, July 28.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I think John L. Lewis is a disgrace to the United States of America. The man behind prison bars is a saint by the side of any man who will make the remarks about our Vice President that he did.

Speaking of dictators and Nazi spies, if Lewis could have his way he would wreck the United States and give the leavings to Germany. He is the guy who means to rule or ruin. And if I were at the head of a Government like the United States I would handle that gentleman just as Al Capone was handled.

H. H. SLAUGHTER.
Abilene, Tex., July 28.

Hoover Vs. Hull?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have no doubt Mr. Roosevelt wants a third term and is trying for it. I don't believe he will be his party's nominee next year because I don't believe the Democratic Party intends to commit suicide.

If we are lucky in 1940 the nominees will be Herbert Hoover on the Republican ticket, Cordell Hull on the Democratic ticket.

That would assure us a campaign upon the highest plane—relatively free from sectional, racial or personal bitterness. It would give us a choice between two leaders of loftiest character, amplest knowledge of both foreign and domestic problems, commanding intellect—in short, two statesmen of the first rank.

Either could be trusted, if elected, to fulfill in office his pledge given the people to get there. Either could be trusted to safeguard the rights and liberties of the people, and to defend our basic institution of private property. Either could be trusted to maintain, with courage and dignity, the rights and legitimate interests of Americans abroad as at home.

Either could be trusted to lead in restoring that faith in free enterprise which is essential to revive normal business and industrial prosperity, provide real jobs for the idle, and halt the country's present drift toward national bankruptcy. Under either's leadership the country's sense of living in a perpetual crisis would be happily ended.

Both parties have several leaders of Presidential caliber. Hoover and Hull, above all others, possess and symbolize the qualities of leadership supremely needed by the American people in this period. I hope to see Mr. Hoover elected to his second and last term next year. But, if any Democratic Party nominee can be elected, which I doubt, that man, in my opinion, is Cordell Hull, of Tennessee.

FRANK PUTNAM.
Houston, Tex., July 27.

Surpluses And Hunger

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Exception is taken to the editorial, entitled, "A Momentous Precedent," in The Post of July 28.

Two of the most serious problems facing our Government and generation are: (1) The provision of greater stability for our agricultural economy through the creation of adequate markets for the consumption of huge, unsalable surpluses of staple farm commodities; and (2) the amelioration of malnutrition which has prevailed amongst our low-income and relief elements throughout the past seven years. The economic implications of the former have long been apparent to all; the social consequences of the latter should be equally obvious.

The Department of Agriculture's stamp plan may prove to be a heavy factor in the solution of both problems. If extensively employed, it may eventually furnish a stable domestic market for our surplus farm commodities and simultaneously achieve a vital social objective by providing more adequate sustenance for our undernourished elements.

The plan possesses definite political implications—but not those which intrigue The Post. The only political conclusion tenable is that any technique which will stabilize our agriculture and more adequately sustain our underprivileged groups will also strengthen our democracy.

It would be futile to regard the stamp plan in its present incipient stage as the long awaited panacea for our social and economic ailments. On the other hand, a great metropolitan newspaper like The Post might better serve the public interest by withholding its fire until evidence of failure is forthcoming. It is just possible that the Department of Agriculture understands our agrarian problems quite as profoundly as do our editors and publishers. GEORGE ST. LOUIS.
Washington, July 28.

The Post Impressionist

Quote, Unquote

ONE OF the delectable adjuncts of the art of writing is the pleasure of quotation, especially in the field of the familiar essay, where both reader and writer are free to wander around in the asphodel meadows. An essay is something of an excursion, and a good quotation is often a welcome opportunity for the writer and reader to refresh themselves. If the quotation is an apt one and has some bearing on the discussion, so much the better. But aside from aptness, a quotation serves the same purpose as a good story in a speech. The speech may even conceivably be a good one, but when the speaker says, "That reminds me of a story," even though he may drag it in by its hoary locks, the audience begins to wake up and perhaps to listen.

Not long ago I read a book that was nearly half quotation. I'll admit that is going too far, even though the selections were quite worth while per se. On the other hand, how many more books have I read so devoid of quotations and even allusions as to seem disgustingly independent, the author sublimely oblivious to the possibility that others may have written on the subject, or else fearsome that quoting would disparage his own integrity as the one and only authority.

The truth is also that there are many people, as the essayist C. E. Montague once memorably put it, "going up and down this well-read world with literary luggage so meager that it is hardly worth putting up in the rack." These people, I deem, should not try to be writers, for their words will lack perspective. Their pages will gleam with no bright coin of the realm; they deign to wear no borrowed plumes. To use a phrase of Edward Fitzgerald's, they have no "friends on the shelf." Their message will reek with specious originality.

It is as if they said, "the best that has been thought and said thus far in the world is no concern of mine. Readers will surely think I am original." But readers are not fooled so easily. They know that originality of thought is a rare phenomenon and can not be assumed merely by the omission of quotation marks. According to Lord Grey it was Isaac Disraeli who said, "He who is not familiarized with the finest passages of the finest writers will one day be mortified to observe that his best thoughts are their indifferent ones."

Apropos, I recently came across an interesting comparison in the writings of that beloved American naturalist Bradford Torrey. He was speaking of the writing of Hawthorne and Thoreau. Hawthorne's work, he said, "is all of a piece, woven in his own loom. As nobody quotes him, so he quotes nobody. Inverted commas are as scarce on his pages as November violets are in the Concord meadows. You will find them, but you will have to search for them. On Thoreau's page they are thick as violets in May." Yet Thoreau is known as an "original."

Quoting is, after all, a rather popular diversion. Think of the innumerable commonplace books and scrapbooks, all designed to facilitate quick reference, the contents to be miscellaneously exhumed for the unsuspecting listener or reader. Think of the anthologies of poetry and prose—quotations en masse—that are published every year. Here before me, for example, are "A Garden of Peonies," a collection of Chinese poetry; "Eros," an anthology of modern love poems; "51 Neglected Lyrics"; "A Gathering of Birds," an ornithological anthology — books all published fairly recently. I have noticed, too, the frequency of such problems as "Identify the following quotation" on a current radio program. There are even compilers of quotations, who have produced such indispensable compendia as "Bartlett's Familiar Quotations."

We are, indeed, a people given to eclecticism, sometimes for its own sake. Quotation for its own sake does seem to have its points. I have read many a magazine article that needed one or two perfunctory interpolations. How refreshing it would be, for instance, in reading a piece on, say, "The Future of the Republican Party" to come suddenly on Edwin Arlington Robinson's poem "Mr. Flood's Party"—"with only two moons listening." And if I were writing an article on "The Decline of Religion," I know I'd be tempted to stop short somewhere and quote one of Robert Nathan's sonnets, probably the one called "Aique Vale," ending with that indescribable line—"And sorrow like a moth is folded up."

If my thesis, perchance, was on the topic of "Quotations, Pro and Con," I'd probably somehow for no good reason work in—well, it might be something of Sidney Lanier's or A. E. Housman's or Hary Webb's or George Gissing's, but on the other hand it might be those verses of Stoddard King's, "The World Is Old," which I've been itching to quote these many months:

The world is old, and sad, and very wise,
And has no time to hear what birds are singing;
It has no time to look into the eyes
Of the slow years that come, all knowledge bringing.
The world believes no more, it thinks it knows
Whatever may be known; but its tired mind
Forgets the message that the dawn-wind blows—
The world is very wise, and very blind.
We burn: the flame is cold; we see the dust.
The dents in heroes' armor, and their scars.
But not the lances that the angels thrust
In everlasting war beyond the stars!

In the modicum of prose that I have written in my meager span of years I have done considerable quoting. (My wife keeps saying that my tongue must be quoted.) But it is such a delectable pastime—I have even been caught quoting myself with unfeigned enjoyment—that I'm afraid I shall never outgrow it, not until, perhaps, writing ceases to be a pleasure and becomes a burden. In the meantime I have several anthologies planned to contain the overflow of underquoted literature in my self-imposed custody. PAUL H. OEHSER.

Fair Enough

Press Censorship

A STRANGE story appears in the New York Times under the signature of Raymond Daniell and a New Orleans date line. Daniell, an expert on political corruption in Louisiana, reports that Rene Viosca, the Federal district attorney, warned reporters that they would be cited for contempt if they published the names of any more witnesses called before the Federal grand jury in the National Government's investigation of political thievery.

Some of them, at least, already had published the fact of former Gov. Dick Leche's appearance, and, I believe, in so doing, had violated a censorship established some time before, ostensibly in the public interest.

"The reason given for the censorship," Daniell says, "was that publication of the names of witnesses might help guilty persons cover up their tracks."

He added, however, that "in spite of the failure of the newspapers to report that subpenas had struck in high places, the corridors of the City Hall and the lobbies of hotels buzzed with the news. It was whispered on the street corners and in the bars" and "one newsboy shouted the names of two witnesses, although the papers he was selling were barren of any information about it."

Well, what goes on here anyway?

Legality Of Order Should Be Tested

IN VIEW of the fact that Federal district attorneys and judges are political appointees, in view of the bad past record of the New Deal on corruption in Louisiana and, again, in view of the fact that this present expose of rottenness involving political allies of the Federal Administration was started by newspaper initiative, does anyone feel obliged to believe that this censorship is imposed in the public interest? Aside from the legality of the order, which is questionable and should be challenged by an overt act by some newspaper for the purpose of a test, the claim that it was made in the public interest should be weighed against the obvious fact that it could have been made for a reason exactly opposite. Secrecy and censorship also have been used to enable guilty persons to cover up their tracks, and Mr. Viosca and Frank Murphy, himself, may be reminded that the record of the Department of Justice in previous charges against at least one individual involved in the present affair, is not so hot, containing as it does, the explanation that indictments were dismissed because of "a change of atmosphere."

Mess Could Be Smelled Far Away

THE RECORD of the newspapers, on the other hand, is pretty good. What were the Department of Justice and the Interior Department, both having special interests and duties in the situation and each having its own Gestapo, doing about all this up to the time that the newspapers smelled out this dead mule and told them where to find it And certainly Mr. Murphy deceived himself if he thinks that he, a New Deal politician, repudiated by his own electorate and appointed to his present job for political reasons, is above a suspicion of political interest in a case involving men who have been New Dealers, too, in their own crude, larcenous way, since that remarkable "change of atmosphere." Murphy, the Department of Justice and every other official and Government department connected with this case, not excepting honest Harold Ickes, the House dick, will be watched this time and there is no obligation on anyone to accept any professed motives for smothering information.

Mighty damn funny, it seems to me, that Viosca, Murphy and Ickes, with all their young King Bradys and legal authority, couldn't smell out this further change of atmosphere in Louisiana under the New Deal until it was waved under their noses by some newspaper reporters. But let this be understood that the political circumstances of this job and the story of past performances made for unusual skepticism.

Do they mean to tell us they didn't suspect a thing until they read it in the papers? Why, you could smell that mess away up here!

Labor Peace Seen if Ranks Demand It

C. I. O. Leader Asserts Healing of Split Would End Wagner Act Fight

By the Associated Press

The president of the C. I. O. union suggested yesterday, and some Senators agreed, that the split in the ranks of organized labor could be healed if the rank and file demanded peace.

The matter came up while Mervyn Rathborne, of New York, president of the C. I. O.'s American Communications Association, was opposing any change in the Wagner act or the labor board before a Senate sub-committee.

Opposing the A. F. L.'s proposal that employers be given the right to advise their employes on labor matters, Rathborne advocated making the present ban on coercion by employers more rigid and said the need for any change would be eliminated by "reuniting the ranks of labor."

"How can that be done?" inquired Senator Ellender (Democrat), of Louisiana.

"The basic approach," Rathborne replied, "should be from the bottom up, instead of from the top down."

"If the locals say they want it, they can get it," Ellender agreed. "They ought to be able to force the leaders to join up together or else get rid of someone—if you know what I mean."

The proposed amendments also were opposed by Powers Hapgood, national director of the United Shoe Workers of America, and H. J. Straub, organizational director of the Amalgamated Utility Workers, both C. I. O. affiliates.

Hapgood said the amendments would hinder efforts to raise wages in the shoe industry, where he asserted the average annual wage was $880. Straub accused A. F. L. officials of advocating the amendments "to persuade Congress to legalize the illegal tactics used for their benefit" in the case of the Consolidated Edison Co. of New York.

Straub said Consolidated Edison actively assisted in organizing the A. F. L.'s International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers to thwart the C. I. O., and that the brotherhood's membership numbered only five of the company's thousands of employes when Floyd L. Carlisle granted it recognition.

Since then, Straub said, Consolidated Edison has laid off 7,000 employes without a protest from the union.

House Passes Bill Extending CCC

A bill extending the life of the Civilian Conservation Corps until July 1, 1943, was passed by the House yesterday and sent to the Senate.

The Labor Committee previously had set July 1, 1945 as the date, but Chairman Norton (Democrat), of New Jersey, said Republicans objected that before that time conditions might be so changed as to make the corps unnecessary.

Under existing law the CCC is scheduled to expire December 31, 1939.

D. C. Tightens Residence Relief Rules

Only Persons Living In District a Year Declared Eligible

Only persons who have lived in the District for at least one year, and who have been self-supporting for at least one year of their residence here, could receive public assistance from the District, under provisions of a policy statement recommended to the Commissioners yesterday by the Board of Public Welfare.

Public assistance was defined to include home relief, institutional care and child placement services. The only exceptions to the policy were the Social Security categories in which relief is granted subject to special laws, and admissions of incapacitated for aged persons to the Home for the Aged and Infirm when no other residence can be established.

Conditions clarifying the policy:

Employment on WPA projects in the District is to be considered as receiving public relief.

A mental patient does not acquire settlement for purposes of public assistance or care here if on parole or furlough from an institution in another State. A person presumed to be a mental case before coming here will not be entitled to long-time hospitalization in the District.

Minors under 21 may not acquire settlement for public assistance except if they are emancipated minors between 18 and 21 who have demonstrated their ability to support themselves successfully during the year preceding dependency.

A person absent from the District 12 months shall be deemed to have lost his residence here.

It was indicated that the policy follows that already in force, although the new regulations, the first ever to be published in a written declaration, are somewhat more stringent than existing procedure.

In cases not readily handled by the new policy and where special consideration is indicated, a seven-man board was recommended, consisting of four public welfare board representatives, and one representative each from the Commission on Mental Health, the Health Department and the Juvenile Court.

Varicose Veins Traced To Standing Housework

Los Angeles, July 31 (INS).—Principal reason for varicose veins in women is the fact they stand too long on their feet doing housework, Dr. D. E. Beaman told 1,500 delegates at the opening today of the American Progressive Chiropractic Association's sixteenth annual convention.

Women should do less work in the house, rest more, take more recreation and relaxation to preserve their health, Dr. Beaman added.

Hughes' 1924 View On Land Discovery Baffles Expedition

By the Associated Press

Some officials preparing the way for the Government's Antarctic expedition believe the United States will have to eat a few of the words about Antarctic claims which Charles Evans Hughes set down when he was Secretary of State.

Discussing a possible United States claim to Wilkes Land in the Antarctic, Hughes wrote in 1924 that "the discovery of lands unknown to civilization, even when coupled with a formal taking of possession, does not support a valid claim to sovereignty unless the discovery is followed by an actual settlement of the discovered country."

The American expedition, leaving in October, will settle in the Antarctic for possibly a year, and undoubtedly will lay claim to hundreds of thousands of square miles of territory. But, the officials continued:

"What is the United States going to do after that? Must we keep Americans in the Antarctic for years to come in order to validate our claim?"

Some would like to substitute occupation—not necessarily continuous and permanent—for Hughes' idea of "actual settlement."

President Paying Price

By Mark Sullivan

Aware Of Moods

FOR THE extraordinary series of reverses President Roosevelt is suffering, there are many reasons. Any attempt, at this time, to set down all the reasons and give to each its relative weight, would be incomplete and inexact. Only after the passage of months, perhaps years, will it be possible to make exact analysis of the forces contributing to this remarkable situation.

Possibly a survey made after the lapse of time will reveal a reason existing now—but not recognized now. Possibly there may be throughout the country a disillusionment about the New Deal that is still latent and will only show itself fully in next year's election. It may be the Congressmen who are voting against Mr. Roosevelt's measures sense the changed mood of the country before it is generally recognized. Congressmen do not lack intuition about public psychology.

Some of them are as expert as Mr. Roosevelt, whose frequent answer, to Democratic leaders urging him to change his course, has been to say that he knows public psychology better than they do. Practically every one of the Congressmen now voting against Mr. Roosevelt's measures will come up for renomination next spring.

It is tenable to assume these Congressmen are aware of the mood of their districts, and know what they are doing.

One cause of the President's debacle seems plain. Mr. Roosevelt is paying the price of failure—and the price, also, of a self-confidence greater in promise than in performance. It is almost six years since Mr. Roosevelt, in a "fireside talk," October 22, 1933, gave out a singularly forthright promise to raise the prices of farm crops: "If we cannot do this one way, we will do it another; do it we will."

Farm Products Prices Lower

ONLY A PERSON having extreme self-confidence would have made so specific a promise—Mr. Roosevelt talked as if prices were as much under his personal control as an ordinary future engagement he might make.

And there is that in Mr. Roosevelt's buoyance of personality which causes hearers to see even more in his promises than is in the actual words of them. This trait in the President may have been a help to the country when it was in despair and needed hope. But there is no cause of tragedy more common than for a man, intentionally, to inspire expectations greater than he later fulfills.

Today, the farmers who built up great expectations based on Mr. Roosevelt's promise, see practically every major crop lower in price than on the day Mr. Roosevelt said, "do it we will."

As farmers feel, so must the unemployed. The quantity of unemployment today is not as great as when Mr. Roosevelt took office. But it is great; and the victims of it must feel let down. Mr. Roosevelt himself would feel let down, if he were not temperamentally immune to discouragement. If anyone had told Mr. Roosevelt, on the day he took office, March 4, 1933, that six and a half years afterward there would still be 10,000,000 unemployed, Mr. Roosevelt would have laughed at any such doubter of his optimism.

The optimism Mr. Roosevelt himself had, he somehow radiated to the country. Today we see a disillusionment the more extreme because it is the result of an optimism that was likewise extreme.

$20,000,000,000 Added To Nation's Deficit

ABOUT THE FISCAL aspect of government, it is the same. Seven years ago, Mr. Roosevelt, then a candidate for the Presidency, was bitterly attacking the then President, Mr. Hoover, because of a very mild spending and lending Mr. Hoover had practiced, to soften the blows of the depression.

Against Mr. Hoover's spending and lending, Mr. Roosevelt cried out, almost as if Mr. Hoover had been guilty of a personal shame. Of Mr. Hoover, Mr. Roosevelt said: "I accuse the Hoover administration of being the greatest spending administration in peace time in all history . . . For three long years, the Federal Government has been on the road to bankruptcy." And for himself, Mr. Roosevelt promised: "It is my pledge and promise that rigid governmental economy shall be enforced by a stern and unremitting Administration policy of living within our income . . . Stop the deficits!"

Today, Mr. Hoover's three long years of deficits have become Mr. Roosevelt's seven long years, and sure to be eight. To Mr. Hoover's four billions of deficits, Mr. Roosevelt has added twenty. This condition alone, this record, is enough to explain why Congress hesitates to entrust Mr. Roosevelt with yet another three billions.

Inability to live up to promises may arise from many causes; and might be overlooked by a loyal Congress and generous people. Mr. Roosevelt might have been wiser had he, when payday for his promises came, practiced candor. It was of his farm program that he said, when he sent it to Congress, March 16, 1933: "I tell you frankly that it a new and untrod path . . . If a fair administrative trial of it is made and it does not produce the hoped-for results, I shall be the first to acknowledge it and advise you."

About the failure of fiscal promises to come true, Mr. Roosevelt did not explain nor excuse. He and the New Dealers invented new terms. Part of what they had denounced as "Government spending," when they were seeking power, they now call "Government investing," and praise it as laudable. Another new term is "lending." But what they now call lending is the same thing they called "spending" seven years ago, when they said it must stop.

Body Blow

Japan And America's Action

FAR FROM calming the troubled waters of Anglo-Japanese relations, Great Britain's recognition of the "special requirements" of the Japanese army in China has only stirred up a new tempest.

This is not surprising. The formula agreed upon by the London and Tokyo governments as the basis for a settlement of the Tientsin dispute is as vague in meaning as it is broad in language. To Messrs. Chamberlain and Halifax it only means that Great Britain recognizes the fact that a war is raging in the Far East and that in fighting this war the Japanese may have to take certain measures for the "safeguarding of their own security and maintaining public order in the regions under their control."

It does not mean, the prime minister informed the House of Commons, any basic change in British policy in China, any de facto or de jure recognition of Japanese sovereignty over the conquered areas or any abandonment of British rights and interests.

THE JAPANESE do not see it that way at all. They regard last month's agreement as a capitulation in principle, the inevitable result of which must be a capitulation in fact. And they have begun to act on the assumption that this surrender of British rights and interests in China will not be contested.

Possibly they are not so sure of this as they were before the abrogation by the United States of the 1911 commercial treaty. For the effect of that action may be to stiffen the British will to resist.

There is no mistaking the fact that Great Britain finds herself in a very difficult and very awkward position in the Far East. As between a sacrifice of her very considerable interests in eastern Asia and any weakening of her defensive position in Europe she will choose, as she has chosen, the former course, unpleasant through it is. Since the undeclared war began in July, 1937, she has fought a rear guard action to save what she can of her stake in China.

THE TASK has not been easy and the British have had to put up with endless indignities. But as long as she has to watch Hitler and Mussolini in Europe, Great Britain is compelled to retreat in the Far East. Her only hope is that this retreat will not be precipitous or final.

In other words the London government is willing to pay handsomely for any respite in the Far East that would enable it to concentrate its undivided attention on Europe. It is not willing, however, to agree to any unconditional surrender. Practical considerations as well as reasons of prestige would make such a course disastrous.

It is for this reason that all through the negotiations over the Tientsin episode the British have tried to narrow the issue as much as possible and when forced to agree to a general formula saw to it that it was as vague as possible.

THE JAPANESE, for their part, are obviously not averse to applying the London-Tokyo formula in the broadest possible manner so as to bring closer the day of their unquestioned domination of eastern Asia. And America's action shows that time is pressing.

It is hardly surprising that the abrogation of the 1911 treaty produced consternation in Tokyo. In the first place it has brought home to the Japanese who have been sedulously duncoed with propaganda designed to convince them of America's "friendliness," the realities of American opinion regarding Japan's conduct in the undeclared war.

Secondly, it now definitely opens up the possibility of embargo action by the United States which could seriously cripple the Japanese war machine. And, last, but not least, the stand taken by the United States is almost certain to encourage the other powers with interests in China, notably Great Britain and France, to take a stronger stand as it has encouraged China to continue its resistance.

SINCE SIX MONTHS must elapse before the 1911 treaty actually expires, the danger of American embargo action lies in the future. A stiffening of British policy is, however, a present possibility. No doubt, that is why the Tokyo government is eager to squeeze the Anglo-Japanese agreement of every immediate advantage. Hence, the blockade of Shameen (Canton), the renewed pressure on the International Settlement at Shanghai and the demand for the surrender by Great Britain of Chinese silver reserve deposited in the British and the French concessions at Tientsin as support for Chinese government currency. Hence, also, the mass meetings at Tokyo yesterday at which speakers accused Great Britain of refusing to live up to the spirit of the July agreement and the new demonstrations in front of the British embassy.

THE NEXT six or eight weeks may be crucial so far as the peace of Europe is concerned. The Japanese know it. They have been prepared to reap the harvest of uncertainty sowed by Hitler and Mussolini. They have reckoned on the inability of the Government of the United States, hampered by isolationist sentiment in Congress, to take any strong action in defense of American interests in the Far East. They knew that British capacity for resisting their pressure was limited. They are now undergoing a process of disillusionment. But if the cause is a bold stroke by the United States the consequence is a new wave of bitterness and renewed pressure against Great Britain.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Portrait

This doll is very, very ah!
A maiden quite petite,
And it's your head she thinks about,
Your Stetson's curly seat.
She's not the queen Troy's Helen was,
Regally born and bred;
But queen indeed, of a space confined
And watching ev'ry head.
About those ships she wouldn't know,
But smiles with ruby lips.
And every night as she checks your hat,
She launches a thousand tips.
—Brian Mack.

It is a subject of much surprise that a county judge in Brooklyn gets $25,000 a year while a senior judge of the United States District Court is paid only $12,500. Elmer Twitchell explains it on the ground it is harder to get a judge to work outside America.

Listening to some of those wordy commercials on autos and beer that are heard on the radio, Mr. Twitchell was moved to suggest a couple of new ones last evening. For a beer sponsor he suggested "The beer of today and the headache of tomorrow." And for an automobile "Thumb your way all the way."

Taxicab company officials say they paid a New York legislator $36,000. Maybe this is one reason why their drivers never have change for anything bigger than a dollar bill.

Here it is getting closer and closer to 1940 and not a candidate has turned up with a smile or a radio voice that can even give Mr. Roosevelt a workout.

Our idea of a glutton for punishment is the fellow who plans to take in all the World's Fairs.

HOW WOULD you like to spend the summer on an island? If you want seclusion you will find it here, and how! Only half a mile from mainland, as the bull flies; the charm of this place has been written up in House & Garden, Field & Stream, The American Home and a dozen other magazines; and still nobody rents it. Fresh water available by mail at any time; milkman and grocer calls July 20, August 15 and September 1. Write us about this place and consider it a break if we don't answer. Wigwell Agency.

SALE, RENT OR RAFFLE.—Wonderful cottage so near the water it is practically a houseboat; has nine rooms and eight oars; tide table in every room; gas range, electric icebox, radio and lifebelts; eccentric neighbors guaranteed; mattresses stuffed with elamrakes; owner constructed this as his dream cottage and then went mad in his sleep. Might consider barter. O'Hara, Bernbloom & Perkins.

"Mayor LaGuardia flies in police plane"—headline. How can anybody tell when Fiorello is in a plane from when he is up in the air in his usual way?

The talk of the turf world is the comeback of Fighting Fox. Thought to be a world-beater as a 2-year-old he was a big disappointment. This season he was an in and outer. Then he won a big 6-furlong sprint and broke the record in New York and went up to Boston where he won a mile and an eighth against the best horses in training, and did it easily. His erratic form is attributed to the fact he has crooked legs. But that can't be it. Some of our best friends have crooked legs.

In Elmer Twitchell's opinion, Paul C. McNutt will never win the Presidency, nominated or not. He is too good looking, too smooth and, has been too successful in life. The voters demand at least a wart, an occasional show of clumsiness and a feeling that a candidate has known what it means to have a struggle in life.

Epitaph for Brownstone Houses

You don't remember them—their somber grace
And how they stood together, unafraid
So close the street, abreast and face to face
Like tidied ladies watching a parade?

You never knew those long deep-polished halls,
High-ceilinged rooms with their inviting grace,
And chandeliers that tinkled like a falls—
Their hundred prisms hanging bright as ice?

And held behind their skirts for a surprise
Were little gardens, quite alike as they;
Cool vistas for the city-weary eyes—
Fenced high about—completely tucked away;

The square of grass, lone tree, and the uneven
Path of broken flagstones at one side
That led to nowhere; but a bit of heaven
Was here protected from the city's tide.

Some had their faces lifted—bold as brass!
But most preferred demolishment, content
To choose complete oblivion, than pass
Humiliating years with "Rooms to Rent."
—Muriel Anne Alderson.

An $8,200,000 office building, 12 stories high, is under construction at the site of the old McLean mansion, Vermont avenue and H street northwest, shown above. Hundreds of office workers in the neighborhood observe the progress of the work daily from the "Sidewalk Foremen's Clubs" (encircled). At left—Brick work is near completion on the new Doctor's Hospital on I street between Eighteenth and Nineteenth streets northwest. Below—Excavation has been started at Second and B streets southwest in the first step toward building the $10,815,000 Social Security and Railroad Retirement Board Building. Old houses which line the site are being razed preparatory to the start of construction

Jam District Building to File Tax Returns

Eleventh hour

—Between 4,000 and 5,000 persons waited until the last minute yesterday to file their personal tangible property tax returns at the assessor's office at the District Building. More than 1,600 persons passed in front of the collector's office to pay for licenses for their dogs. Dogs without tags today are subject to seizure by the poundmaster. Those who jammed the assessor's office will escape a 20 per cent penalty on their personal taxes. There is no penalty on tardy applicants for dog tags

Murals Refresh Memories of Beloved Scenes

Some of the most interesting interiors these days make use of murals.

The murals come in many types—painted, wallpaper and photographic—at a wide range of costs. They may cover just part of one wall, one entire wall or even all the walls in a room.

Photo murals are especially popular. Perhaps that is because they are usually less expensive than others.

Travelers who want to remember some particular scene, for instance, may have their own snapshots enlarged into a mural. Or if they don't happen to be camera addicts themselves, there are all sorts of photographic agencies through which they may purchase views that can be enlarged to suit the space they want to fill.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Wife's Flagrant Infidelities Broke Up Marriage; She Wants to Come Back; Husband Asks Advice

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Five years ago I married a girl who seemed to be as sweet and as true as they come . . . The first year was fine with the exception that my salary couldn't buy all the things necessary to housekeeping. So in the second year I found additional work in the evenings to supplement my income. This arrangement allowed me to spend few hours leisure at home.

However, my wife would meet me for lunch and we would dine with friends who worked with me. One friend in particular fell into the habit of accompanying us on dates and we became a devoted trio. This friendship lasted for two years when, one night after a party and a few cocktails, my wife broke down and confessed that she had been having an affair with him, and that she had been intimate with others, too.

When I heard this, the world seemed to have fallen on me. We broke up and things have never since been the same. My ambition and desire to succeed have almost completely left me. Also, I have since been suspicious of every girl with whom I have kept company.

Recently, I met my wife in a restaurant and we talked for more than two hours. She expressed the desire to come back to me, but she also stated that she does not regret her affairs, although she would not repeat them. Could I fall in love with her again, do you think? Is it likely she would repeat the affairs? And could I forget what has happened, since I see the men every day? (They are now married.) Or should I look around for another girl to love, and put my trust in her? At present, I don't know which way to turn and I want you to show me how not to be a chump.

CONSTANT READER.

A Feline Creature

DEAR CONSTANT READER: In my opinion, your wife did a downright dastardly thing. In having affairs with MEN in your office (and I stress the plural), while you were toiling day and night to obtain the wherewithal to make her happy, comfortable and secure. Her behavior was incredibly low, vulgar, selfish and insensitive. I can make no excuse for her whatsoever.

She appears to have no more moral sense than an alley cat, and to be equally lacking in consideration for those who love her. (The cat, you know, is the proverbial ingrate among animals). It seems to me that her viciousness reached its climax when she professed "not to regret her affairs."

If she loved you—or even if she didn't, supposing she had any finer feelings at all—she could not avoid regretting that lurid epoch, if only because it had hurt you so deeply, through spoiling your trust in all women, bruising your self respect and embarrassing you in your workaday associations. Another good and sufficient reason for regretting her jungle varietism would be, of course, the fact that it had broken up her marriage, without giving her anything worthwhile in return. For it is the quality, rather than the quantity, of one's emotional experience which makes it an experience worth having or not.

Since she is neither decent nor sensitive nor very rational in her social dealings, I cannot believe you would be doing a good day's work in taking her back. I think you would always be—and would have reason to be—uneasy about her. And I believe that in coming back she would be coming to serve some selfish purpose of her own, and not out of tender regard for you.

My advice to you would be to follow your own hunch, namely: to look around for another girl to love, and put your trust in her. And may I assure you, in all sincerity, that you would be making a mistake in distrusting all women because of this one's callous promiscuity. Women like her are few and far between, and the breed has been blisteringly indicted in Claire Luce's play, "The Women"—an acid drama infested with creatures who react like animals, rather than humans.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Perennial Persians

Persian lamb, an all-around fur of great warmth and endurance, augurs well for winter wear this year. It was featured among many of the newer luxury furs at a local fur fashion showing recently. Points of interest in styling are noticeable here, among them the new 33-inch flaring length which is flattering over a sports suit or frock that goes from football games to cocktails later. The loose sleeves and simple collar are simple foils to the amusing bustle hat worn aloft

Slenderizing Lines Are Decreed By Fur Stylists for New Season

AUGUST TEMPERATURES may soar but the prices made possible in the summer sale of luxurious furs makes one forget the weather and brings to mind all the excitement, fun and adventure you will experience when wearing them in cold weather. In rhythm with fashion's prophecies for the new in clothing—shirring, tucking, gathering and molding the glamorous furs shown at a recent local fur fashion show demonstrated the new tricks furs are up to this season because of the modern working of pelts. The designers have achieved the softness of velvet in the light and supple furs being offered this season.

Tiny collars or no collars, balloon sleeves and mandarin sleeves, flare-back swaggers and streamlined princess silhouette, and big shoulders are but a few of the ideas featured at the fashion show.

Black, brown, bleached or gray furs are all designed in interesting models. Fur browns will be sure to be prominent contenders for fall and winter apparel because of the manner of shearing pelts to give slenderizing lines.

Around the clock with furs may be divided into models for sports and campus, daytime, dinner and evening wear.

SPORTS WEAR—Leopard cat, kidskin, ocelot, caracul lamb, sable-dyed fitch, natural wolverine, Hudson seal dyed muskrat and muskrat. These furs are made with fitted flared-peplum jacket, the short jackets, swagger short coat or full length, bolero. If you desire a fur jacket to wear with tweeds and woolens, you will find many short models that will be just the thing.

DAYTIME WEAR — Persian lamb, Jap and blended mink, blue fox, dyed red fox, safari brown Alaska seal, skunk, squirrel, mink and natural summer ermine. The stole is news again, and muffs too. They will make their entrance for both afternoon and evening wear.

EVENING WEAR—Mink, dyed red fox, blue fox, silver fox, skunk and ermine.

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

HOW TIMES have changed! We can remember when a girl was an old maid at 26 and now a woman's best years are supposed to begin around 30! And instead of thinking that middle-aged figure was inevitable—as we used to do—we keep proving that a woman need never lose her youthful slimness.

So, if you lose your figure, it isn't because of your age. It is because you are too tired, too busy, or too lazy to exercise. When you are tired, the right type of exercise is as good as a rest. Your exercises should not, however, be strenuous. If possible, they should take the form of recreation. Otherwise a few stretching exercises can be relied upon to relax tense muscles and unkink frazzled nerves. Good muscle tone is a very important factor in vitality, and the person who takes no exercise will find that she has less and less energy.

Morning Is Good Time

The busy housewife should plan to exercise before she becomes too tired. Between 10 and 11 o'clock in the morning is an excellent hour for her. The next best time is around 4 in the afternoon, if possible, following a short nap.

The business girl must either plan to exercise at home after office hours or to go to a gymnasium twice a week for good workouts. She can, of course, exercise in the morning before going to business, but when you are in a rush exercise is apt to be a hit-or-miss affair. Highly strung people should not even think of starting the day with setting-up exercises and this applies particularly to the girl in business.

Exercise for Trunk

Generally speaking, the exercises that do the most for everyone are those which use the trunk everyday activity. Here is an exercise of this type:

POSITION: Lying on the back on the floor, arms stretched up on floor overhead, legs stretched straight down.

muscles—they are so neglected in

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

Poetry Circle

A REPORT that Mrs. Henrietta DeGoofey had started a movement for the suppression of women poets was emphatically denied by the famous reformer at her press conference yesterday.

Mrs. DeGoofey

"On the contrary," announced the founder and president of the Do Something About It League, "I have become a poet—or rather a poetess—myself!"

Incredulous "Oh's" and "Ah's" from the press greeted this statement.

"Yes, indeed," continued Mrs. DeGoofey. "I have taken up poetry as a late summer diversion. And it is surprising now how my own attitude had changed toward the so-called poetry menace. In fact, I am thinking of organizing an auxiliary of Female Poetesses to the Do Something About It League."

"How on earth did this thing transpire, Mrs. DeGoofey?" asked a political reporter.

"Just like that!" replied Mrs. DeGoofey, snapping her fingers. "A little poem just came to me one morning as I was in the bathroom washing my teeth. Since then I have been sleeping with a pencil and pad under my pillow. I frequently find myself jumping up and down a half dozen times in the night to dash off my inspirations."

Senator Tweet Inspires a Poem

"Will you do poems on special subjects, Mrs. DeGoofey?" asked a foreign correspondent?

"No, indeed! I write only when I am inspired. However, I may do some patriotic pieces. I have already written one little thing that came to me in connection with the adjournment of Congress. Now, of course, I don't want to bore you, but——"

"Go on," chorused the press feebly.

"Well this just came to me as I was thinking of Senator Tweet. Have you your pencils and papers ready? All right then.

'We're very tired of watching clowns
Thank heaven, you're getting out of town-s'

"Of course there's a little poetic license in that last line, but I'm told that is all right. In fact I understand that nowadays words really don't have to rhyme, that you don't even have to worry about feet any more. However, it's just as easy for me to do rhymes. They just seem to come to me. Now here's one of which I'm especially proud:

'Listen to the wild goose quake,
As it comes both early and late.'"

"Marvelous!" exclaimed a woman writer.

"They simply loved it when I read it at a recent luncheon of the Daughters of Cleopatra," said Mrs. DeGoofey. "All of my friends tell me there's real music beneath my lines."

To Read Her Own To Select Groups

"Do you expect to read your own poetry, Mrs. DeGoofey?" asked a dramatic critic.

"No—only to other poets and poetesses as a rule. However, when I write anything that has a special message I will seek a larger audience. For instance, I am very fond of sunsets and I feel that they are not properly appreciated in this country. So I have written a sunset poem that I expect to distribute widely. Here it is:

'The beauteous sun sinking into the horizon,
Is a sight everybody should keep his, her or their eyes on.'"

"Darling!" exclaimed a little girl reporter.

"Will you publish your poetry, Mrs. DeGoofey?" asked a book reviewer.

"I think not—for the present, although all my friends tell me my things are too good to be lost, that they really ought to be preserved for posterity. However, I understand that most of the editors are really very ignorant about poetry, that they have no judgment about it at all. So if I publish, it may be done privately.

"However, I would be perfectly willing to let some of my things appear in the press—and I would really not ask any payment. Now here is a little thing I have written on the subject of man that I would especially like to have published as I am so frequently accused of being against the male sex. I call this 'A Tribute'.

'Man, man, wonderful man,
When nature made you, it did the best it can.'"

"Adorable!" exclaimed a fashion writer.

"I also have some other little things here," said Mrs. DeGoofey, producing a bulging suitcase. "Now I don't want to take too much of your time, but I thought I would just run over a few of these poems and let you take your pick for your papers."

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

Marjorie Hillis, the 'Live Alone and Like It' Girl, Taking a Ribbing

New York, July 31.

RIPPLES OF RIBBING are still swirling about Marjorie Hillis, the "Live Alone and Like It" girl, who is scheduled to marry Thomas H. Roulston, a big chain-grocery man, this very day, as the birdies sing.

The bridegroom seems to be quite pleased about the whole thing, and Marjorie's best statement for the press is that she did not say that single cussedness was better than the holy estate—only that there were compensations. Duck and twist as she may, the fact remains that Marjo is now masticating some of her very persuasive and well-paid words without condiments.

That book of hers was one of of the most successful of the great compensatory crop of pep-talk literature that may have begun with Pitkin's "Life Begins at 40." Its success got Miss Hillis a lot of lecture engagements, and she went on to pound out two other books—probably not as lucrative as No. 1, but one of which, "Work Ends at Nightfall," is really a beautiful job.

The happy groom is a widower, and has a nice Long Island home, and after today's ceremony they climb aboard the Normandie and are off for a month of European travel. The bride says she will expound no more from the lecture platform but will keep on knocking out tomes for the trade.

What will her first one be, in her new state? Will it be a paean on the satisfactions of connubial bliss? Or will she fall back on the old preacher's admonition, "Don't do like I do—do like I say?" At any rate, once she is back from the honeymoon it will be interesting to see into what channel her literary talent will pour. Surely we all hope she will like her new life even better than she did living alone.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Murray Hill, my local headquarters, gave me a turn the other night. Passing the lot where the Sculptors' Guild is holding its annual outdoor show this summer, I heard a cricket chirping away merrily, as the city's motor roar died to a faint hum. Even though I shut my eyes and tried to pretend I was in the open country, I could still smell the vile combination of gas fumes and general fug which passes for air on summer Manhattan . . .

Dear Helen:

So you are now a "lady reporter." Let me wish you "scoops" of good luck! And that reminds me—I have news, too! Remember how we used to wonder why people bought winter coats in Summer? Well, I've done it! And to make the story more perfect, I shopped for my coat on a sweltering hot day! Maybe it does sound "believe it or not" but wait till you hear the rest of it.

It all started with my seeing a Fashion Show at Jelleff's—luckily they gave it in the evening so George could come too. It was as cool as listening to the Watergate Symphony, the models were as lovely as any movie stars, the new styles terribly exciting and imagine! Jelleff's give you "carte blanche" in choosing any cloth or fur coat now at a special price! My coat will be $129.75 next fall. I paid $118 and arranged to pay for it bit by bit. Saved exactly $11.75, with which I shall buy a pair of Jelleff's new Customcraft Shoes that are lined with Sani-Kid, a process that keeps the inside of shoes free from perspiration odor. Leave it to Jelleff's—always a step ahead!

Mine is a scrumptious-fitting black coat with the entire front bodice of blended mink. You know how I love brown—well, this year it's absolutely the smartest thing!

Well, so long for now and do try to join us for Labor Day week-end in Washington.

Love,

Mary

U. S. 'Goodwill Envoy' Will Return to Paris

Mr. Robert Kinnon Smith Departs Tomorrow; Author, Known as Rosalie Wells, Leaves 68 Bronze Medals for American Students of French

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor

"AMBASSADOR OF GOOD WILL" from the United States to France—and visa versa—is Mrs. Robert Kinnon Smith, who tomorrow will conclude a three-month stay in her apartment at 1661 Crescent place, to return to her home in Paris.

She will make a short visit to the New York World's Fair and then will sail Thursday on the George Washington. But she will leave behind a very tangible evidence of her desire to cement amity between her native country and her adopted one—the promise of a bronze medal of Lafayette for outstanding students of French in 68 American high schools.

I had a pleasant chat with Mrs. Smith yesterday in her apartment, and she mentioned that the medals would be presented at the end of the 1939-40 term. She said, also, that two Washington schools would be on the list. Others are scattered all over the United States.

The literary world knows Mrs. Smith as Rosalie Wells, author of several books, including "Fans," "Covered Bridges of America" and, more recently, "Walled Town of France," published in 1937. It was this book that won for the author the coveted Palmes Academique, decoration of the French Academy.

Probably it was the kindness of French officials in granting her that honor—one which, incidentally, has been accorded few Americans—that prompted her to do something in return. Hence the medals offered to American students.

Has Country Home in France

Another book "is working" in Mrs. Smith's mind, she says, but she declines to reveal any plans about it. Perhaps, after her month's stay in Paris, when she is at her country home in Marlotte, near Fontainbleau, she will find time to write it.

Getting back to France after a long absence is really like "going home," Mrs. Smith avers. She loves that country; finds its people charming and believes its women "do their duty as wives and mothers, better than any women in the world."

Paris is full of Americans who add luster to the name and fame of our country, she went on. And very much missed the last two years have been Mr. and Mrs. Laurence V. Benet, who now spend their winters in Washington. "Mme. Benet was virtually the only American who year after year had a salon where you saw everybody of importance who ever came to France," she said.

Mrs. Smith also tossed a few bouquets in the direction of the Duchess de Chaulnes, the former Theodora Shontz, who formerly lived in Washington, has made her home in France for a number of years, and is now visiting friends in this country.

Summertime Trivia:

Most serene person I've seen lately is the Princess Yuvarani Saheb, of Baria, who with her brother, the Maharajah of Tripura, and several friends, lunched yesterday at the Mayflower . . . A sari does a lot for any lady, and the paisley one the princess had on yesterday was draped most becomingly over her dark hair and slim shoulders . . . Mrs. Paul V. McNutt looked over 25 apartments and houses when she was on her recent home-hunting trip to Washington. The Secretary of War and Mrs. Woodring helped "sell" her on the Shoreham; and the McNutt apartment, formerly occupied by Senator and Mrs. Tydings, is just below the Woodrings' . . . Over Washington teacups word is going around that John L. Lewis' recent blast at the Vice President really stemmed from jealousy—because "the evil old man's" eyebrows are so much more distinctive than his!

Goings and Comings:

Mrs. Adolf A. Berle, jr., returned yesterday to Washington after spending some time in Great Barrington, Mass. She entertained there at a farewell tea Sunday afternoon . . . Mrs. Larz Anderson, who has spent the last two months in Massachusetts is now in Saratoga Springs, N. Y. She was guest of honor at a luncheon given there by Miss Ruth Thompson Wallace on Saturday . . . Robert Leon Grosjean, who has been at the Waldorf-Astoria in New York for some time, has now joined Mrs. Grosjean (the former Emlen Knight Davies) at Camp Topridge in the Adirondacks, where they are guests of her father, the Ambassador to Belgium, and Mrs. Joseph E. Davies.

New Addition to Deb List

White Sulphur Newsphoto.

Miss Beverly Easley, who is now enjoying the breezes at The Greenbrier in White Sulphur Springs, will make her bow in Washington this December under the aegis of her uncle and aunt, Brig. Gen. Calvin B. Matthews, U. S. Marine Corps, and Mrs. Matthews, who make their home at 1900 Florida avenue. Miss Easley spent last winter with her uncle and aunt here while she attended Gunston Hall. Following her graduation this year, she left Washington in July to visit her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Gilmer Easley, in Lewisburg, W. Va. Late this month she will leave for the West Coast, where she will visit her aunt, Mrs. Philip Patchin, and her cousin, Miss Mary Patchin, in Burlingame, Calif. Miss Easley's father is an attorney in Lewisburg. Her mother, the former Miss Josephine Mason, was a belle in Washington in her debutante days

Mrs. Kerr Gives Cocktail Party

Mrs. Florence Kerr, WPA Assistant Commissioner, entertained at cocktails yesterday at the Washington Golf and Country Club in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Davis. The latter, who is known professionally as Hallie Flanagan, has served as national director of the Federal Theater project for the past four years.

Among those invited to the event were Secretary of Commerce Harry L. Hopkins, Mr. and Mrs. John M. Carmody, Col. F. C. Harrington, Mrs. Ellen S. Woodward, Col. and Mrs. Christopher B. Garnett, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Hunter, Mr. and Mrs. Aubrey Williams.

Also, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Rauch, Mr. and Mrs. Corrington Gill, Mrs. Izetta Jewel Miller and her daughter, Izetta Jewel, jr., who is appearing in the leading role at the Cross Roads Theater this wek; Dr. and Mrs. L. R. Alderman, Dr. and Mrs. Luther Evans, Miss Margaret Stephenson and Holger Cahill.

Spanish Envoy To Sail Today

The Spanish Ambassador, Senor Don Juan Francisco de Cardenas, will sail today from New York for his homeland aboard the S. S. Europa.

Senor Jose G. de Gregorio, Second Secretary of the Embssy, is in New York, where he saw the Ambassador off. Senor Gregorio, who has received his transfer orders to Peiping, has not yet set the date for his departure.

Senor Gregorio has been Second Secretary of the Embassy here for three months. He will assume duties as Consul when he arrives in Peiping.

Claudels Produce Volume of Verse

Interesting is the news from France that Pierre Claudel has recently completed a volume of verse with his talented wife supplying the illustrations. Mr. Claudel is the son of Paul Claudel, one time Ambassador here from France, who gained fame as a poet.

Young Mrs. Claudel is the former Miss Marion Cartier, daughter of Mr. and Mme. Pierre Cartier, of New York City. The Claudels are spending the summer in France.

Mrs. Stark Joins Admiral At Shoreham

New Naval Chief Will Move Into Official Home Tomorrow

Mrs. Harold R. Stark, wife of Admiral Stark, who will relieve Admiral William D. Leahy as Chief of Naval Operations, arrived in Washington last evening to join Admiral Stark at their apartment in the Shoreham.

Admiral and Mrs. Leahy will leave today for Porto Rico, where Admiral Leahy will assume his new post as Governor, and tomorrow Admiral and Mrs. Stark will move into the admiral's house in the Naval Observatory grounds.

Mrs. Stark will remain in town for a short time to settle the new quarters and then will return to their summer cabin on Lake Carey, Wyoming County, Pennsylvania. She will be back in town late in September.

Now at Admiral and Mrs. Stark's summer cabin are their daughter, Mrs. E. W. Semens, and her two sons, Harold Stark Semens and Edwin Walker Semens, aged 4 and 7 years. Mrs. Semens and the children make their winter home in Philadelphia, where Mr. Semens is an attorney.

Miss Jeschke Weds Tomorrow

Miss Margaret Jeschke, whose marriage to Lieut. John Sherman Oldfield, U. S. M. C., will take place tomorrow, was the guest in whose honor Miss Margaret Lavender entertained at luncheon at the Little Tea House yesterday afternoon.

Miss Lavender has come down from New York City to be a bridesmaid in the wedding and is the guest of the bride-elect's parents, Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Richard H. Jeschke.

Guests yesterday included the bridesmaids. They are Miss Esther Allen, of Nashville, Tenn.; Miss Joan Boye, Miss Gean Harris and the prospective bride's cousin, Miss Barbara Jeschke, of Milwaukee, Wis.

Tonight Mrs. John Ryan Devereux, grandmother of Miss Jeschke, will entertain at a supper party at her home, Portledge, for the bridal party following the wedding rehearsal.

Mrs. Stevenson To Display Work At N. Y. Art Show

Mrs. Ned Stevenson, who visited here often when her brother, Baron Robert Silvercruys, was Secretary of the Belgian Embassy, will be among the exhibitors at the show of the National Association of Women Painters and Sculptors in New York when it opens on Saturday. Baron Silvercruys is now Minister to Canada.

Outstanding sculptresses from all States in the Union have been asked to show their work. The exhibition, which continues through September 30, will be held at the American Fine Arts Galleries. This year the association is celebrating its fiftieth anniversary.

Peters to Spend Month in Maine

When the Minister of Switzerland and Mme. Peter return from Maine early in September they will take up residence at the Anchorage, for they have given up their home on Kalorama road.

The Peters left Saturday for a month's sojourn in Maine. The envoy and his wife will sail for Geneva at the end of the year, when Mr. Peter will retire from diplomatic service.

Miss Betty Blanding Off to Florida

Miss Betty Blanding, daughter of Maj. Gen. Albert H. Blanding, chief of the National Guard Bureau, and Mrs. Blanding, left Washington Sunday and is on her way to Jacksonville, Fla.

She will spend about a week visiting her aunt, Mrs. Quincy Peacock, at Jacksonville and then will go on to Miami, where she will make an extended visit to her sister, Mrs. Jesse H. Yarborough.

Representative Elmer J. Ryan, of Minnesota, Weds Miss Marjorie Fuller in Church Ceremony

Harris & Ewing.

REPRESENTATIVE AND MRS. ELMER RYAN

Couple Postpones Honeymoon Until Congress Adjourns

Miss Marjorie Fuller became the bride of Representative Elmer J. Ryan yesterday morning at 10 o'clock in the Walter Reed Chapel with the Rev. Patrick Ryan officiating.

The bride, who made her home in Washington, was formerly of Thief River Falls, Minn. She was given in marriage by her uncle, Milton Pickett Fuller, of Topeka, Kans.

Wearing a chantilly lace gown with tiny ruffles covering the skirt the bride, a most attractive brunette, made a striking picture as she walked down the aisle. The gown had a high, round neckline and short puffed sleeves. Her finger-tip-length veil was held in place by a cluster of gardenias perched atop her curls. She carried a prayer book with a shower of lilies of the valley.

Miss Harriet Fuller was her sister's only attend..nt. She wore a starched chiffon gown of tapestry print. Her picture hat was of pink and she carried an arm bouquet of roses and delphinium.

Representative Melvin J. Moss, of Minnesota, was best man. Ushers were John J. McCarthy, the Representative's secretary, and Paul S. McMahon.

Following the ceremony a reception was given in the Garden Room of Wardman Park Hotel.

Upon the adjournment of Congress the bride and bridegroom will take their wedding trip, winding up in South St. Paul, Minn., where Representative Ryan makes his home.

Anne Cooper Becomes Bride Of R. J. Finnan at St. Paul's

Church Decked With White Gladioli and Asters for 9 A. M. Ceremony; Brother of Groom, the Rev. E. B. Finnan, Officiates

Decked with white gladioli and asters, St. Paul's Church was scene of the marriage yesterday of Miss Anne Loraine Cooper and Richard Joseph Finnin. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Gilbert Cooper while Mr. Finnin's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Thomas F. Finnin.

The ceremony took place at 9 o'clock in the morning with the Rev. Edward B. innin, brother of the bridegroom, officiating.

Escorted by her father, the bride wore a white lace gown and her long tulle veil fell from a halo of orange blossoms. She carried a prayer book with streamers of lilies of the valley.

Miss Eloise Cooper served as maid of honor for her sister. She wore a yellow net frock with a matching turban. Her flowers were yellow roses. Miss June Mackey, of Bedford, Va., was gowned in lavender and carried an arm bouquet of pink roses.

Martin J. Meenehan was best man and ushers were Stanley G. Mattern, Walter Finnin, brother of the bridegroom, and Gilbert Haley.

Following the ceremony a wedding breakfast was held at 1914 Connecticut avenue. The bride's mother had chosen a dusty pink lace gown for the occasion and wore a cluster of gardenias. Mrs. Finnin was gowned in a navy and white chiffon frock with a corsage of gardenias.

When the young couple left for a wedding trip to Maine the bride was wearing a navy sheer ensemble. Upon their return they will make their home at 5923 Thirteen street northwest.

Among out-of-town guests were Dr. and Mrs. G. L. Mackey, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Owen, Mr. and Mrs. Hanford Johnson, and their son, Burcelle, and daughter, Barbara, and Mr. and Mrs. O. C. Cundiff, all of Bedford, Va. Also attending were Mrs. Joseph Sheehan and her daughter, Margaret, of Canada.

The bride attended Columbia University.

The Godoys will motor west by the southern route and plan to return in six weeks by the northern route. While in California they will visit San Francisco, Los Angeles and San Diego.

Susie Furlow Becomes Bride

Before a candle-lighted altar decked with white gladioli, Miss Susie Elizabeth Furlow, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Edward Furlow, of Takoma Park, D. C., became the bride of Robert Wilson Brown, of Atlanta, Ga., at Trinity Episcopal Church yesterday afternoon.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Reno S. Harp, rector, at 5 p. m. Mrs. Ruth Vanderlip played the organ as guests assembled.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was gowned in white satin made with a sweetheart neckline, short puffed sleeves, a tight bodice and a full skirt which fell into a long circular train. A wreath of orange blossoms held in place her long veil of tulle arranged about the head in cap fashion. She wore long white kid gloves and carried a bouquet of roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss June Harvey, of Atlanta, was maid of honor, wearing an aquamarine marquisette dress made with a square neckline and short puffed sleves, and trimmed with yellow bows of ribbon about the neck and skirt. She wore a short veil, fastened with Johanna Hill rosebuds matching the bouquet she carried.

The other attendants, Miss Elizabeth Brown, sister of the bridegroom, and Miss Ruth Wallace, both of Atlanta, were dressed exactly like the maid of honor, in the same shade, and carrying the same kind of flowers. The best man was Edward Furlow, brother of the bride, and ushers were A. C. Brown and Ward D. Fish, of Washington.

A reception for friends and relatives followed the ceremony at the home of the bride's parents. Mrs. Furlow received with the bridal party, attired in a rose chiffon gown with a corsage bouquet of talisman roses.

When the couple left on a wedding trip the bride was wearing a black wool jacket dress with a jersey blouse, and back accessories with touches of white. She had a corsage of roses and lilies of the valley. They will make their home at 1605 Melrose drive, Atlanta. The bride is a graduate of Agnes Scott College. Mr. Brown is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Eugene Brown, of Atlanta.

20th Century Club's Chairmen Announced

Mrs. Edward G. Montgomery Names Heads Of Committees; Group's 50th Anniversary To Be Celebrated With Party in Spring

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Mrs. Edward G. Montgomery, of Chevy Chase, president of the Twentieth Century Club, has announced the new committee chairmen who will serve during the coming year, which marks the club's fiftieth anniversary.

The chairmen of the special anniversary committee, who had been announced previously, is Mrs. Philip Sidney Smith. She will have charge of the year-long celebration which is planned. Mrs. R. Thomas West is chairman of the anniversary gift of occupational therapy equipment for crippled children at Gallinger Hospital.

A considerable sum has already been raised toward this gift to the hospital, which was selected as a fitting form of birthday celebration for a club devoted to civic betterment. Part of the money was raised through a bridge party given in the spring, and more has been coming in steadily from individual members, who were asked to give 5 cents for each year of the club's age. All in the large membership are giving at least this and some, especially interested in the hospital project, are sending in much larger contributions.

Mrs. Walter Husband Program Chairman

Chairmen of standing committees are: Program, Mrs. William Walter Husband; membership, Miss Elizabeth Wightman; finance, Mrs. Walter M. Gilbert; hospitality, Mrs. John Blake Gordon; press Mrs. Edgar B. Merritt; printing, Mrs. Maris M. Proffitt; legislative, Mrs. Basil M. Manly; ushers, Mrs. William T. Clerk; social, Mrs. Richard D. Stimson; past presidents committee, Mrs. Ernest P. Bicknell.

Section chairmen: Civics-education, Mrs. Paul J. Ewerhart; French, Mrs. John Van Schaick, jr., garden, Mrs. Stephen Olop; international outlook, Mrs. James Kent McClintock; literature, Mrs. Edwin G. Nourse; nature, Mrs. D. Agnew Greenlees.

Few art and music chairmen will be appointed later.

The club will resume its activities October 5. The second meeting of the season will be a gay nineties party the first Thursday in November, devoted to reminiscences of the club's early activities. Mrs. William H. Dall, the only charter member now living, will be invited to come from her home in Brookline, Mass., as guest of honor.

Dedication of the occupational therapy room at Gallinger Hospital has been set for January. The club is considering establishing in the same room a library service with the co-operation of the Public Library. Instead of buying books, the tentative plan is to secure them as a service from the library and provide a librarian to select and distribute them several times a week.

Plans for the hospital project are going forward, although Mrs. West has spent the last month at Kittery Point, Me.

Anniversary Party Set for Spring

The formal celebration of the golden anniversary of the club is to take place at the regular April meeting, which will be held at the regular hour, 11 o'clock in the morning, but will be at Chevy Chase Junior College instead of in the Y. W. C. A. Mrs. Frederic E. Farrington, school director, is a member of the club.

A gold-covered yearbook is being prepared in honor of the anniversary. Among other features, it will include a sketch by Mrs. James K. McClintock, of the little church at Fourteenth and K streets where the Twentieth Century Club was organized, and a history of the club by Mrs. Alfred H. Brooks.

Officers, in addition to Mrs. Montgomery, are: First vice president, Mrs. Lawrence Martin; second vice president, Mrs. Francis R. Goodwin; recording secretary, Mrs. Stanley P. Young; treasurer, Mrs. Ryland C. Bryant; assistant treasurer, Mrs. W. Hayes Yaeger; board members at large, Mrs. Karl Fenning, Mrs. James C. Robertson, Mrs. Sidney H. Thompson, Mrs. Harold N. Fowler, Mrs. James C. Jardine, Mrs. Leo D. Miner, Mrs. Howard G. Nichols, Mrs. Ernest R. McComas, Mrs. Richard Fay Jackson, Mrs. Willoughby Chesley.

University Women Have Tea at Club

A.A.U.W. Resumes Activities In Renovated Clubhouse

Series of Monday Teas Begins Anew With Travel Talk and Music; Juniors Give Dinner Bridge Party

A harbinger of fall was the resumption of activities yesterday at the clubhouse of the American Association of University Women after a six-week period during which it has been closed for "housecleaning."

The regular series of Monday afternoon teas which bring members together in informal gatherins once a week was started again, with a program including a travel talk and music. The club members still in town greeted each other, and appeared gratified to have the clubhouse open once more.

Tea was served in the music room, and the program also was given there. Mrs. Victor O'Kelliher, wife of Col. O'Kelliher, was introduced by Miss Virginia Kinnard, chairman of the summer teas, and took charge of the program. Preceding her talk she presented Miss Fleurette Joffrie, soprano, who sang a group of songs.

Miss Joffrie, who is a Californian, for two seasons was featured soloist with Harry Lauder's company, has had principal roles with the Los Angeles and Hollywood Grand Opera Associations and is also a radio and concert singer. She was accompanied at the piano by Miss Mildred Dean. In addition to having a soprano voice of pure, bird-like tone, she dramatized one or two of her numbers, giving them added effectiveness.

Mrs. O'Kelliher, who was dressed in a white sports frock with a large flower pattern on the blouse, wore a broad brimmed straw hat which she had brought home from Bermuda. She talked on Nassau and also displayed bright baskets and other examples of native work which she had bought on her trip. Her talk was illustrated with motion pictures.

The committee assisting at the tea included Mrs. Ena Thompson, Miss Mildred Green, Mrs. Lawrence Radford, membership chairman, and Mrs. William Werntz.

Members took occasion to look over the clubhouse improvements. These include a new ceiling in the hallway, floors all re-done, the walls of the dining room re-painted and those of the reading room on the first floor changed from a dull green to a cream color which lightens it.

In the evening, letting no time be wasted in making use of the building, the juniors, headed by Miss Louise Chace, held a dinner bridge as their July meeting.

Among those at the affair were Miss Chace, Miss Catherine Murray, hostess for the evening; Miss Kinnard, Miss Edythe Rose, Miss Mary Warren, Miss Alice Jewel, Miss Jeanette Rudellatte, chairman of the Junior Players; Miss Mary Vaccaro, Mrs. Norman Hearn, Miss Helen White, Miss Mildred Green and her sister, Miss Elsie Green, who is a vice president of the club and chairman of the education committee. Miss Wanda Johnson, Mrs. Noble Boaz, Miss Eleanor Williams, Miss Marion Chapman, Mrs. Edward Anderson and Miss Elaine Exton.

Edna Knight Gasch, of Washington, Indorsed For President of National League of America

THE JUNE BULLETIN of the National League of American Pen Women carries the interesting announcement that the members of the New York City Branch have indorsed Edna Knight Gasch, of Washington, as candidate for national president of the organization.

Although the elections will not take place until the biennial convention to be held here in April, as soon as the fall season opens, activity in the league branches throughout the country will be pointed toward them.

Bachrach.
EDNA KNIGHT GASCH

The New York City League also indorsed Florence Hamilton, its own president, who is well known here, for the office of first vice president. Mrs. Hamilton has been editor of The Bulletin during the presidency of Audrey Wurdemann (Mrs. Joseph Auslander), Pulitzer prize-winning poet.

Although Mrs. Auslander now resides in Washington, she is a member of the Seattle branch of the league and, should Mrs. Gasch be elected, it would bring the presidency to a Capital member for the first time in several terms. Mrs. Phyllis Fergus Hoyt, noted composer, who preceded Mrs. Auslander, is a resident of Chicago.

Mrs. Gasch has long been a member of the league and, if we remember correctly, has both the classification of a writer and a lecturer on parliamentary procedure. She has served as president of the D. C. branch, state president of the District, national second vice president, national first vice president, chairman of the by-laws committee for the national league for three years and is now completing her fourth year as national parliamentarian.

In addition to her interest in the Pen Women's League, Mrs. Gasch is a prominent member and past president of the local Soroptimist Club and now holds the office of second vice president of the American Federation of Soroptimists, which includes clubs in both the United States and Canada.

'Daughters' Plan River Outing

The annual outing, field day and river cruise sponsored by the Daughters of America, State Council, will be held at Marshall Hall tomorrow. The steamer City of Washington will leave the Seventh street wharf at 10 a. m. and 2 and 5:30 p. m., and the moonlight trip will start at 8:30 p. m.

Mrs. Edna Hayward, chairman of the State Council's good of the order committee, is in charge of arrangements, and Mrs. Margaret A. Taylor, assistant, is acting secretary.

There will be sports for old and young, including a baseball game between fat and thin members. The council has arranged for an orchestra on the 5:30 boat which will play for dancing from 7 o'clock until time for the last steamer back to the city.

Mrs. Cora V. James will be in charge of the ticket booth for the daylight boats.

Voteless Voters To Discuss Foreign Policies

The Foreign Policy Department of the D. C. Voteless League of Women Voters, like Congress, is keeping its eye on the foreign situation this summer and devoting its time to discussion of it.

With Mrs. Max O. Lorenz, new president of the league, as discussion leader, the department will have its regular Wednesday meeting tomorrow morning at the home of Mrs. Lowell Leake. A picnic luncheon at 12 will be followed by a program at 1:30.

Mrs. E. Wilder Spaulding will report on "The Kuomintang, 1925 to 1935" and Mrs. W. E. Caine on "The Conquest of Manchuria, 1931 to 1933." Current developments in the military situation in the Far East, including the fighting on the border of Mongolia and on the Sakhalin Islands, will be covered by Mrs. E. Faesch. She also will give a resume of English negotiations and on the abrogation of the 1911 treaty between the United States and Japan. Mrs. Vladimir Woytinsky will review developments in Spain.

Beta Sigma Phi Unit Plans 'Day' at N. Y. Fair

Washington members of Beta Sigma Phi Sorority are making plans to attend the Beta Sigma Phi Day to be held in the Florida Building at the New York World's Fair on Saturday, August 12.

Last Saturday Miss Muriel Morgan, of the social committee of Delta Chapter, entertained members at a luncheon in the Representatives' dining room at the Capitol. Following this, the members attended sessions at the House and the Senate.

Among the members present were Miss Mae Murray, sponsor; Mrs. Alice Roberts Koch, educational director; Margaret Brown, Margaret Dooley, Dorothy Pederson, Alice V. Renk and Opha Thompson.

Mothers' Health Association Expands and Refurbishes Clinics

The Mothers' Health Association, although its regular membership meetings are suspended in the summer, has continued to expand the work of its clinics at 715 E street southwest, and a committee of members is serving as receptionists during clinic hours. The association, of which Mrs. Prentiss Willson is president, was formed two years ago and is affiliated with the Birth Control Federation of America.

A night clinic for colored patients has just been opened on Thursday nights, in addition to a night clinic for white women. A colored woman physician and colored nurse are in attendance. Ther are also regular day clinics, one for white and one for colored patients, weekly.

The clinic room has recently been repapered and painted and other improvements have been made in the house, which has served as headquarters since it was opened in 1937. A new sign has been placed in front, giving the clinic hours and in the rear an old garage has been torn down to make a parking place for the doctors' cars.

The volunter committee serving as receptionists includes Mrs. Bernard Gould, Mrs. David Craig and Mrs. Fontaine Bradley, with Mrs. Willson assisting whenever necessary.

Mrs. Anita Baumgarten has been working out details of organization activity during the summer.

Mrs. Willson has been here throughout the season, with the exception of part of last week which he spent with Dr. Willson, visiting their son, Prentiss, jr., who is studying medicine at Duke University.

The association has engaged Mrs. William Wickham, formerly its part-time secretary, and also regional secretary for the Birth Control Federation, as full-time secretary in charge of the headquarters. The federation, as it now functions, under a new policy, no longer maintains an office here to watch legislation.

The nurses are at the headquarters only during the hours of the clinics.

Monthly luncheons of the association will be resumed in October, the first one devoted to discussion of plans for the season. There will be speakers at the meetings next winter, which is a departure from the custom of the past two years, according to Mrs. Willson. Mrs. David Karrick, program chairman, is spending the summer in Stockbridge, Mass.

Mrs. Craig is editor of the news bulletin, which is to be issued three times a year: in the early fall, before the drive in February, and in the late spring.

Mrs. Montgomery Blair, vice president of the association, is spending two months in Maine; and Mrs. Lewis Ecker, the treasurer, with Dr. Ecker, is abroad for the summer.

The association, which started with but 50 members, now has 400 and has served 1,100 patients in its clinics, only a third of whom have been able to pay for the service.

Japanese Call U. S. 'Enemy;' Guard Embassy

Poster Attack Links America With Russia And Britain as Foes

Tokyo (Tuesday), Aug. 1.—Japanese police maintained a strong guard around the American Embassy today after posters appeared in Tokyo streets proclaiming that the United States, with Great Britain and Soviet Russia, is the "common enemy" of Japan.

The police guard was provided after rumors that a demonstration might be staged there against the United States' abrogation of its 1911 commercial treaty with Japan, but no hostile incident occurred.

The posters were believed to have been posted by an obscure ultra-nationalist political organization.

50,000 Demonstrate

The Osaka newspaper, Mainichi, said in an article by its political commentator that if the United States' denunciation of the Japanese-American commercial treaty affected Japanese citizens residing in the United States then "the United States will forfeit the loyalty of more than 100,000 citizens of Japanese parentage in Hawaii."

The British Embassy also was under police guard, the latter as result of an anti-British demonstration by 50,000 Japanese who paraded past the embassy for two hours shouting anti-British slogans.

The demonstration was similar to that of July 14, when 50,000 Japanese sang and shouted anti-British slogans.

Today, as then, they carried placards saying, "Punch the British in the Nose" and "Let's All Knock Down the British."

The demonstrators were composed largely of veterans' organizations, army reservists and women of patriotic groups.

Several Arrested

Reinforced squadrons of police kept the crowds moving past the embassy and arrested several persons who threw banners into the British embassy grounds.

A resolution adopted by the rightist Japanese Renovation Party termed the United States' denunciation of the American-Japanese commercial treaty an "extremely unfriendly act."

The resolution urged the Japanese government to "take measures to persuade the United States to reconsider her action and to notify the United States that Japan will be compelled to deal with the new situation . . . if the United States fails to recognize realities and co-operate with Japan in the construction of a new order in East Asia."

The resolution was delivered in the form of a petition to Premier Hiranuma.

Ill-Feeling Grows

Shanghai, July 31 (U.P.).—Ill-feeling between Japan and Britain increased today when Japanese army authorities charged that Russia and Britain were supporting a Chinese guerrilla campaign against Japan. The British consulate general promptly replied that the statement was "full of lies from beginning to end."

A formal statement issued by the Japanese army press bureau here, entitled "Extra News," said:

"As adverse British feeling toward Japan has been aggravated, the British consul general has been watching for an opportunity to instigate retaliatory action against Japan. Recently British consular authorities succeeded in establishing contact with the Soviet consulate at Shanghai with a view to exchanging information regarding Japan.

"Consequently it has been learned that surprise attacks against Japanese airdromes and arms depots in the Shanghai-Nanking area, by making use of Chinese Communist guerrilla forces, are being contemplated. According to reliable information, the sum appropriated for required expenditures amounts to about 15,000 yuan ($1,350) a month, which is to be given the Chinese Communist Party through the Soviet consul general."

U. S. Woman Searched

Tsingtao, China, July 31 (AP).—The searching of an American woman and a Briton by Japanese-controlled Chinese customs authorities was reported today.

Mrs. Sadie Wilhoit, a Shanghai resident holidaying at Tsingtao, said she was searched and detained briefly by customs agents who confiscated nearly 200 Chinese dollars(about $16).

Recruiting Campaign

Shanghai, July 31 (AP).—A Japanese army spokesman asserted tonight Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek had begun a recruiting campaign in Japanese-occupied areas of China and in the International Settlement and French Concession in Shanghai.

British Troops Shifted

Singapore, (Tuesday), Aug. 1 (U.P.).—British military authorities today announced the dispatch of additional troops to the Malay Peninsula from India as a "precautionary" measure which was regarded as marking a stiffening in Britain's stand in the Far East. Officials refused to reveal the numbers involved.

It was believed generally that the action was a direct outgrowth of the recent Anglo-French defense talks here.

British Cabinet To Stay on Hand During Recess

London, July 31.—With the so-called "dangerous months" of August and September ahead, all but two of the 23 members of the British cabinet will remain "within easy call" of London, instead of going abroad on vacations during the Parliamentary recess which will begin Friday and last until late in October unless a major crisis intervenes.

The only absentees from the British Isles will be Dominion Secretary Sir Thomas Inskip, who will investigate economic conditions in the stricken crown colony of Newfoundland, and Minister of Health Walter Elliott, who will visit Cap d' Antibes, France, from August 7 to 16.

Neely, Bridges Urge Mexican Oil Deal Probe

Guffey Backs Inquiry Into Americans' Part In Expropriations

By the Associated Press

Two proposals for investigating allegations that oil seized from Americans in Mexico has been sold abroad with the assistance of other United States citizens were introduced in the Senate yesterday and sent to the Foreign Relations Committee.

Senator Neely (Democrat), West Virginia, an Administration supporter, offered the first proposal, which asked an investigation of reports concerning "activities of certain American citizens with the Mexican government in connection with the sale, barter or exchange of Mexican oil."

Senator Bridges (Republican), New Hampshire, who announced in the Senate Saturday that he would seek such an investigation, told reporters he believed Neely was acting to "take the ball out of my hands."

C. I. O. Members Mentioned

Bridges introduced his own resolution later in the day, asking an investigation of allegations that "the expropriated property of American citizens has been sold, traded or bartered to certain foreign powers with the aid, assistance and connivance of American citizens."

The Bridges resolution also said it was "alleged that certain American citizens, members of the Congress of Industrial Organization and the Non-Partisan Labor League, were active in promoting the expropriation" and that certain of the individuals involved in the transactions "have been large contributors to political campaigns in the United States."

One paragraph of the resolution said:

"It is alleged that a certain official or officials of the United States Government have appeared in Mexico and have made public statements to the effect that the expropriation of the said property of certain American citizens was in accord with the social objectives of the New Deal."

Guffey Backs Inquiry

When Neely's resolution was introduced it was read by a Senate clerk, and Senator Guffey (Democrat), Pennsylvania, arose immediately to express the hope it would be adopted.

"I want to assure my colleagues in the Senate that I have nothing to conceal," he said, "and I want the fullest and most complete investigation possible given this matter!"

Misnamed 'Hitler,' Sculptor Asks $100,000 Damages

San Francisco, July 31 (AP).—Because a book referred to Hilaire Hiler as "Hilaire Hitler," the San Francisco artist filed suit today for $100,000 on the grounds the reference caused him to be "ridiculed and laughed at."

The book, a guide to San Francisco's leading attractions, Hiler said, referred to "Hilaire Hitler's superb 'Atlantis Rising From the Sea'" in the lobby of the Acquatic Park Pavilion.

Hiler's suit set forth Hitler was "generally regarded in the United States with contempt and hatred."

Horror May Balk War—Chamberlain

croaching upon the independence of other states.

"If we do not agree with the Soviets on the definition of indirect aggression, it is because the formula the Soviets favor appears to carry that precise signification."

Chamberlain turned down an opposition plea that he reveal in complete detail the elements of the Moscow conversations. He said:

Won't Provide Ammunition

"I do not propose to give people of other countries ammunition with which to divide the Soviets and ourselves."

The prime minister reaffirmed his previous statement that Britain would not reverse her policy in the Far East at the demand of another power and reiterated that Japan had made no such demand.

As to whether Britain would follow the lead of United States and denounce her 1911 trade treaty with Japan, Chamberlain said:

"I believe the general objects and aims of the United States and Britain are closely similar, but it does not follow that each of us must necessarily do exactly the same thing as the other.

"We may find that different methods are appropriate in different cases, but the house may rest assured that this government places utmost importance upon collaboration where collaboration is possible and desired with the United States and that we never fail to keep that government informed of all that we are doing or are about to do."

Former Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden spoke after Chamberlain finished, describing the European situation as "difficult, anxious and menacing."

"There is no relaxation of tension nor can any of us expect such relaxation in the coming weeks," he declared. "No doubt, we shall be lulled, soothed, threatened and provoked, but in essence the Nazi purpose remains the same—to impose upon Poland this year the fate imposed on Czecho-Slovakia last year."

Soviet Stand Outlined

Moscow, July 31 (INS).—Concurrent with Prime Minister Chamberlain's London announcement that Britain and France are sending military missions to Moscow for staff talks, the Communist Party newspaper, Pravda, today declared the Soviet Union is ready to join the Western democracies in a "Genuine peace front."

Apparently in reply to recent foreign rumors alleging that the U. S. S. R. was veering toward Germany and Italy, the Pravda article named the axis powers as the "instigators of the second World War." Cautioning against any further appeasement gestures from London and Paris, the paper declared:

"Only a show of resolute and unyielding strength is capable of halting aggression.

It warned that, despite the forthcoming Anglo-French-Soviet military conference, suspicions still linger in Moscow with regard to the good faith and intentions of Britain and France. The article said:

"Several bourgeois countries want to divert the menace of war from themselves and direct it at the Soviet Union."

Poland Fears Danzig Trade War

Danzig, July 31 (INS).—Marion Chodacki, Polish commissioner to Danzig, was hurrying back to the Free City from Warsaw tonight to investigate reports that Danzig's Nazi-dominated Senate is planning to launch a "trade war" with Poland.

742 Czech Fliers Go to France

Paris, July 31 (AP).—France gained 742 trained aviators for her air corps today with the arrival of two groups of former Czechco-Slovak army fliers at Calais and Boulogne.

The aviators, mostly under 30 years of age, came from Poland.

Britain Seeks U. S. and French Views on Chinese Currency

Refusal to Submit to Japanese Demands Threatens to Cause Breakdown in Tokyo Discussions

By the United Press.

London, July 31.—Great Britain tonight was understood to have opened consultation with the United States and France on Japan's demand for recognition of her currency in China, which has brought the Anglo-Japanese talks in Tokyo to the verge of a breakdown.

The Japanese are demanding that the British withdraw their support from the Chinese Nationalist currency, a development which many experts say would be the quickest method of bringing about collapse of Nationalist resistance.

Demand Surrender of Deposits

The Japanese also demand the surrender of about $4,000,000 worth of Chiang Kai-Shek's silver deposits in British and French banks in the blockaded foreign concessions of Tientsin.

Prime Minister Chamberlain told Commons today that Britain, in carrying on the Tokyo talks, refuses to discuss such questions as support of the Chinese dollar without entering into "the fullest communication with other interested countries."

It was disclosed after Chamberlain spoke that this consultation with the United States and France already was under way.

Until the views of the United States and France are obtained Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax probably will delay sending new instructions to Ambassador Sir Robert L. Craigie in Tokyo and the talks there will remain in a state of indecision meanwhile.

The Japanese contend that the matter of Chinese currency cannot be separated from the basic questions of the Tokyo talks because British support of the Chinese nationalist currency is encouraging disorders.

Richard Austen Butler, parliamentary undersecretary of state, denied, however, that Britain had promised verbally to cease giving support to the Chinese dollar.

A tentative agreement has been reached for Anglo-Japanese collaboration in preventing the use of the British concession in Tientsin as a base for anti-Japanese terrorist activities.

It was understood the British had agreed to hand over to the Japanese four Chinese accused of assassinating a Chinese official of the Japanese-dominated customs service last April, providing, however, that Japan immediately lift her blockade of the concession.

The issue of the four Chinese—now almost forgotten—was cited by Japan as her first reason for imposing the blockade.

The Toyko conferences also were said to have arranged for the British to increase their police force within the concession and the Japanese police will be allowed to assist in hunting down terrorist plotters.

The tentative agreement also was said to provide for a more extensive Anglo-Japanese exchange of information regarding anti-Japanese conspiracies originating inside the concession.

Czech Exports To United States Drop Sharply

J. H. Bruins, American consul at Prague, has reported to the Commerce Department that in the second quarter of 1939, merchandise shipments from what was formerly Czecho-Slovakia to the United States amounted to $312,287, only about one-seventh of the $5,508,510 value of shipments in the same months of last year.

Bruins attributed the decline primarily to the fact that goods of the area, since they are now legally German, must pay higher duties.

The same mail brought an estimate from Consul J. C. Hudson at Berlin that the ratio of German exports to total production has declined from 18.8 per cent in 1933 to 10.4 per cent last year. A large part of the decrease, Hudson explained, is due to increased production of arms and materials for domestic use.

England Expels 10 I.R.A. Suspects

London, July 31 (AP).—Ten more suspected terrorists of the Irish Republican Army were ordered expelled from England tonight.

Another suspect was arrested in the grounds of Hampton Court Palace, which Scotland Yard a few days ago was warned would be bombed. A heavy guard was thrown around the Woolwick Arsenal, Britain's largest ordnance factory.

Horinouchi Asks Hull to Clarify Treaty Abrogation

Japanese Ambassador Horniouchi asked Secretary Hull yesterday for clarification of Hull's notice of termination of the 1911 treaty of commerce and navigation between the United States and Japan.

Horniouchi, who had been vacationing at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., said he discussed the situation generally with the Secretary of State and had not brought with him any representations on the part of his government.

At his press conference later, Hull confirmed that the conversation was general, saying that details were not gone into, no new subject matter introduced and no decisions taken.

2 of Fair's Nudes To Quit; Doves Held Overworked

New York, July 31 (U.P.).—Two World's Fair nudes announced today that they were putting on their clothes and quitting their jobs.

Rosita Royce, who wears seven doves while doing her dance, said the Crystal Palace management was unfair to the doves and chorus girls.

Della Carroll denounced the fair's "stupid nudity ban and unfair censorship of dance costumes."

Lee Blvd. Speed Curb Is Sought

Arlington Safety Council Wants to Cut Limit Pending Legislative Action

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST, Clarendon, Va. Tel. OXford 0509

Aroused by the increasing number of auto accidents on Lee Boulevard, the Arlington County Safety Council is pressing an investigation to find a legal method to drastically cut the 55-mile-an-hour speed limit on the two-mile State highway, Clifton G. Stoneburner, executive director of the council, revealed last night.

Seven persons were injured Sunday in a two-car collision at the intersection of Lee Boulevard and Washington Boulevard. Three accidents occurred earlier last week.

Seek Temporary Check

Stoneburner explained that the speed regulations of the highway, which runs through the county from Falls Church to the Memorial Bridge, are fixed by an act of the State Assembly. The law allows 55 miles an hour on open roads like Lee Boulevard.

The council has voted to seek an assembly law restricting speed on the boulevard to 40 miles an hour, but since the Legislature will not convene until January, a special committee was named to seek temporary means of reducing the speed limit.

Under the present law, Stoneburner pointed out, along sections of highway which is 75 per cent occupied by or developed for residences, the speed limit can be reduced to 25 miles an hour. Thus, speed limits have been lowered on the other four State highways running through the county—Lee highway, Washington boulevard, Glebe road and Columbia pike. An attempt will be made to discover whether the same limitations can be placed on Lee boulevard.

Want More Patrolmen

Scores of accidents have occured on Lee boulevard since the complete highway was opened 20 months ago. Two fatal accidents took place since the beginning of this year.

Worst section of the highway, in the matter of accidents, is that from Fillmore street to Glebe road, according to Stoneburner. Accidents are increasing, he said, since intersections and traffic are increasing.

The council is also seeking to obtain five more State troopers to help the lone State policeman now patroling the five State highways.

Small Vote Seen In Arlington Primary Today

Although 13,832 persons have paid their poll taxes, not more than 3,500 are expected to vote today in the Arlington County Democratic contest for nominations to county board seats and one judgeship.

So little interest has there been in the campaign, that no political rallies were held. Some of the candidates, however, were guests of honor at campaign lawn parties.

Polls will close at 7:20 p. m. Returns will be received at Democratic headquarters, Rucker Building, Clarendon, and at the Clarendon Courthouse.

Mrs. C. C. Haslet, Of Arlington, Hurt in Crash

Mrs. Charles C. Haslet, of Arlington, suffered a spine injury near Grants, N. Mex., Sunday night when her automobile skidded in a rainstorm and plunged over an embankment, the Associated Press reported yesterday.

Her sister-in-law, Edith Haslet, of Wellington, Kans., was slightly injured. Mrs. Haslet's 14-month-old son, Charles, jr., escaped injury. The three were taken to a hospital at Gallup, N. Mex.

Mrs. Haslet's husband is a member of the Washington staff of the Associated Press. The party had been visiting relatives in the Middle West and California.

Arlington Firemen Meet Tomorrow

First Company, Arlington Fire Department, will meet at the firehouse tomorrow night to select delegates to the State firemen's convention, scheduled later this month at Cape Charles, Va. The firemen will also discuss proposals for addition of a dormitory to the firehouse at a cost of $2,000.

Activities of the Arlington County Firemen's Training School will be described by Capt. M. R. Bruin, director of the county emergency first aid corps, and William E. Hill, State fire instructor, who is conducting the school.

Thomas E. Dyson Funeral Is Held

The funeral of Thomas E. Dyson, 63, who died Saturday at his home, 616 South Alfred street, Alexandria, was held yesterday morning from St. Mary's Catholic Church. Services were conducted by the Rev. Joseph L. Leitch, assistant pastor of the church.

Mr. Dyson went to work for the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. in Washington in 1900, and came to Alexandria as manager of the local office of that company in 1901, serving in that capacity for over 37 years. Pallbearers were E. A. Sweeley, Nicholas J. Lawler, Leo P. Harlow, Jacob M. Krafft, W. S. Teagle, Dr. Martin D. Delaney and Julian O'K. Downey. Burial was in St. Mary's Cemetery.

Lions' Luncheon Today

The Arlington Lions Club will hold its luncheon meeting at 12:30 p. m. today in the Washington Golf and Country Club. George P. Grove, president, and Marvin L. Wilson, head of the Alexandria Club, will report on the convention recently held at Pittsburgh.

Burnt Mills Dam Silting Discounted

Main Purpose of Reservoir Unaffected, Engineer Reports

The water supply system for suburban Prince Georges and Montgomery counties will not be affected by reduction in the capacity of the Burnt Mills Reservoir, due to heavy deposits of silt, Harry Hall, chief engineer of the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission, said yesterday.

A report by the Soil Conservation Service stated the reservoir would be "ruined as a water supply within the next nine years" because of its heavy rate of silting.

Hall pointed out that the reservoir was intended primarily as an "intake dam," and not for storage purposes.

"No matter how much it becomes silted," he said, "there always will be a stream, and this will be sufficient to serve the main purpose for which the reservoir was built."

Besides, he said, the sanitary commission eventually plans to get all its water from the Patuxent River, where several dams will be constructed. The first step in this plan will be completed next month when the Mink Hollow pumping station is placed in operation. This will make it possible to pump 8,000,000 gallons of water daily from the Paxtuxent River into the Northwest Branch of the Anacostia, present source of supply.

Montgomery Commissioners Receive New Police Manual

Trial Board System Provided in Volume Governing Actions of County Police; Tax Bills to Be Mailed Tomorrow

MONTGOMERY COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST, 9213 Clark Ave., Silver Spring, Md. Telephone SHepherd 4200.

Montgomery County's new police setup is expected to move a step forward today when approximately three-fourths of the proposed police manual is presened to the count commissioners for approval.

The manual, which is to govern police of the county in all their actions, is being prepared by B. Peyton Whalen, police civil service commissioner; Chief of Police Charles M. Oreme, Miss Vivian V. Simpson and Joseph B. Simpson, jr., counsel to the commissioners, and Ralph H. Chase, secretary to the president of the county board.

Chief among the items covered is the police trial board, to provide judicial proceedings for trials of county police charged with infractions of the manual.

Commissioner Whalen also is working night and day in an effort to complete preparations for the civil service examination which is to provide an eligible list for future appointments o. county police.

Montgomery County tax bills will be mailed beginning tomorrow to approximately 45,000 county taxpayers, County Treasurer John B. Diamond announced yesterday. The tax bills are ready for distribution three weeks earlier than is the usual custom.

Treasurer Diamond said that the bills are due as of July 1, but that no penalties will be charged on any bill paid prior to September 1. After that date interest will be charged at the rate of 6 per cent per year. Property on which taxes are not paid by January 1 will be subject to advertising and sale at the annual tax sale in March.

Taxes must be paid in one lump sum this year. The General Assembly repealed the law permitting semiannual payment of taxes because of the general failure of taxpayers to take advantage of its provisions.

Prince Georges Janitor Slashed; Blames Nazis

Prince Georges County police were investigating last night an assault upon Bruno Janowski, 27, a Polish janitor employed at the Sacred Heart Home, who said he was slashed by Nazis.

Janowski was brought to Casualty Hospital by a motorist after the assault on a side road. Five stitches were taken.

He told County Policeman Richard Pearson he believed the two white assailants were Nazis because he "had been criticizing Adolf Hitler."

He had been employed at the home for over three years since his arrival from Germany, where he was born of Polish parents, he said.

2 Takoma Park Boys Hurt in Fall From Bicycle

Two Takoma Park (Md.) boys were injured yesterday when they fell off a bicycle they were riding along Carroll avenue. They are Ramsey Ogilvie, 13, of 103 Lincoln avenue, who was operating the bicycle, and Robert Hiatt, 12, 106 Lincoln avenue, who was riding the crossbar of the wheel.

The Hiatt boy's foot caught in the front wheel, causing the bicycle to upset, according to the police. The rescue squad of Takoma Park Volunteer Fire Department rushed the Ogilvie lad to Washington Sanitarium, where he was treated for severe bruises on the face and a slight concussion. The Hiatt boy was treated for cuts on his feet.

Arlington Groups To Hold Carnival

The Arlington County Federation of Boys Clubs and the Lyon Park Citizens Association will sponsor a carnival on the grounds of the Lyon Park Community House Friday and Saturday nights.

A contest for a "queen" is being conducted and the winner will be crowned at the close of the program Saturday night. A dinner will be served until 7:30 p. m. each night. Games have been arranged until 8 p. m., to be followed by dancing.

Proceeds will be used to defray expenses of three baseball leagues being sponsored by the federation.

Flower Show Opens Tomorrow

Flower growers of nearby Maryland and Virginia and the District of Columbia will exhibit blooms in the nineteenth annual gladioli show of the Takoma Horticultural Club which will open at 8 p. m. tomorrow at the Takoma branch of the Public Library, Fifth and Cedar streets northwest.

The show will be open all day Thursday. All amateurs are eligible to display blooms. The library will be open for reception of flowers at 3 p. m. today. Several prizes besides the club's certificate of recognition will be awarded.

New Brigade Commander

Appointment of Col. William H. Sands, of Norfolk, commanding the 111th Field Artillery, Virginia National Guard, as brigadier general to command the Fifty-fourth Field Artillery Brigade of the Twenty-ninth National Guard Division, was announced by Gov. Price. The announcement was made by the Governor after State officials of Maryland and Pennsylvania had concurred in his request for Sands' appointment

Factional Fight Enlivens Va. Primary Race

Byrd, Price Rivalry Spurs Interest in Election Today

Richmond, Va., July 31.—Contests imbued with the rivalry of Byrd and Price factions held the center of interest today as a Democratic "off-year" primary campaign reached its clost in Virginia.

Only 15 of the 40 Senate seats are involved in contests while scraps are in prospect for 42 of the 100 House seats.

Rivalry between party groups headed by Senator Byrd and Gov. Price was marked in some of the contests while in others issues were lacking and the voters will make their choice in tomorrow's long day of balloting mainly on a personality basis.

Battles for local offices overshadowed the scramble for General Assembly berths in some counties and these were expected to swell the total vote.

Glass' Son In Fight

A Senate contest which has attracted State-wide interest is being fought in Senator Byrd's home district of Clarke, Frederick and Shenandoah counties and the City of Winchester. T. Russell Cather, a Price leader in tht Upper House, where he has served for eight years, is opposed by Burr P. Harrison, Frederick Commonwealth's attorney who has the backing of the Byrd "organization."

Another conflict more than local significance brings Carter Glass, jr., into State politics for the first time in an effort to unseat Senator Charles E. Burks in the Lynchburg-Campbell district.

Norfolk's campaign for the Senate has been a spirited one with Vivian L. Page seeking to regain one of two seats against a field consisting of W. Taylor Johnson, long a prominent political figure there; former Representative Joseph T. Deal, who is seeking to make a political comeback, and Ralph Daughton and Delamater Davis, former House members.

Charges Purge

Senator Page, opponent of Gov. Price in the last gubernatorial election, added fuel to the campaign by charging that he was the object of a "purge" by Byrd supporters because of his support of Price in the "Coleman amendment" controversy in the 1938 General Assembly.

Berkeley D. Adams, veteran member of the House of Delegates, has been engaged in a spirited fight in Charlotte County against a newcomer to Virginia politics, David K. E. Bruce, son-in-law of the late Andrew Mellon. Bruce is receiving support from the Byrd wing of the party, while Adams is accounted an "antiorganization" man.

House Floor Leader G. Alvin Massenburg is opposed by J. P. White, State Fisheries Commission employe, in the Hampton-Elizabeth City sector. Another fisheries commission attache, Richard J. Brooks, is running against Delegate James Bland Martin in Gloucester.

Richmond will have a lengthy ballot with six candidates seeking three Senate seats and 13 campaigning for six seats in the House. A warm scrap over the city Democratic committee is expected to help bring out a fairly heavy vote.

Leesburg, Va., July 31.—A hard fight in the race for a seat in the Virginia House of Delegates from Loundoun County is expected to bring the polls tomorrow between 3,500 and 4,000 voters, one of the largest numbers in recent primaries. The polls will open at 5:08 a. m. and close at 7:20 p. m.

In the race for a seat in the House of Delegates, H. C. Thompson, of Hillsboro, incumbent, is opposed by Howard Rogers, of Hamilton, a member of the Loudoun County Board of Supervisors for a number of years, and G. Walton Hume, farmer and stockman.

The race for treasurer is also three-cornered, with Howard E. Cole, incumbent, opposed by Gus di Zerega, jr., of Leesburg, and E. Fred James, of Round Hill.

Sheriff E. S. Adrian, who has served the county for 20 years, is being opposed by one of his former deputies, Paul Alexander, of Middleburg.

Stephen Taylor, Once Fireman in Alexandria, Dies

Stephen B. Taylor, 82, a retired fireman and policeman of Alexandria, died yesterday morning in Alexandria Hospital, where he had been a patient for several weeks.

He served as a policeman for some time and then was driver of the old Columbia Company, No. 4, hose wagon for many years, leaving when motor equipment was installed. He then became connected with the Government in the Agriculture Department, and retired five years ago.

He is survived by one son, John S. Taylor, of 227 North Pitt street, and five daughters, Mrs. Harvey W. Williams and Mrs. T. R. Groves, of Alexandria; Mrs. Lee R. Burch, of Washington; Mrs. Robert E. Heater and Mrs. G. N. Anderson, of Arlington.

The funeral will be held at 2 p. m. tomorrow from the Wheatley funeral home, conducted by Dr. William B. McIlwaine, pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church, and the Rev. Norman Roberts, pastor of the Methodist Protestant Church, and also president of Columbia Fire Company. Burial will be in Bethel Cemetery, and bells of the fire company will be tolled during the funeral.

Ellen Young Funeral Today; Friend of Sick

Funeral services for Miss Ellen Middleton Young, who since the war had devoted herself to brightening the hours of patients at Walter Reed Hospital, will be held at 10:30 a. m. today at her home, 5 Magnolia parkway, Chevy Chase, Md., with burial in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Miss Young died at her home Sunday after an illness of nine weeks. She was 59. A native of Washington, she had moved to Chevy Chase about 15 years ago.

An active charitable worker until ill health forced her to give it up eight years ago, she was at one time president of the Women's Auxiliary of St. John's Church in Bethesda, Md., and worked with the Women's Auxiliary to the National Council of the Episcopal Church.

Her almost daily visits to the wards of Walter Reed, with gifts and words of cheer for the patients, formed a personal campaign which she carried on unaided by any organization.

Surviving Miss Young are two sisters, Miss Ida Perry Young and Mrs. Edwin H. Brown, who lived with her.

Musgrove Again Heads Bethesda Fire Volunteers

The Volunteer Fire Department of Bethesda, Md., last night reelected for the fifth time Hiram D. Musgrove as its chief.

Recently reorganized after breaking away from the Bethesda Fire Board, which refused to name Musgrove paid chief, the association also elected the following:

Samuel T. Robertson, president; Sumpter Embrey, first vice president; William Flack, second vice president; Alexander T. Britton, secretary; Earl Poole, treasurer; Robert Fremeau, sergeant at arms; Lewis P. Stone, assistant chief; Gaither Musgrove, captain, first company; LeRoy Lochte, captain, second company; James Peake, captain, third company; Frank G. Stone, captain, rescue squad; Robert Henley, lieutenant, first company; Charles Murphy, lieutenant, second company; Gardner Dodson, lieutenant, third company; Frank Leahy, lieutenant, rescue squad.

Eight new members were admitted. A plan to raise funds through $1a-ayear levy on associate members was discussed.

P.-T. A. Party Tonight

The Parent-Teacher Association of the Cherrydale School, Arlington County, will sponsor a benefit lawn party this evening on the lawn at the home of Mrs. C. J. Curry, opposite the school building.

Man Injured, 3 Escape in Span Collapse

Bridge Near Berryville Crumbles, Plunging Auto, Truck to Banks

Berryville, Va., July 31.—One man was injured slightly and three others escaped unhurt today when a 150-foot section of the Castleman's Ferry Bridge, between Berryville and Round Hill, collapsed, dropping an automobile and truck to the flood-swollen banks of the Shenandoah River.

Arthur Behn, 21, of Page County, driver of the automobile, suffered bruises and lacerations, but managed to extricate himself from the crushed sedan and crawl up the bank.

E. Racey, of Leesburg, driver for Carr's Transfer Co., of that town, and two colored men, who were riding in the truck, were plunged into the river near the bank when the vehicle fell through the span, but swam to shore.

The bridge, believed to have been weakened by swift flood currents of the river, gave way as the truck and automobile approached approximately the same spot on the span. The automobile plunged to the river bank, while the truck, supported somewhat by the understructure of the bridge, hung a few feet above the water near the bank. The river today was 7 feet above normal.

The bridge, of wood and iron, was erected 35 years ago. At that time it was designed only for horse and wagon traffic.

The old span soon was to give way to a new structure now being erected a short distance to the south. The new bridge is concrete and steel.

Highway engineers said tonight that it has not yet been decided whether the bridge will be temporarily repaired for use until the new span is completed.

The bridge is on Route 7, a heavily traveled road in this section of the State. Traffic is being rerouted over Route 50 via Aldie and Middleburg.

Jobless Md. Man Fined $30 for Missing Stop Sign

Ernest Livesay, unemployed, resident of a trailer camp near Berwyn, Md., failed to halt for a stop sign at Brookville road and East-West highway, according to Montgomery County police.

As a result, Livesay yesterday was ordered by Trial Magistrate James C. Christopher, at Bethesda, Md., to pay a fine of $5 for failing to stop; $10 for operating an automobile without a license; $5 for operating without a registration card, and $10 for operating with improper markers.

Livesay told the judge he has six children and has been unemployed a year. Judge Christopher directed that in default of fine the jail sentences for the four offenses run concurrently.

Big Primary Vote Due in Alexandria

Rorex and Rosenberg Supporters Have Been Active in Delegate Campaign

The Washington Post Bureau, 907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va. Phone Temple 2787. Delivery Service, Phone Alex. 247.

With the polls opening at 5:08 a. m., and not closing until 7:20 p. m., today's primary is expected to bring out a large vote, Alexandria authorities predicted last night, particularly as friends of both candidates for the House of Delegates have been active for some time.

The only office to be voted on is the Delegate to the State Legislature. Maurice D. Rosenberg, who has held the office for two terms, is seeking re-election. He is opposed by Col. A. D. Rorex, U. S. M. C., retired. Neither man is a native Alexandrian. Rosenberg, however, has lived here since boyhood, and was educated in the schools of the city. Col. Rorex came to Alexandria seven years ago, buying a home here, and after a short tour of duty elsewhere, returning here to make his permanent home since retirement. Nomination by a Democratic primary is considered equivalent to election.

The voting places and officials are: First Ward, Armory Hall, 200 block of South Royal street. Scott Grimm, registrar; Louis Poss and Bernard Fagan, judges. Nicholas A. Colasanto and Robert Bowman, clerks.

Second Ward, City Hall Building, 100 block North Royal street Frank C. Creighton, registrar; Reuben Hayman and John Lannon, jr., judges; William C. Robinson and John Nugent, clerks.

Third Ward, Odd Fellows Hall, 200 block North Columbus street; J. Norman Legg, registrar; H. H. Martin and Oliver S. Stone, judges; Charles Sherwood and Charles E. Corbett, clerks.

Fourth Ward, Friendship Fire Home, 100 block South Alfred street; George H. Railing, registrar; Richard E. Sweeney and Clarence Dyson, judges; Dr. C. T. Dreifus and C. Smith Chauncey, clerks.

Fifth Ward, Washington avenue and Walnut street; John J. Kiger, registrar; Michael P. Frasca and Robert F. Green, judges; Franklin P. Backus and Fred Petitt, clerks.

Sixth Ward, WPA sewing center, Mount Vernon avenue, near school; George Jones, registrar W. F. Kirwan and J. R. Johnson, judges; Frank Hopkins and J. R. Harding, clerks.

Supporters of Col. Rorex staged an automobile parade of approximately 50 cars through the city last night, from 7 to 8 o'clock.

Supply Pastors Set For Dr. Altfather

Three Washington ministers will fill the pulpit of the Falls Church Presbyterian Church during the vacation of the pastor, the Rev. Alton B. Altfather.

The Rev. Page Etchison, religious work director of the Washington Y. M. C. A., will preach August 6; Dr. Freeley Rohrer, state clerk of the Washington Presbytery, August 13 and 20; Dr. William Sly, associate pastor of Metropolitan Presbyterian Church, of Washington, August 27.

Dr. Altfather leaves today for his vacation of a month, and will visit relatives in Berlin, Pa., and Columbus, N. J. He will attend the Bible school at Massanetta Springs, Va.

Grant Bows in First Match at Southampton

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

POVICH

Among the lucky stiffs in this world are the men who operate the two big leagues. At a time when their pet promotion, the world series, appeared to be going to pot they are finding themselves blessed with an October show that has all the earmarks of a Hellzapoppin success.

We are assuming, of course, that it will be the New York Yankees vs. the Cincinnati Reds in the world series, and the person who wouldn't assume that much at this stage of the proceedings would also hesitate to assume that we are still in the Western Hemisphere.

There they are out in front of their respective leagues—the Yankees by 9 games and the Reds by 12. Their heading for a world series collision that is calculated to fire the imagination of fandom to a higher pitch than any world series since 1924, when Walter Johnson finally made the grade with a surprising Washington Team.

And it's lucky for major league baseball that it will be the Yankees vs. the Reds. Because if it were the Yanks vs. the Giants, or the Yanks vs. the Cubs or Cardinals or Pirates again the jaded public would stay away from the worldseries games by millions. It's obvious that folks are weary of watching the Yankees slap down very ordinary National League opposition. Yankee Stadium has not been sold out for a world series game since 1926.

But the Yanks vs. the Reds, that would be different. The Yanks wouldn't be playing any push-over club exhausted by the rigors of a close race in its own league. Barring a complete collapse of the Reds, they're apt to win the National League pennant by more of a margin than even the Yankees can show in the American League.

Cincinnati Would Go Ga-Ga Over Pennant

Cincinnati, already obsessed by the pennant passion, would go quite ga-ga if the Reds get into the world series. In Cincinnati the series would regain some of the glamor lost in recent years when big towns like New York and Chicago absorbed the series with little more than a surface ripple. It's been 20 years since the Rhineland had a world series, and that last one, you remember, was a phoney what with the Black Sox tossing off games to the Cincinnati boys.

If Judge Landis and the two league presidents had convened earlier in the year and written a script for the 1939 pennant races with an eye to a crashing world series climax they couldn't have improved on the current set-up of the Reds vs. the Yanks. It's a touch of promotorial genius sans a promoter. They're simply playing in luck.

Of course at the finish it may add up to the same old story—the Yanks making a shambles of the series in accustomed Yankee fashion, but no smart baseball man would predict that sort of a thing this year. Because while the Yanks are still typically the Yanks, the Reds appear to be no mere National League ball club.

Unlike the Cubs and the Giants and the Cardinals, they aren't winning the National League pennant in a drunken stagger. The Reds are overwhelming the National League no less than the Yankees are dominating the American. In fact the Cincinnati club is doing a better job than the Yanks at the business of terrifying the opposition this season.

The Redlegs Are Stealing the Yanks' Stuff

Here's a club that you'd have to say has a chance to beat the Yankees in a world series. And no mere long-shot chance, either. In a manner, the Reds resemble the Yankees. There appears to be lots of Yankee stuff in Bill McKechnie's outfit. The other day they won their third straight double-header. That's a steal from the time-honored procedure of the Yankees.

From the start of the season they've been rolling along in Yankee fashion. In fact the Reds haven't encountered a single long slump. While the other contenders in the league are beating the daylights out of each other, the Reds simply move along beating everybody and drawing away to a longer lead than any National League club has ever taken at this stage of the season in recent years.

Those Reds are a team of opportunists. They're about to win the pennant in a year when Johnny Vander Meer, a double no-hit pitcher, can't make good even as a relief pitcher. They haven't let that bother 'em, though. Big Ernie Lombardi, Frank McCormick and Ival Goodman keep banging out home runs and when they don't along come guys like little Lonnie Frey and Billy Myers to hit some homers.

You'd have to call the Reds an inspired ball club. They lose Ival Goodman by a shoulder injury in the All-Star game and that doesn't annoy 'em. They still win. The other day they were getting a battle from the lowly Phillies for eight innings when suddenly—poof!—a home run by Billy Meyers with the bases full. That's how pennants are made.

It's not exactly a mystery that the Reds are making a farce of the National League race. For years Bill McKechnie has been recognized as perhaps the best manager in the big leagues. He's no green-pea at the pennant-winning business. Won flags for the Cardinals and Pirates and almost put the Bees in the first division, which was even more of a feat.

McKechnie prevailed upon the Reds' bosses to pay $25,000 for Bill Werber at a time when all American League clubs held him in such low esteem they waived. Werber has caught the pennant fever and would be a tough hombre in a world series. The entire picture adds up to a beautiful break for the big leagues.

Palagyi Joins Nats' Latest Rookie Parade

Clark Griffith's late-summer parade of rookie talent is hoving into view with his bush-beaters flushing the rustics out of their minor league hideouts in the Washington farm system. New Face No. 2 is scheduled to report to the Nats on August 15.

He is Michael Palagyi, who Griffith says is a pitcher. This much is known about him. He is 23 years old, a 6-foot right-hander, and has been in the hire of the Nats' Spartanburg Club, of the Sally League, for two seasons. He won 12 games and lost 15 last year and this season he is showing a record of seven wins against three losses.

Palagyi is not a Cuban, a Venezuelan or a Kurd. It is strongly suspected that he is an Italian, but Griffith has investigated no further than his pitching record. On a Sunday afternoon this month when the attendance needs a bit of stimulating, Mr. Griffith will unveil Palagyi as a starting pitcher.

New Face No. 1 among the recently acquired Nats, young Bob Loane, has not exactly impressed the Washington bosses beyond showing a laudable ability to go and get a fly ball in most any direction, and throw it. On ground balls to the outfield, he has been causing considerable anguish.

"He's got to show us he can hit," said Griffith yesterday of Loane. "He is supposed to be a hitter, but you wouldn't guess it from what we've seen of him. We've got to wait, though. He looks like he's a bit overanxious up there, trying to make good in a hurry. If that wears off, we may have something."

From Charlotte, from Springfield and from Shelby in the North Carolina State League, Griffith will be calling in his young chattels with increasing frequency henceforth.

"There are some boys in Charlotte I'd like to look at," he was saying yesterday," but they may be delayed getting here. If Charlotte gets into the play-off, they won't join us until the middle of September. I want to see Evans, that young catcher, and Early Winn, the right-handed pitcher, who are the best battery in the Piedmont League."

There is doubt that big Roberto Ortiz, the giant Cuban, will return to the Nats this season. Ortiz, who failed as a pitcher, was making a tremendous comeback as an outfielder until he was conked on the head by a thrown ball and suffered a fractured skull. Griffith plans to retire him for the remainder of the season.

Surveying the pitching help the Nats might obtain from their minor league farms, Wynn and Bucky Jacobs are the outstanding prospects. Both failed to impress Harris at Orlando last year, but Wynn has been top pitcher in the Piedmont League all season, and at Springfield young Jacobs has been the hottest hombre in the Eastern League. At one point during the season he won 13 straight victories.

Legion Junior Nines Begin Title Series

Play for the American Legion junior baseball championship begins today at 4:45 p. m. on the North Ellipse when Sergt. Jasper Post, winner of the first half, meets Fort Stevens, winner of the second half of the tourney.

Senators Outbid For Pitching Star By Buccaneers

Pittsburgh, July 31 (AP).—The Pirates announced today they had outbid five other major league clubs for the "biggest man in baseball," Pitcher John A. Gee, jr., of the Syracuse International League Club.

Gee, 6 feet 9 inches tall and weighing 215 pounds, is a southpaw. He is 23 and joined the Syracuse team direct from the University of Michigan in 1937. In 1938 he won 17 and lost 11 games. This season he has won 16 and lost 4.

President William Benswanger, the Pirate officer disclosed, paid "cash running well into five figures and four players to be delivered next year." The Giants, Cubs, Yankees, Reds and Senators had all bid for Gee.

Gee will join the Pirates at the end of the International League season, September 10. If the Syracuse team lands in the Little World Series, he will arrive later.

Here Is the Finish That Made It an All-Time Record Double at Bel Air

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Mirmiss gallops home first in the second half of the daily-double to make it a $1,119.60 payoff at Bel Air race track—the highest double in the history of the course. Four persons held tickets on the combination of Canwyn, in the first race, and Mirmiss, in the second. Golden Key is shown finishing second and Sparkling third yesterday on the Maryland track

Nedayr and Epatant Victors at Saratoga

By the Associated Press

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., July 31.—The tradition of Saratoga, 75 years old this meeting, carried through the opening races on the Spa's diamond jubille program today with a pair of horse owners long identified with racing here holding the trump cards.

A disappointing crowd of approximately 8,000 was in the stands when Mrs. Charles Shipman Payson, daughter of Mrs. Payne Whitney, sent out Epatant as the winner of the Flash Stakes for 2-year-olds. Later, Willis Sharpe Kilmer's Nedayr captured the cofeature, the 7-furlong American Legion Handicap.

Epatant, one of Mrs. Payson's most highly regarded youngsters, was away well under Johnny Longden and made every post a winning one, beating another Whitney entry, Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney's Parasang, two lengths at the finish. The race was worth $5,150 to Epatant, and he was held a joint favorite with Parasang and John Hay Whitney's Woof Woof at 5 for 1.

Late Burst Wins

Longden, the riding sensation of the recent Arlington Park meeting, seemed to have disposed of Parasang's bid through the back stretch but when the Whitney juvenile ran at him again in the run for the wire his mount had enough to draw away over the fast-drying track; the victor's time was 1::06 1-5 for the 5½ furlongs.

Nedayr's victory likewise was an end-to-end affair. After disposing of Armor Bearer through the first 5 furlongs, Geo rge Seabo pushed the Kilmer colt to the limit to win a half length from Howard Bruce's Jay Jay, the favorite. George D. Widener's Birch Rod finished third, another half length back.

Winning $2,925 in his first victory this year, Nedayr returned the long-shot players with 10 to 1. He covered the 7 furlongs in 1:24 flat, only four-fifths of a second behind the track record.

Rains Scare Crowd

A morning thundershower that turned the track into a sea of mud for a time kept turf followeds away in droves as compared with opening day last year when an estimated 12,000 filled the stands. Society favorites and celebrities, however, were at accustomed places in the clubhouse.

After the rain, skies cleared, but the bright sunshine came a trifle too late to make any appreciable difference in attendance. The racing crowd is in town, though, and if the weather holds the 26 other stakes planned for the next 29 racing days should draw well.

Wrigley Denies French Requested Release From Cubs

Chicago, July 31 (AP).—Larry French, Chicago Cubs southpaw, revealed today he had asked Owner Phil Wrigley in a personal interview why he did not get to pitch more often for the team.

FRENCH

But French denied published reports that he had asked Wrigley for his release.

After the news of his interview with French last Friday leaked out Wrigley issued a statement today also denying French had asked for his freedom.

Wrigley said French had no complaints to make except "that he would like to be able to work more often in order to warrant his continued employment." The owner said he told French how often he pitched was up entirely to Manager Gabby Hartnett.

In Moline, Ill., for an exhibition game, Hartnett asked "did French tell Mr. Wrigley how many times he was knocked out of the box?"

French, after a poor season in 1938, has started only ten games this year. After a shaky start this spring French won four straight games, but then was knocked out of the box on several successive starts. He has won six games and lost five.

Hazel Bishopp Tops Advance At Rock Creek

Johanna Zettlemeier Beaten as Tourney Enters Quarter-finals

Hazel Bishopp, the hard-hitting University of Maryland player who long has been showing potentialities of a star, turned in one of her most impressive performances yesterday to lead the advance of favorites in the District Women's Tennis League tournament at the Rock Creek courts.

Miss Bishopp, a tall, powerful girl who hits the ball as hard as most men with every stroke, whipped Johanna Zettlemeier, 6—2, 6—2, to move into the quarter-final round together with Defending Champion Charlotte Decker, Dorette Miller, Marian Cunningham, Edith McCullough, Sally Whipple and Eleanor Fishburn.

The round of eight will be completed today by the winner of the match between Second-seeded Joan Bransford and Barbara Conard.

Miss Bishopp displayed unusual steadiness and a vastly improved service in her convincing victory over Miss Zettlemeir, who defeated her rival handily the last time they met. The No. 2 player on the George Washington team came through with no fewer than four aces and at frequent other times her first service was so fast that Miss Zettlemeir could manage only a weak return.

Sally Whipple, considered the tournament "dark horse," continued her impressive march with a hard-fought three-set conquest of Helen Levy, 6—3, 1—6, 6—2. Miss Whipple, who plays No. 1 on the Washington Golf and Country Club golf team, has a well-rounded game and may cause more trouble.

On today's schedule are three quarter-final singles and two quarter-final doubles matches.

SINGLES—Hazel Bishopp defeated Johanna Zettlemeier, 6—2, 6—2; Marian Cunningham defeated Wilma Dinowitzer, 6—0, 6—0; Dorette Miller defeated Francis Carter, 6—1, 6—3; Edith McCulloch defeated Dorothy Towns, 6—1, 6—2; Sally Whipple defeated Helen Levy, 6—3, 1—6, 6—2; Eleanor Fishburn defeated Mary Gray, 1—6, 6—4, 6—4; Charlotte Decker defeated Eleanor Voith, 7—5, 6—2.

TODAY'S SCHEDULE

Singles

Quarterfinals—10 a. m., Dorette Miller vs. Marian Cunningham; 5 p. m., Edith McCulloch vs. Charlotte Decker; Sally Whipple vs. Eleanor Fishburn.

Doubles

Quarterfinals — 5:30, Voith-Levy vs. Gray-Towns; Decker-Cunningham vs. Bishopp-Zettlemeier.

Consolation Singles

5 p. m., Doris Rothwell vs. Sally Miller; Nancy McCaslish vs. Ruth Rhetts; Kathleen Klotz vs. Lee Parker.

Miss Bernhard Is Defeated In Tennis Play

Seabright Winner Is Off Form After Hard Tournament Program

By the Associated Press

Easthampton, N. Y., July 31.—Helen Bernard, 17-year-old national girls' champion, and recent winner of the Sea Bright tournament, was upset in the opening round of the annual Maidstone Club invitation by Florence LeBoutillier, of Westbury, N. Y., 8—6, 6—3.

Miss Bernhard, New York's newest addition to top flight tennis, plainly showed the effects of her arduous schedule, which has carried her through four tournaments without respite in the last month. She was easy prey for Miss LeBoutillier's speedy passing shots, and showed none of her usual effectiveness at the net.

Helen Jacobs, of Berkeley, Calif., seeded No. 3, was the highest ranked player of the day to see action. She defeated Miss Mary Arnold, of Los Angeles, 4—6, 9—7, 6—1.

Dorothy Workman, of Los Angeles, rated fourth in the draw, trimmed Patricia Canning, of Alameda, Calif., 6—2, 6—2, while Dorothy May Bundy, No. 6, of Santa Monica, Calif., overcame Catharine Malcolm, of Los Angeles, 6—1, 6—3.

Mme. Sylvia Henrotin, of France, second seeded foreigner, won a hard match from Louise Raymond, of Scarsdale, N. Y., 2—6, 6—3, 6—4.

Helen Pederson, of Stamford, Conn., and Virginia Wolfenden, of San Francisco, seeded seventh and eighth, advanced to the second round, both with 6—2, 6—3 triumphs. Miss Pederson defeated Elizabeth Blackman, of Detroit, and Miss Wolfenden smothered Marilyn McCrae, of Little Rock, Ark.

Chicago, July 31 (AP).—Prairie Dog, racing for Mrs. Emil Denemark, of Chicago, and masterfully ridden by Jockey Kenneth McCombs, won the opening-day feature race before 17,000 at Washington Park today.

Prairie Dog ran the 6 furlongs in 1:11 2-5, paying $12 to win, $6.60 to place, $3.80 to show.

Chase Selected As Starter Today Against Brownies

Kendall Chase, of near-no-hit fame, will face the St. Louis Browns today when Fred Haney's charges visit Griffith Stadium for the first of three single games with the Nats.

Chase, the in-and-out southpaw who held the Cleveland Indians hitless for eight innings on Friday, will go to the mound with three days' rest. Vernon Kennedy, who has had mediocre success since traded to the Browns by the Tigers, will oppose Chase on the mound.

After a long losing streak that followed the announcement from the Browns' owners of a bonus for seventh, sixth, or a fifth-place finish, the Browns won two out of three over the Boston Red Sox last week-end.

The Nats have won eight of 13 engagements with St. Louis this season.

Bel Air's 'Double' Pays Four $1,119.60

Special Dispatch to The Post

Bel Air, Md., July 31.—Four people in the crowd of 6,500 took down $1,119.60 each when Mrs. Gordon H. Pearce's Canwyn and E. K. Moore's Mirmiss won the day's first and second races, respectively.

Today's "double" payoff established a new record for this track. The old mark of $1,112.40 was posted on August 1, 1938, when Bernard Bond's Sure Miss and Travelo, owned by E. Samaha, of Washington, won the first and second races, respectively.

Persian Prince, owned by T. T. Mott, of Washington, fell and broke his neck in the Hickory Steeplechase, 2-mile secondary feature, which was won by Samuel Early's Justa Bud. Mr. T. T. Mott, jr., well-known amateur rider and son of Persian Prince's owner, was knocked unconscious. He revived a half hour later in the track's emergency hospital.

Mrs. J. B. Hatfield's Alpine Boy, a first-time starter, upset calculations when he raced the Bel Air course in 0:58 to land the Kingsville, feature flat race. He paid $17.40. O. S. Jennings' Blablah, favorite, set the early pace, but tired badly and just managed to take the place from Joseph Mooney's Elton Head.

Mead Demands $20,000 Title Fight Forfeit

Armstrong's Manager Moves to Protect His Champion

By the Associated Press

Carmel, N. Y., July 31.—Perhaps it doesn't need it but the Henry Armstrong-Lou Ambers lightweight championship fight August 22 got a little "pulmotor treatment" today.

Eddie Mead, Armstrong's manager, insisted he wouldn't go through with the bout unless Al Weill, Ambers' manager, posted a $20,000 forfeit to protect Armstrong's welterweight title. He said there was nothing in the present contract to prevent Ambers from claiming both crowns should he win.

Weill said he wouldn't post the money.

"I've already signed an agreement with Mike Jacobs for a welterweight title bout between Ambers and Armstrong in New York November 1," Weill said. "I'm not going to claim the welter title until Ambers fights and beats Armstrong at the welter limit."

The fighters go before the New York State Athletic Commission tomorrow to sign formally for the August 22 bout. Mead may have forgotten his "worry" by that time.

Tru-Blu and Sunshine Arcade Meet Tonight

The first of three double-headers in as many nights is scheduled in second-half Metro Night Softball League competition at Seat Pleasant, Md., tonight.

At 9:15 o'clock tonight first-half champion Tru-Blu engages Sunshine Arcade Laundry, while U. S. Aggies meet Dixie Tavern at 8 o'clock.

105-Pound Woman Beats Male Stars In Rifle Match

Fort Worth, Tex., July 31 (AP).—A 105-pound woman, Mrs. L. P. Bartlett, of San Antonio, outshot men sharpshooters from seven States here to take first prize in the Southwestern regional rifle shoot.

Without benefit of a handicap, Mrs. Bartlett scored 3,178 points out of a possible 3,200 in eight events to outscore 70 competitors.

Pitcher and Outfielder Seeking Team Berths

Bucky Walters' Success Is Rarity

His Change From Infield Berth Is Bringing Him Fame

By the Associated Press

Chicago, July 31.—Baseball players seeking fame on the pitching mound after the manner of infielder-turned-hurler Bucky Walters would do well to study the records before taking the step.

The records for many years back give an eloquent, if pessimistic, account of the infielders and outfielders who began trying to fool opposing batters midway in their careers.

Walters is one of the few who made a go of it. A so-so infielder for many years, Walters switched to pitching in 1934 while with the Philadelphia Phillies. His first four years he won 34 and lost 45, but found his stride last season with the Phils and Cincinnati Reds, winning 15 and losing 14.

Now he has finally arrived. He has 18 victories for this season and appears a cinch to win at least 25 games for the high-flying Cincinnati club.

Another infielder who became a winning pitcher was Bob Smith, who turned in many mound decisions for the Boston National League club more than a decade ago.

The sensational outcome of Walters' decision to change positions possibly will inspire others to do likewise.

The Phillies have one player—Outfielder Joe Marty—who bankers to display his speed and hooks from the mound. Tuck Stainback, of the Dodgers, is also reported drilling for his pitching debut, while Marty already has made his.

BUCKY WALTERS

Other Players Who Contemplate Move Should See Records

Marty pitched against Cincinnati Sunday in a relief role—his first time on the mound in his life—and he allowed two hits and two runs in four innings, struck out one and walked three batters.

Charles (Red) Lucas, released by Pittsburgh last winter after a long career, and Vernon Kennedy, now of St. Louis Browns, were two others who tried to combine pitching and playing other positions. But both soon decided pitching was their forte, although Lucas played a half dozen major-league games or so as an infielder.

Mark Koenig, former Yankee shortstop, failed as a pitcher at Detroit and Washington after his star faded as an infielder. Charley Jamieson, brilliant Cleveland outfielder 20 years ago, met the same fate under similar circumstances.

Jamieson was a minor league pitcher before graduating to the Washington Club of the American League. There he was switched to the outfield because of his heavy hitting.

The Chicago Cubs also have a reformed infielder on their present mound staff—Gene Lillard. He came up as a third baseman, but turned to pitching more than a year ago.

Gilbert Hunt, Bobby Riggs Are Winners

Prusoff Turns Back Little Atlantan in Opener, 6—4, 6—3; Parker Withdraws

By the Associated Press

Southampton, N. Y., July 31.—Bryan (Bitsy) Grant, of Atlanta, fourth seeded in the annual Meadow Club invitation tournament, was eliminated today in a first-round match by Henry Prusoff, of Seattle, 6—4, 6—3.

Prusoff, employing a deceptive array of drop shots and trap shots, left the former Davis Cup player stranded repeatedly on the baseline and Grant was completely winded before the second set was half over.

Prusoff, considered a potential great four years ago before he broke his back and hip in a fall, is making his first Eastern swing since recovering and today's triumph over Grant is his most noteworthy of the season.

Falters Once

Only once did the Westerner show signs of faltering, and that was after he had assumed a quick 5-0 advantage in the second set. Grant availed himself of Prusoff's momentary weakness at the net and won two successive games, one of them at love against Prusoff's service. But then Grant, attempting to force the issue, rushed the net indiscreetly and Prusoff picked that spot to regain his control, passing Grant for the vital point.

Top-seeded Bobby Riggs, of Chicago, moved into the second round with a 6—4, 6—2 triumph over Chester Murphy, also of Chicago. The Wimbledon champion played with his customary aloofness, but the capable Murphy was surprisingly inept and Riggs was not harmed by his own dilatory tactics.

Gil Hunt Wins

Gilbert Hunt, the Davis Cup prospect from Washington, D. C., and a semifinalist in last week's Seabright play, won his first-round match over John Cudihy, Southampton, 6—4, 6—1.

Claiming fatigue because of "too much tennis," Frankie Parker, of Pasadena, Calif., and Don McNeill, of Oklahoma City, withdrew suddenly from the tournament, scrambling the draw and causing a wave of anger among overworked tournament officials.

Parker defeated McNeill in the finals of the Sea Bright tournament yesterday and together they won the doubles championship.

Frank D. Guernsey, jr., Orlando, Fla., defeated Peter Lauck, Wynnewood, Pa., 6—3, 6—3.

William Murphy, Chicago, defeated Clifton Nunes, Cuba, 6—2, 6—3.

Russell Bobbitt, Atlanta, Ga., defeated Felicis Ampon, Philippines, 6—4, 6—3, 6—2.

Doug Imhoff, Berkeley, Calif., defeated Richard Cooley, Rye, N. Y., 6—2, 6—1.

Roger Peacock to Captain Local All-Star Golfers Sunday

Baltimore Team Foe at Manor Club

Junior Squad Also Named for Match With Baltimore August 23

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Roger S. Peacock, Indian Spring's Middle Atlantic champion and Maryland State finalist, was appointed captain of Washington's all-star amateur team that will meet Baltimore's best in the second annual inter-city team match Sunday at Manor Country Club. The team selections were named yesterday by Walter McCallum, Maury Fitzgerald and the writer, in meeting with Dr. Robert A. Keilty, vice president of the Maryland State Golf Association.

PEACOCK

Six players from Indian Spring's star-studded membership gained places on the team, with three from Congressional's Maryland State champions, two each from Manor, Columbia and Capital and one from Chevy Chase. Alternates represent Indian Spring, Manor, Congressional and Kenwood.

The match will start at 1 p. m. Sunday, with scoring in individual matches and 1 point in each foursome for best ball. Baltimore sports writers will select the Monumental City team, that lost, 17 to 7, last year at Rolling Road.

The team:

INDIAN SPRING—Roger Peacock (captain), Volney Burnett, Buddy Sharkey, Claude Rippy, Ralph Bogart and Jerry Hart. Alternate—Louis Fuchs.

CONGRESSIONAL—Earl McAleer, Billy Shea and M. Parker Nolan. Alternate—Billy Dettweiler.

MANOR—Bobby Brownell and Dick Meyer. Alternate—Tommy Bones.

COLUMBIA—Martin F. McCarthy and Earle Skinker.

CHEVY CHASE—Page Hufty.

KENWOOD—Alternate—Johnny Bergelin.

Harry G. Pitt, Manor's tournament veteran, was named but will be out of town at the time of the match.

Two-thirds of the team was a cinch due to their domination of the local and sectional tournament this year, but the remainder were chosen on past performances and on the amount and caliber of golf they are playing at the present.

Five members of last year's squad were not named, as they have dropped out of local competition: Levi Yoder, Eddie Bean, Russ Hollebaugh, Ralph Quinter and Harvey Johnson.

Peacock will have full say as to the players used and pairings, and will not announce the lineup until just before the starting time.

The District all-star junior team was also named for the match at Woodholme August 23, against the Baltimoreans. Washington had a decisive edge in this event last year, winning by a double 12-6 score.

The lineup:

INDIAN SPRING—Billy Shea, Ralph Bogart, Buddy Sharkey.

CAPITAL—Bob Brown; alternate, Buster Mrstek.

COLUMBIA—Earle Skinner; alternate, Ben Hartig.

KENWOOD—George Vass.

CONGRESSIONAL—David Ross.

ARMY AND NAVY—Jimmy Stevens; alternate, Frank Dunham.

MANOR—Bobby Brownell and Dick Meyer.

The amateur match Sunday will find the locals heavy favorites to repeat, although the score may not be as decisive. The visitors can counter with Spencer Overton, Ernie Caldwell, William Eager, State champion, and Ernie Caldwell, but other than the four named the players will be below the golfing standards of the locals.

Van Buren Teams Win at Softball

Both the junior and senior softball teams of Van Buren Playground advanced into the finals of the District Recreation Tourney yesterday when the youngsters defeated Benning, 8-6, and the seniors beat Orr, 7-0.

The juniors took their sixth straight victory for a clean slate, while the senior ten was in a playoff with Orr—each team having won a previous five out of six games.

Boxing Show Monday 'Elimination' Card

'A Natural,' Says Ahearn—Turner, Hoping for Joe Louis Nemesis, Of Heavyweight Fights at Stadium

By Al Hailey

The all-heavyweight boxing show featuring Nathan Mann and Steve Dudas Monday night at Griffith Stadium yesterday achieved proportions of an "elimination" tourney as Promoter Joe Turner and Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn went into a trance and emerged with the idea that Joe Louis' nemesis may evlove out of next week's business.

With Buddy Baer and Max Schmeling both in the running for a crack at the winner of the Mann-Dudas ten-round fight, the local fight moguls are looking for a sharp upturn in interest in the pending heavyweight show.

Schmeling

"I myself personally thought up this featherweight elimination last year that produced Joey Archibald as champion," Ahearn said. "Now here we are with two heavyweights who licked the daylights out of the guy that's fighting Joe Louis for the title next month and four other heavyweight fights that will bring out some nice young talent."

"It oughta be a natural, Goldie," murmured Turner dreamily.

It's a Natural

"You bet it's a natural—why, we got so much weight out there with all of them 200-pound fellows that I guess we'll have to reinforce the ring," Goldie beamed. "How's that, we'll have to put extra supports under the ring."

"Tell'im what Joe Guold said, Goldie." murmured Turner, still dreamily.

It develops that Gould, former manager of Jim Braddock, and now comanager with Braddock of Dudas, is branding Dudas as the second "Cinderella man" of the fight game. Braddock, of course, was the first.

"Dudas is a greater fighter than most people think," Gould told Ahearn. "We were happy to get him from Billy McCarney for three grand and we believe he has the stuff to win the title.

Louis Ran Away

"Now there's a guy whose style of boring in and throwing leather every second is just what Mann wants," Goldie interpolated. "Mann is strictly a puncher—why, he would of knocked out Joe Louis in the first round of their fight last year if Joe hadn't run away from him. Natie staggered Joe and showed 'em then Joe couldn't take it. Of course, Joe knocked him out in the fourth round, but what the hell."

By virtue of his knockouts of George Fitch and Art Laskey and his leap into the New England heavyweight title with a 12-round decision over Al McCoy, Mann has jumped into the line-up of the first ten heavyweight championship contenders, Col. Harvey L. Miller, secretary of the District Boxing Commission, and chairman of the National Boxing Commission's ratings committee, said.

On the Dudas-Mann card will be two 6-rounders featuring Heavyweights Ralph Ivans, another Gould-Braddock charge, against Al Lowman, of Baltimore, and Maynard Daniels, Marine fighter, against Jake Friedman, of Baltimore. Two other heavyweight bouts are to be signed.

Local Teams Schedule Johnny Stone Games

Local softball and baseball teams lined up for benefit games for the Johnny Stone Day fund yesterday. Tru Blu's softball team will meet Curley White's All-Stars in a night game, August 25, in Griffith Stadium, while Lou Blue's nine will schedule a Stone Day game at an early date.

White, an employe at the stadium and friend of Stone, secured use of the ball park without expense from Clark Griffith.

Midget Racers Resume Sport Here Tonight

20 Drivers Listed For Races at Capital Speedway at 7:30 P. M.

Midget auto racing, which furnished thrills for more than 12,000 fans last week, will get a second trial tonight when 20 drivers bring their "iron jitterbugs" to the starting line at the new Capital Speedway, New York avenue and Bladensburg road northeast.

With fair weather promised, another capacity crowd is expected to turn out to watch the daredevil pilots fight their sputtering midgets around the quarter-mile oval.

Time trials begin at 7:30 p. m., and with the track "fast" a new record for the oval is likely.

Convinced that last week's "surprise" turnout was not just an expression of curiosity, backers of the speedway have added four new entrances and exits to permit easier handling of the crowd expected tonight. New pits have been built, a new public address system has been added and the wire fence has been reinforced as a safety measure.

Fourteen drivers had been signed yesterday, Promoter Jimmy Fratone said. He was in Philadelphia last night to sign six other pilots.

Paul Russo, 1938 midget racing champion, whose brushes with death can't be counted on two hands, is expected to return tonight. Others expected to compete include Duke Nalen, who drives a Russo-owned racer; Charley Breslin, Harry Felton, Joe Chitwood, Bud Stillwagon, Rex Records, Honey Purich, George Marshman, Red Redmond, Johnny Favinger and Charley Winnai.

The races are conducted under sanction of the American Automobile Association. Because of the Lucky Teter show, scheduled for a return Thursday night, the Friday night motorcycle races have been canceled, it was announced.

Girls Open Twin Bill Tonight at Ballston

Paul Grace, unbeaten hurler for Jimmy's Grill softballers, will face Bob Plaisted, recent sensation of the Colonial Village ten, tonight at Balston Stadium. The Grill team is Sherwood League champion. In a preliminary, Sholl's Cafeteria Girls meet the Arlington Aces at 8 p. m.

Toast of the Sandlots

RUSSELL WISE.

Though Chief Guyon, Eastern High's wiley baseball coach, doesn't know it yet, the first base position on his 1940 club has already been filled. Master Wise, our 15-year-old hero of the day, has decided it will be his.

Russell will attend Eliot Junior High until February, when he moves over to Eastern to give the White Tide a break. A 100-pound chunk of speed and personality, he's performing now with the Capitol Heights Boys' Club team of the Maryland Suburban League and helping it win games right and left.

Until he came under Manager "Reds" Garrett, of the Heights team, Russell was a pitcher for two years. Garrett decided his left-hand hurling was alright, but his left-hand first-basing was even better. He was moved over. Since then he has capably filled a huge gap at the initial sack and turned in a batting record of .333 in 27 games.

Son of a police officer, young Russell may get be a star at Eastern. Manager Garrett says he's developing faster than most of his young charges. "Classy little ball player," Garrett calls him.

Russell Wins High-Board Diving Title

Baltimorean Retains One Crown, Loses Second at Airport

By Jack Munhall.

Jimmy Russell, a smiling blond lad from the Baltimore Knights of Columbus, retained his high board championship and was barely dethroned as low board titleholder last night as an unusually strong field contested in the second annual open diving meet at the Airport pool.

More than 500 spectators, most of whom remained through the solid three-hour program which saw by actual count 200 dives, matched the diminutive Baltimorean come from behind in the five optional dives to hold his high board crown, but falter temporarily and slip to second behind William Cant, of Penn Athletic Club, in the low board.

Russell, 19-year-old graduate of altimore City College and a prospective freshman at Rutgers in the fall, each time made up considerable ground in the optional dives, compiling fine totals. His preponderance of optional strength in the low board, however, was not sufficient to best the consistent Cant whose victory was well-received by the crowd because he experienced a run of tough luck in the high board competition.

Out in front after the five compulsory dives in the low board, Cant struck the board with his heels on his fourth optional and then, apparently upset by the accident, fared poorly on his final dive and finished fifth.

Shoreham's Bill Tarbett, who holds all but one District title, was a double disappointment, placing sixth in the high board and third in the low board. Not until the optional series of the low board event did Tarbett appear in his best form.

Baltimore had another money winner in the high board in Fred Steiber, former All-American lacrosse player at Maryland, who finished third. Steiber was handicapped by wearing thick tape and a bathing cap over his ears, the drums of which are punctured.

Cant, taller than the average good diver, is 16 years old and will enter the University of Pennsylvania next year to join his Penn A. C. teammate, Bob Logan, who was second in the high board last night.

High board—won by James Russel, Baltimore Knights of Columbus, 109.81; second, Bob Logan, Penn Athletic Club, 109.10; third, Fred Steiber, Baltimore Knights of Columbus, 106.73; fourth, Clayton Fisher, Penn Athletic Club, 103.86; fourth, William Cant, Penn Athletic Club, 103.74; fifth, Bill Tarbett, Shoreham Swimming Club, 103.43; sixth, Don Hyde, unattached, 85.20; seventh, Bert Williams, Shoreham Swimming Club, 84.90; eighth, Francis Reilly, unattached, 70.92.

Low board—won by Cant, 101.17; second, Russell, 98.41; third, Tarbett, 97.97; fourth, Logan, 97.16; fifth, Shaffer, 93.27; sixth, Steiber, 87.43; seventh, Fisher, 84.53; eighth, Hyde, 80.35; ninth, Rambeau, 80.20; tenth, Williams, 78.79; eleventh, Reilly, 75.05; twelfth, Dean, 71.06.

Bensinger Wins Match

By the Associated Press

Culver, Ind., July 31.—The National Junior and Boys' Tennis tournament moved along with military precision today on the Culver Military Academy clay courts here and when darkness fell 59 singles matches had pushed play into the third round of the junior singles and 26 matches had cleared first round singles in the boys' play.

Robert Bensinger, boys' singles entrant from Washington, D. C., moved into the second round with an easy 6—1, 6—3 victory over Raymond Speth, River Forest, Ill.

Favorites ruled in a high-handed manner in both divisions although Art Prochaska, of Hartford, Conn., eighth seeded junior, went three sets before downing William Baumann, of Oak Park, Ill., 6—4, 6—8, 6—2. In the boys', Eighth Seeded Allen Richardson, of St. Louis, went three sets with Bob Stowe, of Kalamazoo, Mich., before winning, 1—6, 6—2, 6—2.

The top-seeded junior, Ted Olewine, of Santa Monica, Calif., crushed Paul Dammerier, of Fort Wayne, Ind., 6—0, 6—2, and Budge Patty, of Los Angeles, the boy favorite, drew a bye.

But two of the seeded juniors played extra matches today, Jack Kramer, of Los Angeles, seeded second, defeated Warren Weeg, of Chicago, 6—3, 6—0, in the first round and then swept through Russ Grossnickel, of Columbus, Miss., 6—1, 6—2, in the second round.

Washington Cards Down Berryville

The Washington Cardinals nosed out the Berryville A. C., 7-6, yesterday at Berryville, Va., in a game that ended in a futile ninth-inning rally in the rain by Berryville. Harry Newby, of the Cards, led the attack with two singles, a double and a tripie.

He drove in three runs and scored two himself. With men on second and third and trailing one run in the ninth, Berryville's Third Baseman Potts popped out in a hard rain.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., July 31.—Of all the romantic by-products of thoroughbred racing, including that breathless pause just before the Kentucky Derby, when the band plays "My Old Kentucky Home," I'll take the sight and sound of a Saratoga yearling sale as the top thrill of them all.

CONSIDINE

The setting, for instance: The great trees, heavy with August, embracing the covered sales ring . . . the bright, sharp lights that flood the place and press against the black face of the night . . . the nervous whinnies and fretful stomping in the long lines of stalls . . . the soft purr of limousines sidling up to the curbs, like fat black cats . . . the quiet assurance of the beautifully gowned women, and the men whose stiff shirtfronts have yet to wilt . . . the limp red flag out in front of the place, on which is written "Auction This Day." . . . the soft sibilating sound of women's skirts, as they take their places near the edge of the ring and the respectful clatter of the lesser lights, come to witness the disposal of a parcel of yearlings from one of the great breeding farms.

One whispers, rather than talks . . . one whispers for a number of reasons, half of them only vaguely sensed . . . it is like a rite, and it awes a person to remember that in this selfsame ring, a certain frightened, long-legged yearling once stood, unhappily surveying the white faces in front of him . . . his sharp ears pricked up as the bidding quickened and his wondrous head turned this way and that, as if to study the men who wanted to own him . . . at last the bidding reached $5,000 and stopped . . . and the big, gangling colt was taken away that night to a new barn, the barn of a man named Riddle . . . he got a name, too . . . they called him Man o' War, because he was as big and as virile and as tough as one of them.

Soon enough, now, a man with the disagreeably sing-song voice of an old-time auctioneer steps up on a little dias that looks down on the ring, and in a voice almost as incoherently nasal as the chant of a tobacco auctioneer he tells the assembly the few salient facts that it already knows—the name of the farm or stable that is disposing of the stock, the fine horses whence these yearlings have sprung, and the advisability of bidding fast, and high.

Lonely and Abandoned-Looking

Then the yearlings . . . known only by numbers, though the auctioneer traces their lineage back down the equine ages, and you hear names that stir up dusty memories . . . Fair Play . . . Sir Gallahad . . . Sweep . . . The Porter . . . Sickle . . . Sun Beau . . . Marcia . . . Marguerite . . . Crusader . . . Top Flight . . . Domino . . . Ben Brush . . . They're lonely and abandoned-looking, these slender young descendants of horsedom's blue-bloods.

They've been kept up long past their bed times, and they long for the comfort and security and privacy of their soft stalls . . . the bright lights after their dim stable, make their big dark eyes roll scandalously, and the strange hush of the audience and the high twang of the auctioneer alarms them . . . The only friend they see is their groom, who stands near them and talks softly to them, and walks them around the ring so that the bidders can cast quick, shrewd glances at their conformation and the soft play of their smooth young muscles . . . Sometimes the yearlings are gripped with overpowering curiosity, like puppies, and they'll go to the retaining fence and nuzzle gingerly at the shirt-front of one of the bidders . . . and the people there will chuckle and someone will say, "Aw, go'wan and buy him," and the man, who may not want this one will blush a little and rub the colt's tender nose.

Then the bidders . . . there is none of this jumping up and shouting "I'll make it twenty-one hundred and fifty." . . . These cool, imperturbable people have an idea what they want before they come, and a good idea as to how much they'll pay for what they want . . . It's difficult to see them do the actual bidding, particularly if the bidding is being done by one of those glum and uncommunicative trainers . . . Sometimes a bidder will raise only an appreciating finger and the hawk-eyed auctioneer, knowing them from previous years, and appreciating their Dun and Bradstreet rating, will translate that finger lifting into a fresh bid, and go off on a sing-song search for a higher offer . . . Sometimes the subtle elevation of a Whitney eyebrow is all that is necessary to close a deal . . . These things are quiet, seemly, as if out of respect to the feelings of the yearlings . . . The annual sale, involving millions, and redirecting the course of thoroughbred racing, is the most well-bred barter in the world.

Occasionally . . . but rarely . . . it is a little grim . . . A new millionaire, or millionairess comes to the sale and takes a bright-eyed, sadistic pleasure in outbidding a Vanderbilt or a Phipps . . . If the nouveau riche bidders are particularly offensive, some blue book bidders, properly primed with Napoleon brandy, will indignantly go up the bidding ladder with the newcomers until they get an aloof kick from their bourbon mates . . . but these toe-to-toe bidding contests don't happen very often to the undisguised disappointment of the auctioneers . . . so you don't think about them very much . . . you think about the yearlings, and the easy gentility of most of the bidders, and the strange and almost eerie pomp and circumstance that attends this most curious auction . . . and in every rolling-eyed yearling you sense the makings of another Man o' War.

Colored Net Meet Set August 5

The city-wide colored tennis championships will be held August 5-13 at the Banneker Recreation Center, Georgia avenue and Euclid street northwest, it was announced yesterday.

The tournament, sponsored by the District of Columbia Recreation Department, will include men's and women's junior and senior divisions. Entry blanks may be obtained at the nearest playground and must be turned in before the dead line, midnight, August 3.

Junior play is for boys up to 15 years, senior for boys 15 to 17, and men's and women's for persons more than 17.

Mrs. Stokes Wins Tourney At Washington

Takes Low Gross With A 39; Mrs. Beech Is Low Net Winner

Mrs. Walter R. Stokes, Indian Spring, won low gross for the visitors in the guest day tourney of the Washington Golf and Country Club women's golf committee yesterday.

The visitors' prizes were awarded for first nine scores and the members' for the back nine, although the field of 60 played over the 18-hole route. The guests also used the round as a test for the Middle Atlantic Women's Championship there in the fall.

Mrs. Stokes had a 39 for gross honors, while Mrs. W. J. Beech, Manor, had low net with 34. Other net winners included Mrs. Jannie, Congressional, 36; Mrs. Jewell, Columbia, and Marion Brown, Manor, 39; Mrs. Hume Peabody, Army and Navy; Mrs. Myron Davy, Congressional, and Mrs. Richard Kreuzburg, Indian Spring, 40; Mrs. Hedrick, Army and Navy, 41, and Mrs. Florence Godfrey, Beaver Dam, 41. Two tied for low putts, Mrs. J. H. Bullock, Indian Spring, and Mrs. Hayes, Congressional, with 14 each.

Mrs. Wilda Martin's gross of 46 was low for the members, while Mrs. Phelps Adams turned in low net of 41 and Sally Whipple had 14 putts for first prize.

Reserve Pitcher Hits Hall of Fame Twice in a Day

Called in to save wear and tear on the catcher, Lewie Ricucci, a second-string pitcher, yesterday pitched a no-hit, no-run doubleheader on the Noyes diamond for the Langley Playground softball team to beat Brookland, 1 to 0 and 5 to 0.

Ricucci, a 15-year-old Tech High student, was called to the mound instead of the regular pitcher, Ben Harold, in the area eliminations for the Community Center Softball League championships.

"Harold is known to be a little wild in his pitching at times and as there is no backboard at Noyes, Ricucci was called in so we wouldn't have to keep the catcher chasing so many balls," Joe St. Lawrence, Langley Playground director, explained.

Lewie allowed only one man to reach first in the first game and only two men in the second. He walked one man in each game. No Brookland reached second in either game, both seven-inning affairs. The Langley ten won the championship last year.

Tall Story Ends Friendly Paul's Streak at Rockingham

Victor Leads From Start To Pay $3.60

Loveday Is Third; Daily Double Brings Talent $99.60 Ticket; 114 Cash Pay-Off

By the Associated Press

Salem, N. H., July 31.—The end of the winning streak of Mrs. F. C. Dunn's Friendly Paul came today at Rockingham Park when Samuel D. Riddle's tall story scored by two lengths over the five-time winner on New England tracks since June 22.

Making his first start in New England, Tall Story, a grandson of Man o'War, led from start to finish of the mile and one-sixteenth Kerry Purse, running the distance in 1:47 4-5. W. F. Mannagh's Short Cake and Friendly Paul were closest to him around the first turn but in the final run for the wire it was Friendly Paul who made the sternest bid through the sloppy going.

Although Tall Story had been made a 4-to-5 choice there were many in the crowd of 6,000 who were cheering for Friendly Paul to score his sixth consecutive triumph. He was the second choice of the bettors.

A length an da half separated Friendly Paul and Mrs. W. R. Fleming's Loveday at the finish, with Short Cake finally winding up fourth in the six horse field.

The double paid $99.60, with 114 tickets sold coupling the Hanna Brothers Fast Express, winner of the first, with J. R. MacComber's side arm, winner of the second.

'They're Off' at Opening of Saratoga's 75th Birthday Party

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Here is the start of the first race yesterday at Saratoga, the Nation's oldest racing course. They are away in a din of jangling bells and pounding hooves that opens the track's Diamond Jubilee. The two-year-olds were led home by Asp, first; Dungeon, second, and Titilator, third, in 1:07 over the 5½ furlongs

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CANWYN, $18.10, $5.70, $3.20; DEBLIN, $5.50, $2.90; FAIR HAIRED, $2.30.

CANWYN had good speed to move to the front early, went into a clear lead rounding the turn, was kept under stout ursing and held DEBLIN safe. The latter was ridden stoutly, recovered after suffering slight interference on the turn and finished gamely. FAIR HAIRED was stoutly handled, went well up from the start and held on well. KIN MAC showed a good effort.

SECOND RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:31. Off at 2:32½. Winner, E. K. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MIRMISS, $61.90, $17.60, $7.00; GOLDEN KEY, $4.60, $2.80; SPARKLING, $2.30.

MIRMISS, going in her best form, worked her way to the leaders after going a half mile, swung to the outside in the stretch drive, finished stoutly and was up in the last 70 yards. GOLDEN KEY, rated forwardly, came with good courage in the final drive while finishing on the inside. SPARKLING forced the early pace and continued willingly to the end. CHOICE GOODS came full of run in the late stages.

DAILY DOUBLE, CANWYN AND MIRMISS, PAID $1,119.60.

THIRD RACE—About 2 miles. Purse, $500; claiming. Steeplechase. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 3:01. Off at 3:03. Winner, Samuel Bartin's b. g. (7), by Sir Barton—Nona Marie. Trained by J. A. Michael. Value to winner, $325; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 4:20 3-5. (16 jumps.)

Two-dollar mutuels paid—JUSTA BUD, $25.10, $6.30, $4.80; ITBAMAID, $3.70, $3.10; TAM O'SHANTER, $5.20.

JUSTA BUD, handled stronger than in previous races, was a keen factor for the first mile, went to the front at the seventh fence, jumped nicely and held ITBAMAID safe in the final drive. The latter, a slow beginner, was steadied until gaining full stride, worked her way forward steadily, made a bad landing at the last jump and weakened. TAM O'SHANTER worked his way forward steadily, jumped well, but could not engage the first two. WORTHFUL raced and jumped well, but was not good enough.

FOURTH RACE—Seven furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:31. Off at 3:33½. Winner, A. R. Cremen's ch. f. (3), by Full Dress—Rocky Day. Trained by R. J. Cremen. Value to winner, $275; second, $75; third, $35; fourth, $15. Time, 0:24, 0:49 2-5, 1:16 2-5, 1:29.

CONBRO	(Divito)	115	6	10	10	10	10	10	10	65.35

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MARTHA'S QUEEN, $33.50, $15.20, $9.80; ALICE DODGE, $6.70, $4.20; LYDE, $4.30.

MARTHA'S QUEEN moved up swiftly midway of the backstretch, was kept on the outside to enter contention at the final bend, closed strong in the stretch drive and was up in the last sixteenth. ALICE DODGE, lacking early speed, improved her position on the outside and finished courageously. LYDE came with good courage in the closing drive. GROUCHNEUR was used up setting the pace and tired under punishment.

FIFTH RACE—Bel Air course. Purse, $500. Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate in chute. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:01. Off at 4:06. Winner, Mrs. J. B. Hatfield's b. g. (3), by Economic—Alpine Girl. Trained by J. B. Hatfield. Value to winner, $325; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 1-5, 0:48 2-5, 0:58.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ALPINE BOY, $17.40, $7.40, $6.90; BLABLAH, $4.30, $3.30; ELTON HEAD, $6.90.

ALPINE BOY, displaying good speed, was close up early, displaced the pacemaker nearing the homestretch, was kept under strong ursing and continued gamely to the close. BLABLAH showed good speed to set the pace, saved a lot of ground all the way and held on gamely. ELTON HEAD weaved his way into contention and came stoutly in the closing drive.

SIXTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate in chute. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:36. Off at 4:37. Winner, Mrs. A. A. Gray's b. f. (4), by Meridian—Limited. Trained by C. Beal. Value to winner, $275, second, $75; third, $35; fourth, $15. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:49, 1:14 1-5, 1:42.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MERIDIAN TIME, $18.20, $6.70, $4.40; ALLEN CAID, $3.70, $2.80; SUN TEMPEST, $3.70.

MERIDIAN TIME, showing remarkable improvement, had speed to race in the first flight, wore the leaders down nearing the homestretch, was ridden hard and drew out steadily. ALLEN CAID bettered his position on the outside, reached contention and finished gamely. SUN TEMPEST could not gain a clear lead and weakened.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate in chute. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:07. Off at 5:11. Winner, Mrs. H. W. Wageley's blk. g. (5), by Boatswain—Chalet. Trained by G. H. Pearce. Value to winner, $275; second, $75; third, $35; fourth, $15. Time, 0:23 4-5, 0:48 4-5, 1:15 2-5, 1:42 2-5.

CLEVER GIRL	(Palumbo)	110	1	2	6½	5²x	9²	10	10	1.90

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BELLTHORN, $8.50, $4.80, $3.10; HEART PLAY, $6.90, $5.50; BEAUFAST, $3.60.

BELLTHORN kept within striking distance of the leaders, rallied strongly when placed to a drive, moved to the front with a rush when reaching the homestretch and then held on gamely to withstand HEART PLAY. The latter, sluggish in the early running, circled her field and finished stoutly in the closing drive. BEAUFAST, close up from the beginning, made strong bids and held on well.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:38. Off at 5:39½. Winner, Miss L. Seay's b. m. (7), by Sea Rip—Daisy Finnegan. Trained by M. Johnson. Value to winner, $275; second, $75; third, $35; fourth, $15. Time, 0:24 3-5, 0:49 1-5, 1:15 4-5, 1:43 2-5, 1:56 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SEA FINN, $12.00, $5.80, $3.80; THE SWAGMAN, $7.30, $4.10; JINNEAL, $3.10.

SEA FINN was sent into the lead at once, was rated nicely while saving ground, responded to a vigorous drive in the stretch run and barely lasted. THE SWAGMAN, reserved off the early pace, bettered his position stoutly when shaken up, engaged the winner and fought it out stubbornly. JINNEAL permitted to drop far back, lost a lot of ground, improved his position and held on stoutly under a hard drive.

Robert C. Jones Is Elected to New York Curb

First Outside Firm Admitted Since New Exchange Policy

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Well known in Washington's financial district for more than 20 years, Robert C. Jones has been elected to membership on the New York Curb Exchange, and announces formation of the partnership of Robert C. Jones & Co., members of that exchange, to take over functions of Robert C. Jones & Co., Inc. Mr. Jones states that business of the old firm will be continued, but the new one will have complete additional facilities to handle business of all securities listed on the New York Curb Exchange.

Mr. Rea, president of the New York Curb Exchange, recently announced the exchange would inaugurate a policy of becoming a national institution, and it is of special interest that Robert C. Jones & Co. is the first firm outside of New York to become members of the organization since its program of expansion was announced.

Mr. Jones, in addition to being a member of the New York Curb, is a member of the Washington Stock Exchange, the Bond Club of Washington, Army and Navy, Army-Navy Country, University, National, Press and Jefferson Island clubs, the Society of the Cincinnati, Scions of Colonial Cavaliers, the societies of Colonial Wars and War of 1812, and Sons of the American Revolution. He served as an officer at the front during the World War and is now a lieutenant colonel in the Officers Reserve Corps. He has been head of his own investment firm for the last eight years.

The new firm will consist of the following partners: Marshall O. Exnicios, Oscar P. Hunt, Edgar R. Rouse and Joseph P. Kreeger. Mr. Exnicios was formerly district sales manager here for Chase Securities Corporation and later, local manager for Chase-Harris Forbes Corporation. In 1933, when Chase-Har-

Rayon Output Advances 62% In First Half

New York, July 31.—The adolescent and steadily growing rayon industry has been taking a spurt, with domestic shipments for the first six months of 1939 amounting to 101,100,000 pounds, a 62 per cent increase over a year ago and a new record for the home industry, according to the Financial World in its forthcoming issue. At the same time, stocks of finished yarn held by rayon producers have been declining steadily and, in June, reached the lowest monthly total since the beginning of 1937, it is pointed out.

"Statistically the rayon industry is doing well," states the magazine. "And it is notable that the story behind the figures has more than one chapter. Improved consumer incomes have speeded retail textile sales, and continuing high prices for silk have accelerated the switch from silk to rayon. And, finally, consistent research and aggressive promotional policies have served to expand the use of rayon, not only in the field of wearing apparel, but also by invading new lines, such as typewriter ribbons, tire fabrics and ship sails.

"This is a pleasing operating picture, but one that still calls for discrimination among prospective purchasers of the rayon shares. Growth in consumption of the synthetic fiber has persistently run ahead of productive capacity. From a long-range point of view this is a favorable factor. Meanwhile it has served as a brake on potential earning power."

Borg-Warner Income Equal to $1.03 Per Share

Chicago, July 31. (AP).—The Borg-Warner Corporation and subsidiaries reported today a consolidated net income of $2,416,050 for the six months ended June 30, compared with a net loss of $633,603 for the like 1938 period.

The earnings were equal to $1.03 a share on 2,336,708 shares of $5 par value common stock outstanding, the report said. The company reduced its holdings of Borg-Warner stock by 34,666 shares April 17, in connection with the purchase of the Pump Engineering Service Corporation, of Cleveland, aviation equipment manufacturer.

Crosley Corp.

Cincinnati, July 31 (AP).—Crosley Corporation and subsidiaries, makers of radio and household equipment, today reported net profit for the quarter ended June 30, of $193,141, equal to 35 cents a share on common stock, compared with $208,916, or 38 cents a common share, in the preceding quarter and $24,266, or 4 cents a share, in the June quarter last year.

Consolidated Edison Co.

New York, July 31 (AP).—The Consolidated Edison Co., of New York, and subsidiaries reported for the three months ended June 30 net income of $7,803,628, equal to 44 cents a common share, compared with $7,681,523, or about 43 cents a share, in the second quarter last year.

For 12 months ended with June net income totaled $34,939,918, equal to $2.08 a share, against $36,166,136, or $2.20 a share, in the preceding year.

Wheat Prices Decline in Late Trading

Early Advance of ¾ Cent Sets New High for the Year

By the Associated Press

Chicago, July 31.—Wheat prices sagged fractionally below the previous close in late trading today, but not until the market had advanced as much as ¾ cent to new highs on the recent recovery movement. Closing prices were ⅛ to ½ lower.

The market undertone was firm during most of the session, aided by strength at Liverpool and reports of heat damage in the United States and Canadian spring wheat belts. Forecasts for showers in Canada later induced liquidation at Winnipeg, and some selling here followed. The market here, however, held fairly firm.

In early dealings prices pushed forward, September contracts reaching 66⅛ cents, up ¾ from Saturday's close and 6⅛ cents above the season's lows established a week ago. December also was up ¾ at 67⅛ and May ½ at 67⅞. September finished ¼ up at 65⅞-66 and December was unchanged at 66¾-66½.

Corn prices moved somewhat erratically over a narrow range, September receiving fair support throughout the session. The close was ¾ off to ½ up, September and December 42¾-42⅝. Oats closed unchanged to ⅜ up; soy beans ¼-⅞ up; rye ½-¾ off; lard about unchanged.

Cotton Futures Up 11 to 15 Points

New York, July 31 (AP).—Cotton futures jumped 11 to 15 points today, closing at the day's best levels.

Lack of offerings contributed as much as anything to the advance, causing comment around the ring. The most favored explanation was the fact that further rains in the East and continued arid soil conditions in the West, where crop estimates are being scaled downward, caused nervousness among traders.

Security Prices Generally Lower With Unfavorable News Developments; Utilities Lead Bond Trading

New York, July 31.—Stocks backed and filled in another dull session and finished fractionally lower, making five of the last seven sessions in which values have been marked down. Whisperings that a new international crisis may develop in the first or second week of August; apprehension that labor difficulties, principally in the automotive and parts industries are spreading, and disappointment over the drop in steelmaking schedules when a further rise had been expected, combined to restrain th longs.

Further pressure on the guilder, reflecting selling based on the Dutch cabinet situation and mark-up in Canadian dollars to a premium over U. S. funds for the first time since early 1938, were features in foreign exchange dealings. The boost in the Canadian rate is attributed in part to heavy receipts of European capital in recent weeks and to increased spending by American vacationists in the Dominion.

In commodity fronts, cotton rose 55 to 75 cents a bale as reports appeared of crop damage in many sections. Wheat started strong and reached new recovery highs but reacted on profit-taking by speculators, closing one-fourth cent higher to one-half cent lower.

Loft Advances

Special issues were once more picked out by share traders for attention, Loft being bid up to the extent of 1¼ points to close above 20. Western Union went into new high ground and joined the most active division. The company's earnings have been improving recently and estimates appeared today to the effect that bond interest may be covered and something left for the stock if improvement continues through the fall and early winter.

United States Rubber, Pathe and Continental Oil of Delaware were the only other active leaders of the day to finish on the plus side. Chrysler, Steel common, General Motors and others of the top 15 were either off fractionally or unchanged. The 100 key stocks ended 0.19 lower, with 668 issues traded, of which 331 declined.

Power Shares Improve

Strength in a few preferred issues of power companies was a bright spot in the market. This could be traced to forecasts of good prospects for common stock financing programs on the part of the utility industry because of the holding company act. Movement in this respect is expected to be started by the offering, scheduled Thursday, of 362,588 common shares of Washington Gas Light Co., the first major distribution of controlling interest in an operating utility as a step in the liquidating of a holding company. If the issue is successful, it is estimated a number of others probably would follow.

Issues of American & Foreign Power, American Power & Light and Electric Power & Light advanced up to 2 points at the best stage of the market, two stocks in the American & Foreign Power group recording new highs.

New highs also were made by A. M. Byers preferred, Distillers Corporation-Seagrams, General Foods and Scott Paper. Best & Co. and Tidewater Associated were down to new lows. Johns-Manville declined 2 points, Standard of New Jersey a point, and du Pont, American Smelting, Bethlehem Steel, Atchison, Westinghouse and United Aircraft were off substantial fractions.

Strikes Send Steel Rate Down

A few of the Wall Street observers guessed that the prolonged strike of tool and die makers in certain automotive plants has been an influence in holding up specifications for steel and, in turn, may have affected the steel ingot rate. At any rate, White Motor and Murray Ohio manufacturing plants at Cleveland were added to several others unable to operate there because of the labor trouble at Fisher Body Co. Unless there is prompt settlement of the difficulties, it is estimated, the 1940 model plans of a number of the motor-car makers may be seriously delayed.

The decline in the steel operating rate from above 60 to just below may be recovered before the end of the week, depending on automotive steel releases, according to estimates in well-posted quarters.

Bond Trading Irregular

Small and irregular changes in listed bond prices were chalked up today, at the end of a quiet session. High-grade investment bonds were neglected, as the market is due to receive sizable fresh supplies in a week or two. Speculative corporation bonds showed more losses than gains, with movements generally too small for the trend to be significant. Foreign dollar bonds were dull and not much changed. Turnover amounted to $4,190,000.

Treasury Issues Decline

Long-term United States Treasury bonds were inclined to drift slightly lower, as the prospect of cash offerings in September begins to affect the market. Intermediate-dated bonds were in modest demand. Guaranteed issues of the farm and home corporations barely were traded. Highly-rated utility, railroad and industrial bonds were maintained at or close to highs of the year.

Medium-priced carrier bonds had a downward tendency, but the changes were small and interspersed with a few advances. Borderline rails lost some of the gains they made last week, when the Chandler measure was signed. Nor were the default rails in much demand. Holding company bonds drifted lower, but convertible bonds held their ground and local tractions tended to improve. Communications issues were somewhat higher.

Foreign Section Is Quiet

Japanese bonds were slightly uncertain in the foreign section, indicating that the shock of the treaty denunciation has been absorbed. German, Italian and Polish bonds hardly moved, while best rated foreigns also were neglected. Panama 5s dipped in the Latin-American default group, and others were uninteresting.

Federal Court Approves B. & O. Interest Rate Cut

Baltimore, July 31 (AP).—The Federal District Court today accepted the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad's application for permission to scale down its bond interest and delay maturities of some securities.

The petition, presented under the Chandler Act passed and signed last week, will be argued September 18. The act permits railroads to readjust their finances without going through reorganization under Section 77 of the Bankruptcy Act.

Judge John J. Parker read a statement for Judge W. Calvin Chesnut, another of the three judges sitting on the case, disclosing that when the petition was filed Friday Judge Chesnut owned several thousand dollars worth of B. & O. securities which would be affected by the plan. The statement said Judge Chesnut had ordered these sold but retained others which would be unaffected.

Henry W. Anderson, attorney for the railroad, said the B. & O. had tried to make a voluntary readjustment in 1930, when interest charges were $35,000,000 a year and $150,000,000 in bonds were falling due. The road was unable to float refunding bonds on a fair basis, Anderson added, so it borrowed $72,000,000 from the RFC. Additional maturities in 1939 and 1940 might force the railroad into bankruptcy, Anderson said, unless the readjustment is approved.

Illinois Central Asks Authority To Buy Own Bonds

By the Associated Press

The Illinois Central Railroad proposed yesterday that instead of making annual cash payments on its loan from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation it be permitted to buy its own bonds and turn them over to RFC as additional collateral.

The road owes RFC $35,170,000. The Interstate Commerce Commission approved extension of the loan to May 31, 1944, on condition that the railroad reduce the principal annually by $351,700.

Asserting the RFC had indicated approval of the plan, the railroad asked the ICC to permit use of all or part of the annual payment to buy bonds of Illinois Central or its subsidiaries on the open market and deposit them with the RFC. The bonds are now selling at less than par and the railroad said the proposal would benefit both itself and the RFC.

180 Concerns Show Earnings Gains of 61%

But Revenues Are Only 1% Over First Period of Year

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 1.—Second quarter earnings of the first 180 large corporations to report totaled $243,398,000, about 61 per cent greater than the same period a year ago, but 1 per cent less than in first quarter, a compilation by press service revealed today.

An earlier summary of the first 70 companies to report second quarter net profits had shown a gain of 6.4 per cent over the previous period and 34 per cent over a year ago.

Earnings of 23 steel makers, despite extensive price cuts, increased to $12,205,000, compared with $11,308,000 in the preceding three months and a deficit of $9,445,372 for the same period last year.

Net profits of 14 public utilities, including American Telephone and Telegraph Co., totaled $65,948,000, down 8 per cent from the first quarter, but 12 per cent greater than a year ago. Twelve chemical companies earned $32,857,000 against $30,416,000 in the previous period and $18,318,000 in the same quarter last year.

Ten railroads operated at a net loss of $2,726,000, compared with a first quarter net profit of $4,878,628. However, the roads showed considerable improvement over the deficit of $6,327,000 in the June quarter a year ago. Second quarter net income of ten oil companies totaled $9,089,841, up 63 per cent from the preceding period, but 30 per cent less than the same quarter last year.

Nine manufacturers of building materials and equipment more than doubled their net profits, earning $6,834,000, compared with $2,976,000 in the first quarter and $3,252,000 a year ago. Net income of ten food companies remained relatively stable, totaling $13,452,000, against $12,799,000 in the preceding three months and $12,653,000 in the second quarter last year.

Commercial Loans Rise $6,000,000

By the Associated Press

The Federal Reserve Board said yesterday that commercial, industrial and agricultural loans for bank gained for the fifth straight week in the seven days ended July 26.

Banks in 101 leading cities reported their business loans increased $6,000,000, to a total of $3,899,000,000. This class of loans increased $9,000,000 in New York City alone, while small decreases occurred elsewhere.

Gypsum Firm Calls Stockholders Meeting

New York, July 31 (AP).—A special meeting of National Gypsum Co. preferred stockholders was called today for August 15 to approve issuance of $5,000,000 in long-term debenture bonds. Proceeds will be used to retire present 4½ per cent debentures due May, 1950, and any bank loans then outstanding, as well as provide additional funds for construction at the company's New York plant.

M. H Baker, president, said the new issue will be sold to underwriters and bear interest not to exceed 4 per cent nor below 3 per cent.

'Big Board' Volume Increases in July

New York, July 31 (AP).—Transactions in the New York Stock Exchange in July totaled 18,065,610 shares compared with 11,963,790 in June, which was the smallest monthly total since August, 1921.

Harrisonburg, Va., July 31.—After a two-month tenure, the Staunton Presidents have been ousted from first place in the Virginia League by the hard-hitting Lynchburg Grays, but it required a double defeat at the hands of the cellar-dwelling Salem-Roanoke Friends to turn the trick. Third-place Harrisonburg also had a hand in the conspiracy, taking three out of four from the Presidents during the week.

The Friends celebrated their first game under their new manager, Paul Johnson, a right-hand hurler from Charleston in the Mid-Atlantic League, by knocking Staunton out of first place. Johnson replaces Bobby Schleicher, who had managed Salem-Roanoke from the first days of the league, but never could get the Friends out of the cellar. Schleicher, a veteran of ten years, has returned to his home at Louisville. Johnson hurled one of the Sunday games which clipped Staunton.

In sliding out of first place, the Presidents also lost two of their leading hurlers, John Brandon, who was bought by the Detroit Tigers and sent to Beaumont in the Texas League, and John Marko, who has been placed on the indefinitely suspended list. The Staunton club, however, still has Lefty Warren Huffman, who continues to lead the league in hitting with a mark of .454, and Cody Burnette, a heavy-hitting second baseman brought in from the Mountain State League. The Staunton club also has Lefty Walter Poland, the league's leading hurler, who rang up his twelfth victory of the season against Harrisonburg Saturday.

Lynchburg turned in a phenomenal week of six wins and two losses, winding up with a ninth-inning, 7-6 victory over Harrisonburg. Lou Cipalla, third baseman, ran wild against his former Turk teammates, hitting two home runs over the left-field fence. He also clouted a homer against Harrisonburg to win the second game of a doubleheader Thursday night. The Turks took the first game. Lynchburg kept in the running Saturday night with a 6-5 victory over Salem-Roanoke in the twelfth when Mickey Scott crashed a home run.

The Grays' big week included three victories over Harrisonburg and Salem-Roanoke, with Marty Weeks and Sherwood Barnes each turning in two victories.

Staunton's disastrous week was made up of three losses to Harrisonburg and two to Salem-Roanoke. The Presidents came through with a double win over the Friends and single victories over Harrisonburg and the Friends.

The Salem - Roanoke Friends maintained their place of nine games behind the leader by three victories and six defeats. The Friends are trailing Harrisonburg by four games while the Turks continue to remain half way between the top and bottom.

The Brighter Side

By Damon Runyon

Granger Lou Holtz, the celebrated comedian, was the speaker of the evening at the weekly meeting of the Broadway Grange in Lindy's Restaurant the other night. He read an interesting paper on the topic, "San Francisco and Her Influence on Night-Club Entertainment."

RUNYON

Before Granger Holtz took the rostrum, a resolution was offered by Granger Edgar Leslie, the song writer, and passed unanimously, condemning Lindy for soundproofing his new room at Fifty-first and Broadway, where the Grange meeting was held.

This soundproofing makes it impossible for voices to be heard all over the room and the actor members of the Grange feel that it is a direct blow at their constitutional rights. The old room adjoining the new, where the Grange usually holds its sessions, has been closed off for alterations and Lindy was requested to immediately furnish the Grange with the blue prints, so that the members may personally supervise the acoustics.

They want no vocal deadenings in their usual quarters, lest the actor attendance diminish. It is silly to expect an actor to talk and not be generally heard. As a matter of fact, members of the Grande not actors, who depend largely on vocal volume for their force of argument, found the soundproofing a terrible handicap the other evening. But let us return to Granger Lou Holtz.

Knows His Business

He is an authority on his topic. He was born in San Francisco and grew up there. His mother ran a little store out near the Presidio catering almost exclusively to Uncle Samuel's soldiers. Granger Holtz broke into his professional career as a kid entertainer around the night clubs of San Francisco.

That was some years after the fire of 1906. Before the fire, San Francisco night life was of world renown, and out of that night life came many famous entertainers. However, Granger Holtz' memory does not go back that far. His paper dealt mainly with a period with which he was more familiar. He fixed that period as around 1911.

He argued that the night clubs of San Francisco, or cafes as they called them then, of the period he had in mind, produced some of the greatest entertainers in history and had a direct influence on the night club entertainment of the country down through the succeeding years to the very present.

He pointed out that many of those San Francisco cafe entertainers of his time had gone on to establish great reputations on the stage and thus carried the manner and traditions of the San Francisco cafes into the very temples of Thespis. Granger Holtz can wax might eloquent when he is deeply stirred.

Lee Lloyd Greatest

He said he was going to deal with them only as cafe entertainers, however. He said he thought the greatest character singer of that, or any other period, was a chap named Lee Lloyd, who has been dead some years.

Some of the listening grangers cried "Hear, hear," at this statement. Lloyd, and a boy named Happy Nulty, of Philadelphia, who died very young, rate high as entertainers in the memories of the old-timers.

Granger Holtz claimed George Whiting and his wife, Sadie Burt, as representative of the cafe entertainers of the San Francisco era he was talking about. Whiting was perhaps the great individual cafe entertainer of his day, whether he worked in San Francisco or at Coney Island, a distinction that later fell to Harry Richman, and is still held by him. Granger Holtz claimed Richman, too, for San Francisco. He said that was where Richman began finding himself as an entertainer.

Hedges Brothers and Jacobson held the speaker's attention for some time. Granger Holtz said that Elvin Hedges was the first man to play what he called a "hot sax," otherwise a saxophone. He said that Bill Bailey, another product of the cafes out by the Golden Gate, was also one of the first performers with a "hot banjo."

And the Old-Timers

The cafes of Granger Holtz' time included Sach's, Tait's, Becker's, Schiff Bros., Dunn Bros., Spider Kelly's, the Portola Louvre, the Crest, the Log Cabin and a raft of others. There was also one called the Breakers in which an entertainer was none other than Benny Davis, then a young boy and afterward to become famous as a song writer with "Margie" and numerous other hits.

The Three White Kuhns, Step, Mellinger and King, Brown and Blyer, Kranzman, Talor and White, Frankie Hale, Mike Bernard, Blossom Seeley, Cliff Friend, Jimmy Morgan, Harry Delson, Frank Fay and Harry Fox were named by Granger Holtz as thoroughly representative of San Francisco cafe entertainment, and he traced their inuence down to night club entertainment of today in style, at least.

He said he could remember when many cafe a entertainer in San Francisco thought he was doing well at $5 per night fixed salary, and with his bit of what the customers tossed into a drum or other receptacle by way of voluntary contribution. Granger Holtz said he might go back to cafe entertaining if they would revive that good old custom.

Cincinnati Looking Forward To Taking Pennant With Ease

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, July 31.—A National League pennant for Cincinnati appeared almost "in the bag" today as the Reds, 12 games in front, looked at the record and figured they could play .500 ball from here out and still stand more than a good chance at the payoff.

And if there was a club among seven capable of holding the current pace-setters to that low mark, it did not show in the July averages.

Despite absence from the line-up most of the month of Ival Goodman, their extra-base slugging outfielder, Bill McKechnie's men went through July at a .759 clip, winning 22 and losing only 7 games to boost their margin 8 full games and their standing 44 points to a 90-game average of .667.

Pirates Only Threat

The only team that approached them in effectiveness was Pittsburgh—and the Pirates had to be content with 19 wins and 11 losses. An average of .633 that lifted them from sixth place on July 1 to a precarious third place rating of .533, where incidentally were tied with Chicago, 13 games off.

Last year's champions, incidentally, played only .485 ball from July 1 when they had undisputed possession of fourth place with a record of 36, 30, .558.

Resting with other clubs today after a record-tying victory stretch of four double-headers numbered among ten straight wins, the Rhinelanders had it figured out this way as they looked ahead to 64 remaining games:

Looks Like Cinch

An even break would give them a season's percentage of .507 on 93 games won and 63 lost, the identical figure by which the St. Louis Cardinals and Cubs won pennants in 1930 and 1929, respectively.

To tie them, the Pirates, with a record of 48 and 42, would have to win 43 of their remaining 68 games; St. Louis, handicapped by mound trouble of sorts, would have to jump from a July average of .500 to win 44 of their next 68 starts; injury-ridden New York, in second place a month ago, must rise from a current .533 to .718 to annex 48 of 64, while the Dodgers, who dribbled through the past 30 days at .494, would have to play .738 ball in order to take 48 of 65.

Boston played .587 ball in winning 17 of 30 contests, but would have to raise the figure to .781 in the final 64.

On Fishing

ACKERMAN

Today is the opening of the black bass season in the tidal waters of Maryland, and it brings the chance anglers have been awaiting — to fish bass waters unrilled and affording a fair hope of limit creels. And, just to remind those who may have forgotten the fact, the creel limit in tidewater is 20 instead of the usual ten for those waters above tide limits.

We have little use for full creels on any species, yet so long as Maryland allows commercial men to seine unrestrained this fine sport fish, we recommend that anglers take their full quota whenever they have use for so many.

Last Friday, with the almost perfect weather conditions and the big marlin schooled up over an area almost 10 miles long, we ventured the prediction that new records would be set over the week-end on the number of fish caught.

Hardly off the press before the report for Thursday was in—a new world record for white marlin brought into any one port in any one day—72. Hardly believable, yet on the following day it was hiked again, to 128, and still again on Saturday, to the almost fantastic figure of 170. Sunday missed out on another record by only 10, the final count being 161.

Two-thirds of the total catch for all of last season taken in five days this season . . . 372 fish . . . an average of 114 a day . . . more than is caught during a whole season on the Florida coast . . . nearly as many as the Cuban commerical fishermen catch in a whole year.

White marlin, that are running far above the average August weight of less than 50 pounds . . . and these are August fish from the way they are schooled. . . . Few run under 60 pounds, many over 70 and 80, and more than a few close to a hundred. The Lev-Lou had one a trifle over 103 pounds on Saturday, second in weight only to the 105-pounder caught by Capt. Crawford Savage several weeks ago. Young Billy Savage, towed out in a small skiff by his father, had three. . . . Ham Brown was with Capt. Chester Gray and eight tagged and released . . . Crawford Chief Executive, . . . Crawford Savage, Lev Raymond and Chester Gray, with their new radiomarine phones, were more than a little help in putting Lieut. Comdr. Jones on the fish . . . an innovation for Ocean City guide boats this year that has proved of inestimable value already. Capt. Leo Droughton on his Sampan (the captain and boat holding the world's record white marlin catch of 163¼ pounds) caught four . . . his party using 6-9 tackle . . . three of these released. Capt. Red Hall on the Cutty Sark averaged almost four fish a day . . . marlin rushing the baits now, until it is seldom a dropback is needed . . . for every marlin boated, there are three on, yet there are 10 strikes for every fish hooked. Cockeyed according to any standards . . . fantastic . . . unbelievable . . . hardly likely ever to happen again after this run is broken, which might not be until mid-September . . . so get in on it.

Jack Hader Back, To Meet Kondylis In Mat Feature

Jack Hader, who hurled himself out of the ring two weeks ago at Turner's arena, has recovered from his wounds and will face George Kondylis, mustachioed Greek, Thursday night at the arena on the card featuring Nanjo Singh versus Rosy Red Ryan.

Singh will demonstrate his "cobra clutch" again and Hader, proud inventor of the "Hader Potato," Pats I, II and III, is said be gnashing his teeth for a chance to challenge the winner, who probably will not be Rosy Red. Rudy Strongberg will waltz with Pete Managoff in the semifinal.

Foreign Markets

By the Associated Press.

London, July 31.—Buyers singled out a handful of issues in the stock market today but the majority of prices quietly shifted downward. British funds lost as much as three-eighths pound. Transatlantics ambled along at slightly lower levels. Industrials were in fair demand, especially motor and steel stocks. Domestic rails suffered sharp setbacks on reports of strike threats. Rubber issues improved but most commodity stocks were pushed back a notch.

Paris—Price changes lacked significance in the bourse today. Opening dealings were comparatively lively but the market soon coasted into a quiet spot. Rentes closed 5 to 85 centimes higher.

Liverpool—Week-end reports of hot and dry weather in North American spring wheat areas attracted active demand for futures today. Closing prices were up ¾ to 1¼ pence. Cotton futures gained 3 to 7 points in response to recent firmness in New York and Bombay markets.

Boston Wool Market

Boston, July 31 (AP).—(U. S. Dept. of Agr.).—Trading in wool on the Boston market was rather light today but quotations were very firm and prices steady to higher than selling prices last week. Several houses were asking 70 cents, scoured basis, for good French combing lengths, fine territory wools, in original bags. Bids for this type of territory wool were around 67 to 68 cents, scoured basis, and buyers were able to secure small quantities occasionally at this level.

Official Notices

COMMISSIONERS OF THE DISTRICT OF Columbia, July 20, 1939. Notice is hereby given that under authority granted in public act No. 307, approved December 15, 1932, authorizing the closing of streets, roads, highways and alleys in the District of Columbia, and in accordance with the provisions of an item authorizing changes in the permanent system of highways contained in D. C. Appropriation Act for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1914 (Public Act No. 423, 62nd Congress), approved March 4, 1913, as amended by an act approved April 30, 1926 (Public Act No. 158, 69th Congress), the Commissioners of the District of Columbia will give a public hearing in the board room of said Commissioners in the District Building on MONDAY, AUGUST 14, 1939, AT 10 O'CLOCK A. M., to interested property owners to determine as to any property rights which may be affected, or as to the equity, justice or advisability of closing the street and alley area, and concerning the proposed changes in the permanent system of highways, all in the District of Columbia, and described as follows: 1. Closing U street between 1st and 2nd streets sw. 2. Closing E street west of Burns street se. and a public alley running south from said B street in Square 5402, and closing part of Ridge road southeast of Anacostia road se., and providing for a dedication for widening Anacostia road and Ridge road southeast, and for other additional street area in Parcels 198/30 and 203/21. 3. Proposed change in the plan of the permanent system of highways affecting property in the Southeast section, bounded on the north by East Capitol street, on the northeast by Burns street, on the south by D street, proposed, and on the southwest by Ridge road, affecting B street, C street, Anacostia road, and other proposed street area in the southeast section, all as shown on said plan. 4. Proposed change in the plan of the permanent system of highways affecting property in the northwest section bounded on the north by Van Ness street, proposed, on the east by Fordham road, on the south by Upton street, proposed, and on the west by the Dalecarlia Reservoir grounds, affecting the location of a proposed street in Parcel 8/13. 5. Proposed change in the plan of the permanent system of highways in the northwest section, affecting Potomac avenue, proposed, from Nebraska avenue to Weaver Place nw., and providing for the elimination of a proposed street, being approximately an extension of Cushing place, from Sherrier place to Potomac avenue, proposed. Maps showing the street and alley area proposed to be closed and the additional land proposed to be acquired by the District of Columbia, and maps showing the proposed changes in the permanent system of highways, are on file in the office of the Surveyor of the District of Columbia, Room 405, District Building (same being known as maps 2237, 2238, 2239, 2240 and 2241), and may be examined by interested parties during business hours prior to the hearing. Said maps will also be displayed at the hearing, and the Commissioners will consider any suggestions or protests concerning the proposed changes and the proposed street and alley closings, as shown on above-mentioned maps. MELVIN C. HAZEN, GEORGE E. ALLEN, DAVID McCOACH, JR., Commissioners of the District of Columbia.

This Is How Richard Roe Solves His Money Worries

Richard Roe is not extraordinarily capable—nor does he make a large salary. He's just an average young man trying to bring up a family on a mighty small income. But he has one valuable bit of information. He knows how and where to borrow money to take advantage of bargains and provide his family with many extra, good things. You can do the same.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

There is an old saying that "one peek is worth two finesses," but if you can play a hand as well as today's declarer you don't need to peek at all.

Frank K. Perkins, director of the Southern New England championships, described the deal to us during one of his free moments at New London recently.

By stripping the hands of surplus cards and throwing an adversary into the lead, declarer timed his play so that the adversary had to prove a finesse for him. "Making the defense play the hand," is what Frank called it. He said the skillfull declarer was Judge Emil Fuchs, of Boston.

The cards and the bidding are shown in today's box. Perkins' description of the play follows:

"South had to lose a diamond, a club and the ace of spades, so the contract depended on playing the cards so that only one spade would be lost. If declarer could guess which adversary had the jack of spades, this would be easy, but South planned the hand so that the enemy had to make the guess for him. He won the first diamond and cashed the ace of trumps.

"The ten of diamonds was taken by East's jack and East returned a club, on which South played the ace. A low trump followed to dummy's king and a diamond was ruffed by South. Then another low trump was led to dummy's seven and the last diamond led and ruffed by South.

"With diamonds stripped from the North-South hands, declarer led his last club. No matter which adversary won the trick, there was no saving lead. If another club was returned, declarer would discard a spade while dummy ruffed; while if a spade was led by either defender, the defense was bound to be held to one spade trick. Actually, West won the last club and played a spade, but dummy ducked and it was 'all over.'"

The Federal Diary

By The Diarist

Jobs: The C. S. C. announces an open competitive examination for the job of master mechanic, forge shop, in the Naval Gun Factory, Navy Yard, Washington. The salary: $13.24 a day. August 14 is the deadline on applications. The age limits are 25 and 48 . . . Retirement ceremonies for Maj. William Hagen Griffin, a senior topographic engineer in the Geological Survey, were held yesterday. At the age of 72, Maj. Griffin concludes an active career that began in 1888. True to the merit system, he advanced step by step from topographic assistant to his present status. Someone writes in, "Throughout his career, Maj. Griffin has enjoyed the esteem of his associates to an unusual degree."

MAJ. GRIFFIN

Mary Whitley, of the Library staff, Coast and Geodetic Survey, Commerce Department, was retired yesterday after 30 years service. She was born July 17, 1874, in Woodville, Southern Maryland, and was appointed in the Survey March 24, 1910. She learned the multiplicity of duties quickly and had an exceptional knowledge of the physical location of technical books and archives. Upon the mere mention of titles, she could immediately locate any desired publication, whether it be "Comptes Rendus" or "Sitzungsberichte der Preussischen Akademie der Wissenschaften."

As a token of esteem, Director Leo Otis Colbert presented her with a purse made up by her friends. Miss Whitley left for the World's Fair.

Junket De Luxe: Off to Panama have gone Deputy Third Assistant Postmaster General Roy M. North, Superintendent of the Stamp Division Robert E. Fellers, Robert C. King, and Roy M. Sheridan, of the Department. Their mission: to oversee the first-day sale of the new Panama commemorative stamp. For the first time in history, a United States battleship, the U. S. S. Charleston, will serve as the first-day postoffice.

Communication from the Maritime Commission's Recreational and Athletic Association: "Considerable interest by members in the horseshoe tournament, scheduled for sometime in August, is being evidenced by the number of calls for horseshoes to be used in practice games. The Commission is holding its second annual midsummer dance on August 18, at the Indian Springs Country Club. About 500 persons will attend. The Commission's Softball Team is leading both the Government League and the Netro Saturday Afternoon League. Our baseball season is over, but we are playing two postponed games, as follows: Today: Tuesday, U. S. M. C. vs. D. G. S., on the East Ellipse, 5 p. m., and on August 3, U. S. M. C. vs. D. G. S., on the South Ellipse at 5 p. m. We have just completed arrangements for the 1939-40 bowling season, starting about the middle of September, at the Chevy Chase Bowling Alleys. The Ladies' League, in which there are eight teams, will bowl Monday nights at 8 o'clock, and the Men's League, in which there are 12 teams, will bowl Tuesday nights at 8 o'clock. Plans are going forward for another golf tournament to be held in the fall and we are planning, also, on holding a tennis tournament sometime in September.

The Federal Employes Playhouse, sponsored by the Agriculture Branch of the N. F. F. E., says that nominations of the "Outstanding Employe of the Month" are increasing daily. Civic, recreational and scholastic work are the elements on which nominations have been made to date. Persons desiring to join one of the playhouse groups composed of a drama group, chorus, dance group and orchestra, can do so by writing Lee H. Shugar, Playhouse director, at room 604, 710 Fourteenth street northwest. There are no restrictions to joining. Also, those desiring to be a member of the quiz team on the next quiz program may communicate with Shugar.

The American Federation of Government Employes, through its president, Charles I. Stengle, yesterday sent this telegram to President Roosevelt:

"After carefully perusing S—1871, commonly known as the Hatch bill, and comparing its benefits with those already in existence in the Civil Service act and rules applicable to competitive civil service employes, the A. F. G. E., in the interest of further extension of the merit system, most urgently requests you to sign the Hatch bill so that it may become a law. This is in keeping with your splendid record in favor of extension of the merit system, and will materially benefit the Government of the United States."

Office Staff Meets

The office staff of Smith's Transfer & Storage Co. met last Thursday evening at the Lord Fairfax Country Club. Speakers were Mrs. Agnes McCall Parker, of the Personality School, and Marvin S. Ely.

NUTS AND JOLTS

PULITZER PRIZE NOVEL

THE YEARLING

By Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings

Chapter 36

LEM CALLED, "What'll you give us, do we go tote Slewfoot out?"

"Half the meat. I figgered on givin' it to you anyways, on account of him tormentin' you so, and Buck comin' to warn me."

M. K. Rawlings

Buck said, "You and me's friends, Penny Baxter. I warn you and you warn me. Git up here behind me and point the way."

Millwheel said, "I don't know as I crave goin' into no swamp today, and clare back to Baxter's Island. I got my mind set on a frolic."

Buck said, "You ain't got no mind. Penny Baxter!"

"What you want?"

"You still figgerin' on goin' to them doin's at Volusia?"

"Could we git the bear out in time to make it, we figgered on it. We're runnin' mighty late."

"Git up here behind me and point the way. Boys, we'll git out the bear and we'll go to the doin's at Volusia. If they don't want us, they kin throw us out—if they kin."

Penny hesitated. Help of any sort from Fort Gates, especially Christmas Eve Day, would be hard to obtain. But the Forresters at the respectable gathering would scarcely be welcome. He decided to let them help him with the big carcass and then trust to luck to send them on their way again. He swung up behind Buck. Millwheel held down a hand for Jody to clamber up behind him.

Penny said, "Who's big-hearted enough to tote my bulldog? He's not bad hurt, but he's done a heap o' running and fightin'."

Gabby picked up Rip and carried him in the saddle in front of him.

Penny said, "Likely the way we come out is as good as any. You kin about see where we come."

The walk that had seemed so long was as nothing on the Forresters' horses. The Baxters remembered that they had not eaten since breakfast. They fished in their knapsacks and munched on Nellie Ginright's bread and meat. Penny in his light-heartedness fell into the spirit of the Forresters' drunkenness.

He shouted back, "Spent the night with an old gal o' mine."

They whooped noisily in applause.

"Only she wasn't there!"

They whooped again.

Jody, at leisure, remembered the jovial air of Nellie Ginright.

He said to Millwheel's back, "Millwheel, if my ma had been somebody else, would I be me, or would I be somebody else, too?"

Millwheel shouted ahead, "Hey, Jody wants a new ma!"

He thumped on Millwheel's back.

"I do not either. I jest want to know."

THE QUESTION was beyond Millwheel, sober. It was only a source of ribald comment, drunk.

Penny said, "Now jest pass that stretch o' low hammock, there's our bear."

They dismounted. Lem spat in disgust.

"You lucky son of a preacher——"

"Any man could come up with him that was willin' to stay with him," Penny said. "Or got mad enough, the way I done, to foller."

There was disagreement as to how to cut up the meat. Buck wanted to take it in whole for effect. Penny struggled to convince him of the impossibility. They talked him at last into agreeing to quarter it as was usually done with a bear of so great size. Each dressed quarter would weigh a hundred pounds. They skinned and quartered it. The hide was left intact, with the great head and clawed feet.

Buck said, "I got to have it that-a-way. I got a idee for some fun."

They had a round of drinks from their bottles. They set back for the road with a bear quarter over each of four horses and the hide over a fifth. It needed a family as big as the Forresters' to provide transportation for old Slewfoot and both Baxters, too. The procession was boisterous. They shouted back and forth to one another.

They reached Baxters Island after dark. The house was barred and shuttered. There was no light, no curl of smoke from the chimney. Ma Baxter had gone on to the river with the horse and wagon. Flag was not about. The Forresters dismounted and drank again and called for water. Penny suggested cooking supper, but their minds were fixed on Volusia. They hung the bear meat in the smokehouse. Buck clung stubbornly to the hide.

Jody found it strange to go around his own closed house in the dark, as though other people lived there and not the Baxters. He went to the back and called, "Flag! Here, feller!" There was no answering thump of small sharp hooves. He called again, fearfully. He turned back to the road. Flag came galloping to him from the forest. Jody clutched him so hard that he broke loose in impatience. The Forresters were shouting to him to hurry. He longed to have Flag follow along with them, but he could not endure it if he should run away again. He led him into the shed and tied him safely and barred the door against marauders. He ran back and opened it and spread out the meal he had been carrying for him in his knapsack. The Forresters thundered at him. He barred the door again and ran and climbed up behind Millwheel with a full heart. He could depend on Flag to come home to him.

WHEN the Forresters burst into harsh-voiced song, like a flock of crows strung out along a fence-row, he sang with them.

Buck sang:

"I went to see my Susan.
She met me at the door.
She told me that I needn't to come
To see her any more."

Millwheel called, "Whoopee! How 'bout it, Lem?"

Buck went on:

"She'd fallen in love with Rufus
Of Andrew Jackson fame.
I looked her in the face and said,
'Good-bye, Miss Susan Jane!'"

"Whoopee!"

Gabby sang a plaintive lament of matrimony, each stanza ending with the refrain:

"I married another,
The devil's grandmother.
I wish I was single again."

The scrub echoed with their shouting.

They reached the river at 9 o'clock and bellowed for the ferry. Across the river, they rode on to the church. It was lighted. Horses and wagons and oxen and carts were tethered to the trees in the yard.

Penny said, "Now we're all right rough-lookin' for church doin's. How about Jody goin' in and fetchin' us out rations?"

But the Forresters had passed beyond persuasion or interference.

Buck said, "Now you-all he'p me git fixed. I'm aimin' to scare the devil right outen that church buildin'."

Lem and Millwheel draped the bear-skin over him. He got down on all fours. He could not get an effect realistic enough to suit him, for the hide, split down the belly, allowed the great heavy head to slide forward. Penny was impatient to be inside and to reassure Ma Baxter, but the Forresters were in no hurry. They donated two or three pairs of boot laces and laced the hide together across Buck's chest. The result was all he could ask for. His bulky back and shoulders filled out the hide almost as completely as the original owner. He gave a trial growl. They crept up the steps of the church. Lem swung the door open to let Buck pass inside, then pulled it back, leaving a crack wide enough for the rest to watch through. It was a moment or two before the visitor was noticed. Buck swayed forward with so true an imitation of a bear's rolling gait that Jody felt the hair crawl on the back of his neck. Buck growled. The assembled company turned. Buck halted. There was an instant of paralysis, then the church emptied through the windows as though a gale of wind had blown a pile of oak leaves.

THE FORRESTERS entered through the door, bellowing with laughter. Penny and Jody followed. Suddenly Penny leaped for Buck and pulled the bear's head away so that the human face was exposed.

"Git outen that thing, Buck. You want to git kilt?"

His eye had caught the glint of a gun-barrel at one of the windows. Buck stood up and the hide slipped to the floor. The frolickers crowded in again. Outside, a woman screaming could not be quieted and two or three children wailed in fear. The first reaction of the gathering was one of anger.

One man called, "This be a purty way to come celebratin' Christmas Eve. Scarin' young uns outen their wits."

But the holiday spirit was strong, and the drunken joviality of the Forresters was infectious. Interest centered in the great bear hide. Here and there a man guffawed and at last the crowd was laughing, and agreeing that Buck had looked more like a bear than old Slewfoot himself. The big bear had done damage for several years. His reputation was known to all.

Penny was surrounded by most of the men and boys. His wife greeted him and bustled away to bring him a plate of food. He sat on the edge of one of the church benches, pushed back against the plain bare walls, and tried to eat. He swallowed a few mouthfuls. Then the men's eager questions enmeshed him and he was away on the flowing stream of his tale of the hunt. The food sat in his lap, uneaten.

Jody looked shyly about in the unaccustomed color and brightness. The small church was decorated with holly and mistletoe and donations of house plants; sultanas and geraniums, aspidistras and coleas. Kerosene lamps shone from brackets along the walls. The ceiling was half hidden with suspended ropes of colored paper, green and red and yellow. At the front, where the rostrum stood for services, a Christmas tree was hung with tinsel and strings of popcorn, figures cut from paper, and a few shining balls that had been a present from the captain of the Mary Draper. Gifts had been exchanged and the wrappings were strewn under the tree. Little girls moved trance-like with new rag dolls clutched to their flat gingham breasts. The boys too young to be engrossed with Penny, played on the floor.

$5,000,000 Ready in Social Disease Fight

Largest Sum Ever Provided for Drive In U. S. Available

An appropriation of $5,000,000, the largest sum ever provided for fighting venereal disease in the United States, will be made available in the next 12 months under the La Follette-Bulwinkle act of 1938, it was announced yesterday by Surgeon General Thomas Parran, of the United States Public Health Service.

Nearly 90 per cent of the sum, or $4,379,250, will be allotted to the States, where it is to be supplemented by State and community appropriations and special grants from foundations and other private sources, Dr. Parran said.

To qualify for the grants the States must meet general requirements in the prevention, treatment and control of venereal diseases, and must provide funds of their own. The Federal grants are not to replace local or private funds already being used, according to the announcement.

Allotment of the money will be on the basis of population, financial need, and extent of the venereal disease problem in each State. The rest of the appropriation, $620,750, will be used for research, laboratory and field demonstrations, and administration, Dr. Parran said.
